BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Joy Bale Boone was born Sylvia Joy Field on 29 October 1912 in Chicago, Illinois to parents William Sydney Field and Edith (Overington) Field. She attended the Chicago Latin School and the Roycemore School for Girls in Evanston, Illinois. In 1934, she married Shelby Garnett Bale, an Elizabethtown, Kentucky physician, and became the mother of six children. Dr. Bale died in 1972. Joy married attorney George Street Boone of Elkton, Kentucky in 1975.

Boone worked for a short time as a journalist before her marriage, but began her literary career in 1945 writing reviews for the Louisville Courier-Journal. She edited two collections of Contemporary Kentucky Poets in 1964 and 1967. In 1964, she founded the poetry magazine Approaches and served as its editor for eleven years. She also served on the editorial board of Kentucky Poetry Review. Boone's long narrative poem The Storm's Eye: A Narrative in Verse Celebrating Cassius Marcellus Clay, Man of Freedom, 1810-1903 was published in 1974 by the Kentucky Poetry Press, and was reprinted in the tenth anniversary issue of Approaches. Two collections of poetry, Never Less Than Love and Even Without Love were published in 1972 and 1992, respectively. Individual poems have appeared in numerous poetry journals.

For several years, Boone served as president of Friends of Kentucky Libraries. She received the Distinguished Kentuckian Award from Kentucky Educational Television in 1974, the Sullivan Award from the University of Kentucky in 1969, and an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from WKU in May 1999. Boone was Kentucky Poet Laureate from 1997-1999. Her years of community service included work with mental health and medical associations. Joy Bale Boone died on 1 October 2002.

On 27 February 1986, poet, novelist and essayist Robert Penn Warren (1905-1989) was designated the nation's first Poet Laureate. In January 1987, Western Kentucky University (WKU) President Kern Alexander appointed Boone, then an adjunct professor, as chair of a committee to develop a plan for acquiring Warren's boyhood home in Guthrie, Kentucky and moving it to WKU's campus for use as a research and educational center. Initially reluctant to endorse the project, Robert Penn Warren gave his support after a meeting with President Alexander. Boone and the Robert Penn Warren Birthplace Committee began raising funds, but the plan quickly drew opposition from citizens in Guthrie and Todd County. With the support of local government, an independent Committee for the Preservation of the Robert Penn Warren

Birthplace in Todd County raised alternate funding and acquired the house in spring 1987 for restoration as a museum.

Though surprised and disappointed at the loss of the house, Boone and the Committee for the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies resolved to select another campus location and apply the funds raised to other purposes in Warren's honor. Established in WKU's Cherry Hall, the Center was formally dedicated on 24 April 1988. In addition to sponsoring a four-year scholarship, a fellowship and seminars, the Center holds an annual symposium in April, the month of Warren's birth. In 1992, Eleanor Warren donated her late husband's personal library to the Center together with some of his study furniture, medals and awards. Comprising more than 2,200 rare books, the Robert Penn Warren Library was formally dedicated in April 1994 and is housed in the Kentucky Building at WKU.

Despite vision and heart problems, Joy Bale Boone served as chair of the Committee for the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies until 1998. Afterward, she continued to act as a liaison between the Committee and the Robert Penn Warren Center Advisory Group.

COLLECTION NOTE

This collection consists chiefly of correspondence and papers of Joy Bale Boone relating to her work as chair of the Committee for the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies at WKU. Also included are interviews with Boone in both audio and video format.

Box 1 contains biographical data on Joy Bale Boone (Folder 2) as well as her collected biographical data on Robert Penn Warren (Folder 3), clippings from newspapers and other publications relating to his life and career (Folders 4, 5) and material relating to Warren's wife Eleanor, daughter Rosanna, and niece Tommie Lou Frey (Folder 6). Copies of a few collected writings of Robert Penn Warren (Folder 7) include early compositions for his high school literary magazine, letters to his Russian translator with news of his work, and his lengthy 1980 New Yorker perspective on Jefferson Davis. Articles, memorial poems, and scholarly papers about Robert Penn Warren (Folder 8) include a former student's reminiscence of Warren when he was a professor at the University of Minnesota.

