COORDINATING MECHANISM FOR EXTENDED-CAMPUS OFFERINGS

I. Extended-Campus Coordinating Districts

A////Desygnation?

Based on institutional missions, program offerings, and locations, each university has been given the responsibility for an extended-campus coordinating district. These districts are shown on the enclosed map. (A county by county listing for each district is also provided.)

II. Designated Service Areas

For extended-campus purposes only, each university and each community college are assigned a Designated Service Area (DSA) and within its assigned area may offer extended-campus courses without prior permission of the Council or of any other institution subject to any limitations specified in A or B below.

A. Universities: The designated service area of each public university is the same as the coordinating district assigned in I., above, and universities may offer courses within their DSAs without prior approval by the Council or another institution within thirty (30) map-miles 1. of any community college without the permission of the affected community college. Further, the university may not offer courses at any level outside of its DSA, except as noted at IV.B.(4)(c) and (d), without the permission of the university responsible for coordinating the district where the course is proposed to be offered.

B. Community Colleges Within UKCCS: The designated service area of community colleges is defined as the area within a thirty (30) map-mile radius of the college, except for Jefferson Community College and Lexington Community College which are limited to the coordinating districts in which they are located. Community colleges may offer lower-division courses within their service areas without the permission of the Council or of the coordinating university. However, the community college must obtain permission from the appropriate coordinating university to offer courses beyond the 30-mile limit. With respect to Louisville, Lexington, and units within the UKCCS where institutional responsibilities overlap, the involved institutions are directed to work out mutually acceptable arrangements using the principles and guidelines in this policy.

^{1.} For the purpose of this policy, the mileage from one location to another must be taken from the Official Kentucky Mileage Map.

III. Coordinating Responsibilities

BA. Responsibilities: To ensure that needs are adequately assessed and appropriate extended-campus instruction provided. it is imperative that the institutions of higher education and the Council on Higher Education cooperate fully to develop a coordinated plan for phek extended-campus offerings each coordinating district. Because of their mission, instructional capability, and familiarity with local needs, the institutions are in the best position to assess the location and scope of extended-campus instruction needed and their capability to provide such instruction.

Specifically, each university is responsible for the following activities within its coordinating district:

- developing a comprehensive plan for extended-campus offerings in its district. The plan must cover all extended-campus offerings in the district and highlight locations where a substantial number of courses is being offered or planned by the coordinating institution, by other institutions, or by both the coordinating and other institutions.
- (2) Ensuring adequate offerings and facilitating the earning of degrees in accordance with identified needs. In identifying needs and planning extended-campus offerings, institutions should work with and seek the advice and assistance of appropriate community groups.
- (3) Making appropriate use of existing resources and expertise of other state-supported institutions in providing needed instruction when the instructional needs exceed the capability of the coordinating metrician university or when lower-division instructional needs within the coordinating district fall within the DSA of a community college.
- (4)//Protinitie to the Council on Nigher Education a report of proposed extended/eadplie activities/

The community colleges in the UKCCS agree to coordinate their out-of-county offerings with the appropriate university, and the universities agree to coordinate their out-of-district offerings with the appropriate coordinating university.

 $\mathcal{C}\underline{B}$. Extended-Campus Coordinators: To perform IY g the coordinating function. each MELIKULIAN. university and each community college within the University of Kentucky Community College System will designate a representative to act Its extended-campus coordinator. The university extended-campus coordinator will be responsible for coordinating extended-campus offerings and acting as the liaison between the district institution, the and the institution institutions, and the institution and the staff of the Council on Higher Education.

Community college coordinators are responsible for informing the appropriate universities of their DSA offerings, for seeking approval of out-of-district offerings, and for assisting in the development of the lower-division portion of the coordinating district's extended-campus plan.

DC. Operating Principle: The designation of coordinating district does not imply that the coordinating mernarmy university must offer all Instruction within its district, nor does it imply that the coordinating district is for any purpose other than extended-campus offerings. objective of a coordinated system of extended-campus offerings is to ensure that needs are met and to make maximum use of resources and expertise presently available within the system. With this principle in mind, each coordinating mathymathen university will offer instruction within instructional its capabilities in accordance with other provisions of this Extended-campus instructional capability is determined by institutional mission, on-campus instruction in a subject area, and sufficient resources to cover extended-campus Instructional requests. Needs and/or requests which cannot be accommodated by the coordinating institution will be referred to another institution after consultation with Council staff.

MIV. Guidelines for Extended-Campus Coordination

Α. Council on Higher Education: In discharging its responsibility for coordinating extended-campus offerings. the delegates certain responsibilities to the Institutions establishing guidelines for the interinstitutional phase of the coordinating process and to recognized consortia by using these mechanisms in lieu of direct coordination. Council staff will continue to assist institutions when requested, will resolve problems, and will review instructional plans in a statewide Statewide coordination will be enhanced through context. increased interinstitutional cooperation.

