A Statement from Western's President

Western is proud of her contribution to the war effort through the services of Western men and women in every branch of the armed services and the distinguished part they have played in every major conflict. She is proud of the twelve members of the Western staff serving with the army, the navy, the FBI, and the American Red Cross. She is proud of her part in training one thousand five hundred seventy-eight members of the Army Air Corps. She is proud too of those others trained at the college who are rendering important service in research laboratories, in medicine, in classrooms, in production, and those innumerable pursuits which are also essential to the maintenance of morale and the winning of the war as well as to the preservation of those conditions and ideals for which we fight.

The task of providing educational opportunities for our pre-war large enrollment and the returned veterans will soon confront us. Western in peace as in war will do her part.

Thanks to our great coach, Ed Diddle, and to his able assistant, Ted Hornback, for their part in building men and morale during the present crisis through the great sport, basketball.

PAUL L. GARRETT, President.

Thanks!

The Athletic Committee and the Publicity Department of Western wish to extend a sincere vote of thanks to those who have made this program possible. To our advertisers, and to our patrons, it is our cordial hope that you will be amply repaid in patronage and sports entertainment for the assistance you have given us. Without your cooperation it could not have been published.

The sole objective in creating this publication has been to present a souvenir program to increase the enjoyment of Western's basketball games. There has been no thought of financial profit in the presentation of this book. The rates of advertising herein and the retail price have been set at figures only high enough to insure the cost of publishing.
