English Club Holds Banquet Tonight

MINUTE BIOGRAPHY OF OUR SPONSOR

Dr. Gordon Wilson, head of the English Department and sponsor of the English Club, was born in Calloway County. He received his Life Certificate from Western in 1913 his A. B. from Indiana University in 1915; A. M. from Indiana University in 1924 and his Ph. D. in 1930. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity.

Dr. Wilson began teaching at Western in 1915, has been head of the English Department since 1926 in addition to his work as a teacher of English. Dr. Wilson is nationally known as a student of birds. As an author, he has written "Alexander Wilson: Post-Essayist-Ornithologist," and editor of "Forward Steps in Writing and Thinking English Series," and is co-editor of "A New English Grammar." At present Dr. Wilson writes a folklore column that appears in many newspapers in Kentucky.

STONECIPHER SPEAKS ON PEGASUS IN KENTUCKY

This evening the members of the English Club and their guests are assembled in the main dining room of the Helm Hotel for their annual banquet. Mr. J. Reid Sterrett, teacher of dramatics and speech, is the toastmaster for the occasion.

Miss Sibyl Stonecipher, of the Latin Department, is the featured speaker of the evening. Miss Stonecipher will speak to the club on "Pegasus in Kentucky," based on mythological references taken from old Kentucky newspapers.

Miss Virginia Strohman will sing "Moon Marketing," by Ben Jonson. Miss Strohman will be accompanied by Miss Ida Mitchell Claypool.

The banquet tonight terminates the activity of the English Club for the 1938-39 season.

"They swayed about upon a Rocking Horse and thought it Pegasus"—Keats.

PEGASUS LOSTBy Elinor Wylie

And there I found a gray and ancient ass,
With dull glazed stare, and stubborn wrinkled smile,
Sardonic, mocking my wide-eyed amaze.
A clumsy hulking form in the white place
At odds with the small stable, cleanly, Greek,
The marble manger and the golden oats.
With loathing hands I felt the ass's side,
Solidly real and hairy to the touch.
Then knew I that I dreamed not, but saw truth;
And knowing, wished I still might hope I dreamed.
The door stood wide, I went into the air.
The day was blue and filled with rushing wind,
A day to ride high in the heavens and taste
The glory of the gods who tread the stars.
Up in the mighty purity I saw
A flashing shape that gladly sprang aloft—
My little Pegasus, like a fair white bird
Seeking sun-regions, never to return.
Silently then I turned my steps about,
Entered the stable, saddled the slow ass;
Then on its back I journeyed dustily
Between sun-wilted hedgerows into town.

The Story Of PegasusBONERS*It Don't Make Sense

Why is it professors can wear purple ties

Haphazard haircuts and coats the wrong size.

Trousers too long and the color scheme vile,

Then, flunk me in English because of my style.—Student.

A simile is a pleasant expression on the countenance.

Pegasus was a winged steed of ancient Greek mythology. The earliest legend connects his birth with Medusa, the hideous Gorgon whose head was cut off by Perseus. As the blood from the head trickled into the earth, it produced the winged horse. Minerva caught and tamed him, according to one story, and brought him bridled to Bellerophon. Another story says that the horse often came to drink at the fountain of Pirene, in Corinth, and here Bellerophon, bearing the golden bridle given him by Minerva, found the animal grazing. At the sight of the bridle, Pegasus yielded himself captive and bore his master away to his successful battle with the Chimaera. After throwing the conceited Bellerophon, who aspired to fly to heaven, Pegasus flew away to the skies and was made the constellation that bears his name. Later legends connect Pegasus with Mount Helicon, which started to rise to heaven when charmed by the song of the Muses. Pegasus stopped its ascent by a blow of his hoof, and where he struck the ground, there gushed forth the fountain Hippocrene, sacred to the Muses. The Muses were the goddesses who presided over art and science. In addition to the Muses of dance, comedy, tragedy, there were the Muses of epic poetry, lyric poetry, love poetry, and sacred poetry.

The modern application is that because of the incident of Hippocrene, this winged steed has become associated with poetic inspiration because he was the horse of the Muses, and hence a symbol of poetry. Thus, when a poet begins to write, it is said that "he mounts his Pegasus," the steed on which the poet is carried into the realms of poetic fancy.