Box 2 contains Joy Bale Boone's correspondence (and correspondence of others copied to her) relating to the Committee for the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies from 1987-1993. Common topics include Committee membership, financial matters, development of educational materials, and planning for the annual symposium; letter writers also include news of their personal and professional lives. Correspondence from 1983-1987 (Folder 1) covers the failed effort to acquire Warren's boyhood home in Guthrie, Kentucky and move the structure to WKU's campus, and the alternate plan for the Center; included is correspondence about the project with Robert Penn Warren, opponents, supporters and other Committee members. Correspondence from 1988 (Folder 2) includes praise for the Center dedication and Boone's letter to new WKU president Thomas Meredith recommending the formation of a Robert Penn Warren Center Advisory Group; the correspondence also begins to show the ongoing familiarity and close working relationship between Boone and Committee vice-chair Mary Ellen Miller (sometimes nicknamed "Melon") of WKU's English Department. Correspondence from 1989 (Folder 3) covers the recruitment of members for the first Advisory Group and solicitation of donors; also included is material relating to Boone's service on the WKYU-FM Community Advisory Committee at WKU. Correspondence from 1990 (Folder 4) marks the beginning of an association with the Robert Penn Warren Circle, a separate scholarly society that held its first meeting at the Center's April 1991 symposium. Correspondence from 1991 (Folder 5) includes praise for the April symposium, which included a tour of "Benfolly," the home of Fugitive author Allen Tate, and a social evening (which became customary) at Boone's Elkton home "Halcyon." Boone also writes Advisory Group chair and Warren bibliographer James "Bo" Grimshaw regarding distribution of the Center's publication, A Guide to Warren Country. Correspondence from 1992 (Folders 6, 7) covers that year's symposium, attended by Warren's widow Eleanor, his daughter Rosanna, his authorized biographer Joseph Blotner, his Russian translator Viktor Golyshev, and other Warren scholars; poet Charles Semon's gift of exclusive rights to his "Poem for Robert Penn Warren"; and the donation of Warren's personal library to the Center. Correspondence from 1993 (Folders 8, 9) includes arrangements for an additional gift of books from the Warren family, publicity and educational activities, formal documentation of the relationship between the Center and WKU, plans for a Robert Penn Warren scholarly journal, and the designation of the Robert Penn Warren Library as a literary landmark by Friends of Libraries U.S.A.

Box 3 contains Joy Bale Boone's correspondence (and correspondence of others copied to her) relating to the Committee for the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies from 1994-2000, as well as miscellaneous papers. Correspondence from 1994 (Folder 1) covers recruitment for the Committee and Advisory Group, future planning and public relations, and Eleanor Warren's health. Correspondence from 1995 (Folder 2) mainly concerns the establishment of the Warren/Brooks Award for Outstanding Literary Criticism, suggested in 1992 by Raymond Betts of the Advisory Group and named after Robert Penn Warren and Cleanth Brooks; a production by the Horse Cave Theatre of Warren's novel All the King's Men; and establishment of the first editorial board for the Warren scholarly journal. Correspondence from 1996 (Folder 3) covers arrangements for the first Warren/Brooks Award at the April symposium, the loan of Robert Penn Warren items for an exhibit at the Atlanta History Center in conjunction with the 1996 Olympics, and the death of Eleanor Warren. Correspondence from 1997 (Folder 4) marks the publication of Joseph Blotner's biography of Robert Penn Warren and his donation of his archive to the Center, Boone's appointment as Kentucky Poet Laureate, and a revised proposal for a Warren scholarly journal. This year also marks revisions in the structure of the Committee, in particular Mary Ellen Miller's assumption of a university-appointed coordinator position, in light of WKU's increasing role in financing and Boone's desire to relinquish the chair. Correspondence from 1998 (Folder 5) covers the Warren/Brooks Award, recruitment for the Advisory Group, and the conflict between the Center's April symposium and a meeting of the Robert Penn Warren Circle in Clarksville, Tennessee. Correspondence from 1999-2000 (Folders 6, 7) reflect Boone's reduced role on the Committee; included are an information request relating to the creation of a web page for the Center and a donation offer from the son of the Belorussian producer of a film version of All the King's Men. Miscellaneous undated correspondence (Folder 8) includes invitations, thank-you notes, and a few undated letters to Boone from Mary Ellen Miller. Miscellaneous papers (Folder 9) include recipes and brief notes about Robert Penn Warren, possibly from an interview. Boone's miscellaneous writings (Folder 10) include reviews, essays, speeches, and a poem written on the occasion of Eleanor Warren's death. Material on Fugitive author Allen Tate collected by Boone (Folder 11) includes copies of letters disclosing Tate's views on race, a newspaper article, and a friend's reminiscence. Also in this box are photographs: of the 1988 dedication of the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies at WKU (Folder 12); Warren's memorial at Guthrie Cemetery (Folder 13); Center Advisory Group members (Folder 14); Joy Bale Boone (Folder 15); and social gatherings during the Center's April 1999 Warren Symposium (Folder 16).

