BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Sarah Frances “Sadie” Price was born in 1849 in Evansville, Indiana, the third child of Alexander and Maria (Morehouse) Price. The family moved to Bowling Green, Warren County, Kentucky when Sadie was an infant. During the Civil War the Prices, Union sympathizers, returned to Indiana where Sadie was educated at St. Agnes Hall in Terre Haute. The Prices re-settled in Bowling Green following the war, but the decade of the 1870s saw the death of Sadie’s parents and of her brother Edward. Sadie taught painting and her sister Mary did fancy embroidery to supplement their inheritance. In the late 1880s, despite ill-health, Sadie began her career as an amateur botanist by gathering, cataloging, and illustrating the region’s plants and birds. She organized and taught nature classes from her home. She wrote papers, gave lectures and discovered and named new species of aster, clematis, dogwood, sour grass, and violets. Her collection of plant specimens numbered almost 3,000. Her water color paintings of Warren County plants were awarded a first prize in the Herbarium Sketch Work Exhibit at the Chicago Columbian Exposition of 1893. Before her death she published three books: Flora of Warren County, Kentucky (1893), Fern Collectors Handbook and Herbarium (1896), and The Trees and Shrubs of Kentucky (1898). Sadie died suddenly on 3 July 1903 in Bowling Green and is buried in Fairview Cemetery. Today her extensive collection of specimens and paintings is housed at the Missouri Botanical Gardens in St. Louis. WKU’s Kentucky Library & Museum owns several of her paintings.
