Exciting Developments for Counseling and Student Affairs: CACREP Accreditation and a new Family Counseling Clinic

Bill Greenwalt, Associate Professor of Counseling in the Department of Counseling and Student Affairs, has high expectations for the growth and development of his Department's programs. Two graduate programs in the Counseling and Student Affairs Department recently earned national accreditation. The Mental Health program and the Marriage and Family Therapy program, both developed in the early 90s, received an eight-year accreditation from the Council for Accreditation for Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP). The eight-year accreditation, requiring two years of self-study, additional faculty, and minor curriculum modifications, will serve a number of departmental goals, including increasing student enrollment, improving the marketability of graduates, and attracting national visibility in the mental health and marriage and family fields. According to Greenwalt, the accreditation site team was impressed by the self-study the Department completed in preparation for the accreditation visit; afterwards, the accrediting board voted to award the programs an eight-year accreditation, which is a rare occurrence.

According to Greenwalt, "Kentucky has a shortage of all mental health practitioners. Approximately 50 counties in Kentucky currently do not have a licensed mental health practitioner of any kind. We anticipate increased enrollment in our programs because preference is given to students from CACREP accredited programs in some hiring and doctoral program admission decisions."

In the Mental Health Counseling program, students complete the educational requirements to become licensed professional clinical counselors. They can specialize in working with children, adolescents, the elderly, persons with substance abuse problems, and combinations of these areas. The Marriage and Family Therapy program offers students the opportunity to complete the educational requirements to become licensed professional clinical counselors and/or licensed marriage and family therapists. This program is the only program in the state that fulfills the educational requirements for dual licensure in Professional Counseling and Marriage and Family Therapy.

Students from both programs will be able to complete part of their practicum or internship experiences in the Family Counseling Clinic which will be located in the Clinical Education Complex planned for operation in January 2006. The Family Counseling Clinic will provide family services to clients of other clinics within the complex, including the Kelly Autism Center, the Early Childhood Development Center, Communications Disorders Clinic, and the Acquired Brain Injury Clinic. Services will also be provided to couples and families in the community whose mental health services are not covered by insurance.

"The Family Counseling Clinic will provide the community much needed counseling services and provide students with a unique learning environment under the close supervision of experienced counselors on the faculty of the Counseling and Student Affairs Department," says Greenwalt.

Greenwalt believes that the recent CACREP accreditation coupled with the new family counseling center will move the Mental Health and Marriage and Family Counseling programs into the national scene in the areas of student engagement and faculty excellence. "With both accreditation and the CEC coming together at the same time for our programs, we think we will move from attracting students locally to attracting students at a national level. We will become more visible nationally and have greater impact within the field of counseling. We will be able to do research at the CEC and establish our program as a program of distinction."

As Western approaches its centennial year, we have much to be proud of in the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences. Historically, we have educated a large number of candidates for the education profession; this year alone we forwarded 899 recommendations for certification or rank change! Elementary Education continues to be the largest undergraduate major, with Psychology being the fifth largest. Our Military Science program continues to meet its mission, with 15 cadets being commissioned as second lieutenants this year. Most important of all, we have many examples of the success of our graduates in their chosen careers: Psychology and Student Affairs graduate students have gained acceptance into some of the finest doctoral programs in the nation, numerous former cadets serve our country with honor and distinction, and every day teachers and other education professionals positively impact the lives of thousands of individuals. We are proud of the contributions that you, the graduates of the College, have made and continue to make to your local communities as well as to the global community in which we all live.

From the Dean

Our commitment to meet the needs of our students and varied constituent groups has led to a variety of efforts to enhance our programs and delivery systems. As our programs continue to grow, instruction has moved from face-to-face both on and off-campus, to ITV, to online, to mixed delivery, and now some programs are delivered totally through web-based instruction. All classrooms in Tate Page Hall are connected to the world through the Internet, and this fall we will begin providing instruction to teacher candidates on the use of a wireless laptop system. In addition, as part of our efforts to upgrade instructional technology throughout the College's programs, we are installing interactive White Boards in a number of classrooms. As we strive to realize our vision that our graduates will be the employees of choice in their respective careers, we will maintain our focus on enhancing the instructional experiences provided to all students and connecting those experiences to real-world opportunities.