Box 4 contains Boone's copies of the records of the Committee for the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies. Included are bylaws, meeting agendas and minutes of both the Committee and Advisory Group, membership lists for the Committee and Advisory Group, memoranda and reports. Minutes for 1987 (Folder 1) also include meetings of the "house committee" that attempted to acquire Warren's home in Guthrie, Kentucky and move it to WKU's campus. Also in this box (Folder 16) is a proposal, correspondence, planning documents and subcommittee notes relating to the Robert Penn Warren scholarly journal.

Box 5 contains items relating to specific aspects of the Center's activities, and to the Robert Penn Warren Circle. Materials relating to the Committee's attempt to acquire Warren's boyhood home (Folder 1) include clippings and correspondence as well as flyers and brochures produced by the competing Committee for the Preservation of the Robert Penn Warren Birthplace in Todd County. An Agreement of Perpetuity (Folder 2) sets out the relationship between the Center and WKU. Center dedication material (Folder 3) includes the invitation, program, and Boone's remarks. Information about the Center (Folders 4, 5) includes Boone's descriptive remarks, brochures and articles, and A Guide to Warren Country. Material on acquisitions for the Center (Folder 6) includes correspondence relating to Eleanor Warren's donation of Warren's personal library, and particulars of donations of books and papers from his children, Rosanna and Gabriel Warren. Material on Center-sponsored events (Folders 7-10) includes flyers, symposium and other programs, and proposals and correspondence relating to the Horse Cave Theatre's production (and a proposed television production) of All the King's Men; also included (Folder 11) are brochures and programs for Warren events held elsewhere. Material regarding fundraising for acquiring Warren's Guthrie home and subsequently for the Center (Folder 12) includes correspondence, solicitations, and subcommittee minutes. Financial data (Folder 13) consists mostly of treasurer's reports, and donor records (Folder 14) include lists, receipts and thank-you letters. Information regarding Center-sponsored scholarships, fellowships and awards (Folder 15) includes correspondence, announcements, and planning documents for the Warren/Brooks Award. Materials on the Robert Penn Warren Circle consist of newsletters (Folder 16), meeting programs, membership lists and correspondence (Folder 17). The correspondence relates mostly to the Circle's formation and to joint programming with the Center, but Boone shows her concern with maintaining public identities for the two groups that are distinct from each other as well as from the Committee for the Preservation of the Robert Penn Warren Birthplace in Todd County.

Box 6 contains audio and video material by or about Joy Bale Boone. An audiocassette (Folder 1) records her 1998 telephone interview with Glasgow, Kentucky radio station WGGC about her Poet Laureate designation. The remainder are videotaped interviews in which Boone and others discuss her life, poetry and creative processes, as well as her involvement in the Center for Robert Penn Warren Studies. They consist of a 1994 interview (Folder 2) of Boone and her son Shelby Bale conducted by Loretta (Martin) Murrey; a lengthy interview of Boone, probably in 1995 (Folders 3, 4); 1995 interviews (Folder 5) of Jim Wayne Miller, Mary Ellen Miller, and Wade Hall, Boone's successor as editor of Approaches, about Boone and her work; a continuation of Wade Hall's interview, and an interview of Shelby Bale (Folder 6); and "A Woman Named Joy," (Folder 7), a 1997 biographical documentary produced by WKYU-TV and featuring an interview of Boone with appearances by Jim Wayne Miller, Mary Ellen Miller, Shelby Bale, and Wade Hall.
