With the opening of the second semester we find one change in the personnel of the faculty. Mr. Hurst who has been a teacher and coach in the school for the past two years, resigned to accept the position of instructor in Manual Arts at Morehead Normal School. We regret the loss of Mr. Hurst from our midst, but he has the best wishes of success in the new field he is entering. He merits the promotion he has attained.

Mr. E. B. Stansbury, who is a graduate of the Western Kentucky Teachers' College and a major in Manual Arts, is ably filling the position made vacant. While a student of Western, Mr. Stansbury gave good account of himself in the four major college sports: football, basketball, baseball, and track. In the first two he made "All State" position; in football as end, and basketball as guard. Since his graduation he has been serving in the capacity of teacher and assistant coach in the Greenville High School, Greenville, Kentucky. Under the direction of a man with the ability and experience of Mr. Stansbury we feel that the Green Devils have the promise of a bright future.

December 11, 1934.

Mr. E. B. Stansbury,
College Heights.

My dear Mr. Stansbury:

During this season of good will and cheer, I desire above everything else that you know my heart is warm with gratitude for the services you have rendered College Heights, for the privilege of working with you, and for the earnest and effective cooperation you have given me in the administration of Western. My associations with you, with other co-workers, and with the student-body have been a real inspiration in my life.

I received last year a personal letter from all of my co-workers. It was the best Christmas present I have received in my life. Every one of these letters has been read, has been preserved in a beautiful box made by the Industrial Arts Department, and will be made a part of the records of Western. I am referring to this happy experience now because I have not done so heretofore. I believe in a Christmas that emphasizes spiritual values rather than material values. I am suggesting that in view of the economic conditions existing we put the spiritual gift above the material. This is my personal wish and desire and I believe is in line with the experiences of the hour.

You have done your work well, and I want you to realize that I am thinking of myself only as one of a large number of workers who are trying to make the mission of College Heights effective and that I am not unmindful of the part you and others have played in the development of an institution that I believe is a rich contribution to our country.

If the authorities at Frankfort will agree, I expect to give you a check for your present month's salary before the Christmas holidays, but I cannot make a positive promise until I hear from Frankfort. I am, however, in communication with Frankfort and am trying to bring about this arrangement.

Mrs. Cherry joins me in wishing for you and yours all of those blessings that will contribute to your health and to your material and spiritual advancement.

Let us together challenge any difficulty that may confront College Heights and resolve during these days of economic depression to make it better and more effective than it has ever been before.

Fraternally yours,

TRAFFIC COPS—The job of signalling "stop" and "go" in frays of the state high school basketball tourney and of enforcing other rules of the game is not an easy one. In the top photo above, Edgar McNabb of Bellevue (right) shows how a referee can look worried, while his fellow official, James Deweese of Sedalia, displays less concern. In the lower photo, the two other game officials are shown taking a bit of rest. They are Ed Stansbury (left) and Arnold Winkenhofer, both of Western Kentucky State Teachers College.

2 It's a tough job keeping these tense cagers within the rules when so much is at stake, but these two arbiters handle the job in sterling fashion. They are Arnold Winkenhofer (left) and Ed Stansbury, both of Western Teachers. They alternate with Edgar McNabb, Bellevue, and James Deweese, who also are turning in splendid officiating.

On Stansbury and Winky

It isn't generally known, but Ed Stansbury, assistant coach of basketball, football and baseball at Western State Teachers College, has been granted a leave of absence to work on his doctor's degree in physical education at the University of

Stansbury

Iowa. . . Arnold Winkenhofner, it has been mentioned in Bowling Green columns, will move up from his post at the Training School to a place on the Western staff. Winky coached the 1938 Western freshman team and is liked and respected by students and faculty. . . From another source comes a report that my good friend, Nick Denes, former Corbin High and U. of Tennessee Junior College coach, will take over Winky's duties at the Training School. If Nick is in line I want to add my best wishes to those of thousands of his followers in the two States. Nick is a great fellow, and a thoroughly capable Coach. . . His Corbin teams always drew capacity crowds here, because they played modern, fast, brainy ball.