B. Guidelines for Interinstitutional Coordination

- (1)As extensions of the campus, extended-campus offerings are conditioned by institutional missions. program PHAINHPAGE offerings, the proximity of Institutions. and other Council policies, regional and/or specialized accreditation policies.
- (2) Extended-campus instruction should be provided within each district after it has been determined that on-campus programs are not able to meet student needs for courses or programs.
- (3) In responding to instructional requests and demonstrated needs, institutions will offer extended-campus instruction on the basis of their particular academic competencies as determined by their missions, approved programs, and on-campus instructional activities.
 - offer instruction within its instructional capability. However, universities may not offer lower-division instruction within a thirty (30) map-mile radius of a community college (excluding Jefferson Community College and Lexington Community College) without the approval of the appropriate community college.

(a) Associate Degree Offerings! Τø ephiply. WHY Recommendation 13 of the Community College Stady/ legnanerea in 1977) e Lower-Division Offerings: Community colleges within the University of Kentucky Community College System are restricted to their home counties a thirty (30) map-mile radius of the college in offering extended-campus instruction, and four-year public universities may not offer lower division instruction within thirty (30) map- miles of a community college with the exception of the Løngetine Lexington and TANLINGS SHANATHOUS Jefferson Community College and Lexington Community College. Any proposed exceptions Íø Recommendation 13 to this principle regarding lower-division extended-campus offerings by individual community colleges or universities must be approved by the appropriate coordinating mechanism before publicizing such offerings. All exceptions must be justified annually comprehensive plan is developed. By virtue KRS 164.295 the four-year universities are restricted from offering community college type programs outside their own community. For purposes of this mechanism community is defined as the county in which the institution is located and community college-type programs are defined as associate degree programs. Any proposed exceptions to this restriction must be thoroughly justified, and submitted to the Council as part of the university's plan for its coordinating district. eddramated with the edministry ediffee if within thirty which of a community college, and stall digit to dublyching such approved by CHE offerthes/ AW exceptions white be mstriked * ANNUMBY!

(b) Baccalanteare Degree Upper-Division Universities are geographically dispersed Offerings: throughout the state and generally offer a wide variety of baccalaureate programs. Due to the variety of programs offered, many programs are readily accessible several on-campus sites. and institutions should exercise discretion in proposing such offerings at extended-campus locations. However, some programs are available at a limited number of institutions or at a single institution. Extended-campus instruction in these areas will be the responsibility of the institution(s) presently offering the program(s) on its campus, but this instruction must be coordinated by the appropriate coordinating mechanism. Campus-based instruction is viewed as a prerequisite for all extended-campus offerings, and all offerings must be consistent with other provisions of this coordinating mechanism, e.g., the restriction on lower division offerings within thirty miles of a community college with the exception of the Louisville, Lexington, and similar situations.

(c) Masker's Degree Graduate Offerings: extended-campus offerings Historically, master's level have focused on teacher education, with limited offerings in business. The offering of instruction at the master's level should be thoroughly reviewed by the institution, and this review should emphasize the potential size of the program, faculty and support service requirements, its impact on campus-based programs, and the assurance of meeting qualitative standards.

(d) Døckøfak Døgfød Offørlingsl

As the principal graduate degree granting institution and as the principal institution for statewide instruction, the University of Kentucky has statewide responsibility for assessing the need and providing doctoral-level offerings, except in Jefferson County, for those academic areas where the University of Louisville offers doctoral programs.

Interinstitutional cooperation is encouraged and will be administered by the University of Kentucky.

- (ød) Professional Degree Offerings: The University of Kentucky and the University of Louisville share statewide missions in medicine, dentistry, Ww/ and urban affairs*. and extended-campus offerings in these areas will be coordinated by the two institutions. Institutions with law schools will coordinate extended-campus offerings in law.
- (fe) Continuing education (nondegree credit) activities should be coordinated but are specifically excluded from this coordinating mechanism.
- ($5) Coordinating institutions are expected to use recognized consortium arrangements to achieve desired coordination.
- (76) In countles where private Institutions are located, Ccoordination of extended-campus offerings with those private institutions ls encouraged And/ m rphylies where private Wested/ public mathations are alterdarked from edurate/programs pliered by private mathylymas.

(87) Instruction intended for advanced high school students, including dual credit, must be scheduled after normal school hours so as not to interfere with the secondary programs and must be consistent with this extended-campus mechanism as well as the policy on dual credit offerings.

C. Reports: Extended-campus offerings and enrollments will be taken from institutional enrollment reports, and a composite report will be compiled and distributed to each institution.

The definitions and procedures in the Reporting Guidelines for State Supported Institutions must be followed in reporting and coding courses.

V. Transition Measures

A. It is the intent of the Council to incorporate as many principles as possible from Policy D - "Substantive Change Involving Credit Courses and Certificate or Degree Programs Offered at Extended Locations" (SACS) in its policy on extended-campus offerings. This coincidence of use should simplify the administration and coordination of extended-campus activities and builds on requirements and procedures that are already in existence. Annual institutional profiles, notifications, and other correspondence with SACS concerning extended-campus offerings must be copied to the Council.

- B. Semester reports on all anticipated extended-campus offerings must be submitted to the Council prior to the beginning of each semester until a district plan is developed. Once developed, the plan will replace these reports.

- C. During the 1988-89 academic year, it is agreed that joint university-community college cooperative programs at selected sites shall be encouraged. Any other potential extended-campus centers, branches, or focused sites will not be established by the institutions or recognized by the Council during this period.
