The forum, which is under the direction of Ms. Camilla Collins, a WKU faculty member, is sponsored jointly by the Bowling Green Junior Woman's Club, the Warren County Women's Political Caucus and the Center for Intercultural and Folk Studies at Western.

Funded by a grant from the Kentucky Humanities Council, the seminar will focus on employment opportunities for women, child care and careers and education and will feature a number of speakers from the area including members of the WKU faculty and staff.

The public is invited to attend at no charge, and for those interested, child care facilities are being provided at the Kinder-Care Day Care Center at 1500 Parkside Drive.

Ms. Lucy Dukes is in charge of the Center, and parents are asked to supply children's lunches. Fees for the care will be based on ability to pay.

9 A.M. BAND FEST. Paul L. Garrett Conference Center and Ivan Wilson Center for Fine Arts.
