BIOGRAPHY

Vernon White was born on 2 October 1915 to William Grant White and Martha Ellen (Reed) White near White Mills, Hardin County, Kentucky. The family farm was located on the Nolin River and White Mills was approximately four miles away. The Whites had lived in this area since the early decades of the nineteenth century. Vernon, and his seven siblings, assisted his parents with operating the farm. The children were educated at the one-room Lee School in Hardin County and attended secondary school at Lynnvale High School. The family was literate, subscribing to the county newspaper and several popular magazines of the day; they also played word games and held academic competitions in the home. They attended the White Mills Baptist Church.

Vernon graduated from Lynnvale High School in 1935 and continued to help his family at the farm. In 1941 he participated in classes in woodworking offered by the National Defense Training program, and in 1943 he was inducted into the U.S. Army Air Corps attending through the Aircraft Armament School. While in the military, he enjoyed several parts of the country which he had never visited including Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado. He was injured while in service and received his honorable discharge in 1944. His military service opened his eyes to the grandeur and size of the United States and allowed him to attend college on the GI Bill. He enrolled in the University of Louisville in 1947 and received his Bachelor of Science degree in sociology with a minor in psychology in 1951. He then enrolled at the University of Tennessee and received his Masters degree in Sociology in 1953. He immediately accepted a teaching position at Lincoln Memorial University and acted as head of the Sociology Department. The following year he taught social studies at Rogersville High School in Rogersville, Tennessee. Over the next decade he held several teaching and administrative positions at several colleges: University of Tennessee at Martin (1955-1958), Furman University (1958-1960), and Piedmont College (1961-1966). During these years he completed over seventy additional hours of graduate work at the University of Georgia. In 1966 he accepted a faculty position at Western Kentucky University, where he remained until his retirement in 1980. During his career, he was a long time member of both the American Sociological Association and the Southern Sociological Association. In the later part of his career, he was an active member of the Kentucky Archaeological Association, serving as Treasurer from 1971 to 1977 and being elected to the Board of Directors for a three year term in 1978.

White's research interests varied widely. From 1972 to 1977 researched "hominid holes" in Kentucky. A great deal of this research consisted of field work in which he located and then documented these sites in the south central Kentucky area. This research resulted in the publication of a report titled "An Archaeological Survey and Study of Hominid Holes in Kentucky," which was published by the Kentucky Archaeological Association (Bulletin 14 & 15, April 1980). After his retirement, he continued in his research of Kentucky's covered bridges. This resulted in perhaps his best known publication, Covered Bridges: Focus on Kentucky (Kentucky Imprints, 1985). White was interested both in the physical and aesthetic attributes of covered bridges. His last major publication was Grave Covers: Our Cultural Heritage (Kentucky Imprints, 2005) and it examines the various types of grave covers found in Kentucky and other nearby states.

White married Dorothy Bell Moore in 1953 and they had two children Carolyn Marie (White) Bell and Charles Vernon White.

COLLECTION NOTES

The Vernon White Collection consists chiefly of materials related to White's research interests including: covered bridges, hominid holes, and grave covers. Most of this research is limited to Kentucky sites and includes published secondary material, field notes, illustrative material, and drafts of White's books. In addition there is limited information about the White family and about the history of White Mills, Hardin County, Kentucky. The collection also includes a few sociological papers written by White in his early career as well as syllabi for some of the early sociology classes that he taught. A collection of approximately 1800 slides documenting older structures in Kentucky, as well as covered bridges, grave covers, and items related to folk life in the Commonwealth and the Upper South is included in the collection. Poetry, some philosophical notes, and two World War II diaries written by White can also be found in the collection. The World War II diaries are complemented by a scrapbook of photographs documenting White's military service.

In processing, staples, paper clips, metal spiral binders, and metal notebook posts were removed. All materials were placed in acid-free folders and boxes. Pages were also removed from tablets and all notebook and tablet covers as well as news clippings were photocopied on acid-free paper. The slides were placed in acid-free boxes in numerical order according to a classification system that White developed. The slides have not been included in the cumulative item number total for the collection.