Part of the challenge of preparing graduates for the continually changing world involves redesigning current programs and developing new ones to meet the ever changing needs of our constituent groups. We have recently revised our Literacy program to better prepare teachers for the demands of the classroom, and Teacher Education faculty members and practitioners have been working to develop a new masters program that will better equip teachers to respond to accountability pressures. Finally, in a first for Western, we are in the process of conducting a needs assessment regarding a doctoral program in Educational Leadership, a program that will offer foci on school leaders, teacher leaders, higher education leadership, and organizational leadership. As we begin our second hundred years of service to citizens of the Commonwealth and the global community, we welcome the opportunity to serve new constituent groups as well as our established ones.

Your continued support of programs in the College is greatly appreciated.

Watch us Grow! CEBS on new building list

WKU president Gary Ransdell announced that the University will seek funding from the state for a new College of Education and Behavioral Sciences building in the 2006 budget year. According to Ransdell, groundbreaking for the new building will be in 2007, and the building should be open by 2009. The location of the new building, at an estimated cost of $32 million, has not been finalized.

Clinical Education Center Groundbreaking

Groundbreaking and demolition for the new interdisciplinary Clinical Education Complex, located at 14th and Adams Streets, took place this spring. With gifts from the Raymond B. Preston Family Foundation, John and Linda Kelly, and Danny and Vicki Renshaw of Bowling Green, the Center will provide services to children and adults in Communication Disorders, Acquired Brain Injury, Autism, Early Childhood Development, and Family Counseling.

STUDENT ENGAGEMENT HIGHLIGHTS

Kelly Burch-Regan, Counseling and Student Affairs, is actively involved in student engagement initiatives in the Department. Graduate students in Counseling are currently working with undergraduate students participating in Western's Peer Mentoring program. Peer Mentors work with incoming freshmen as an informational and support resource to help them successfully make the transition to college life. Burch-Regan also recently secured a grant for one counseling student to attend the American Counseling Association's Legislative and Advocacy Training Institute this spring. In addition, two of her students were selected to present at the national conference of American Counseling Association for the International Association of Addictions and Offender Counselors' sponsored program entitled, "Carousel of Best Practices in Addictions and Offender Counseling."

As part of the Kentucky Reading Project, graduate students in the Literacy program participated in the Annual Share Fair in Louisville this March. The following students presented their research this year:

Kristie Broaddus, Covering All Bases with Literacy

Amy Haycraft, Jenny Day, Sarah Velotta, Spotlight on Comprehension

Amy Noble, Jennifer Ogles, April Marlin, Reading Comprehension Strategies

Jackie Ritchie, Amy Hurst, Jennifer Hash, Get Hooked, Read a Good Book!

Development News

In a recent study by the Opinion Dynamics Corporation, 350 alumni from colleges and universities nationwide were asked which of nine priorities they considered most important for U.S. higher education institutions.

Nearly half of those surveyed cited “making college more affordable” as the most pressing need. “Improving academic programs” was the only other issue to resonate with larger numbers of alumni, with 22 percent making it their first choice.

The other seven issues presented in the survey were: improving technology on campus (chosen by 4%); faculty recruitment and retention (4 percent); improving institution’s reputation/image/visibility (3 percent); attracting a more diverse student body (3 percent); renovating/modernizing campus buildings (3 percent); improving research capabilities (1 percent); and improving campus life (1 percent).

So, I am curious. What priorities do you see as most important to WKU? Do you agree with one from this list? Are there others not mentioned that are important to you?

Email me (karl.miller@wku.edu) with your top three priorities and please add why you list the ones you choose. The first three respondents to my query will receive a special gift from WKU and the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences, and everyone who responds will receive a Big Red pin and a WKU pen, so make sure to add your snail mail address to your email message.

I look forward to hearing from you, and I’ll make sure to share the results in a future newsletter.

With WKU Spirit, Karl

Karl Miller recently co-presented at the 2005 Strategies for Change: Kentucky’s Ethnic Minorities in Higher Education Conference, March 28-29 in Louisville. The title of the presentation was: “Providing Access Means Reaching Out” and dealt with what colleges and universities can do to better recruit ethnic minority populations.
