SHORT SKETCH OF RENO FAMILY

A Family in Muhlenberg County Who are Slowly Becoming Extinct

We give in this article a short biographical sketch of the Reno family in Muhlenberg county, who are slowly becoming extinct. The original name, Reno, is said to be Renault; There was one Lewis Reno, the ancestor and progenitor of the Reno family of Muhlenberg County, is said to have been born in France, and emigrated to Pennsylvania and then to Virginia, and then came to Nelson County, Ky., during the year 1790; and the year 1800 he came to Muhlenberg County and settled near Kincheloe*s Bluff, on Green river.

This Lewis Reno was the father of three boys, John, Jesse and Lewis, who all settled in the county and raised families, but in this article we shall not attempt to give a detail of all the Renos in general, but shall confine our comments to the two sons of Lewis Reno, Jr., who married Sally Kincheloe, a sister to Gen. Kincheloe, the mother of Jesse and Edmund Reno, about whom we shall speak. Jesse H. Reno was born in 1817; he came to Greenville and engaged as salesman in the store of Edward Rumsey; and in 1838 he commenced selling goods in his own name and continued in that business for a number of years together with other business affairs. In 1852 he built a water grist and saw mill on Pond river, which he ran until about 1860 and in 1854 he was elected county court clerk, defeating Wm. Wing, a son of Charles Wing, and was elected again in 1858. He was elected Circuit court clerk in 1856, defeating O. C. Vanlandingham, which office he held for twelve years. In 1861 he was made quartermaster of the 11th Ky. infantry and afterwards made division quartermaster. In 1862 he came home and acted as United States Marshal, and in 1867 he commenced selling goods, and in 1874 he was appointed collector of internal revenue for the second district of Kentucky. In 1880 he located at Central City and engaged in the merchandise business. In 1883 he was appointed deputy collector of internal revenue. He afterwards continued in the merchandise business until his death, which occurred in 1895; thus ended the business career of Jesse H. Reno. He was married in 1842 to Fanny Young, a daughter of Benjamin Young, who died in 1843. He was again married to Harriette Elliot in 1846; she was the daughter of Richard Elliott, who lived at Hartford, Ohio county. Richard Elliott was a brother-in-law of Edward Rumsey and James Weir, and a man of some means; to this union were born and reared four children, Jennie, Agnes, Jessie, and Edward. Their mother died in 1866. Jennie first married Dr. Edgar Jackson and then L. C. Martin. Agnes married Davis Offut and reared a large family, settling in the central part of the state, where she died. Jessie married W. T. Murray and now resides in St. Louis. Edward has his third wife; he was born in 1861 and has been engaged in the newspaper business the greater part of his mature years and is now associated with R. O. Pace in the publication of The Muhlenberg Sentinel.

Jesse H. Reno's third wife was Mary P. Martin, of Bowling Green, and had no children.

John Edmond Reno, the son of Lewis Reno, was born in 1820, reared on a farm until he was about grown when he came to Greenville and engaged as clerk to James Weir, where he continued for some time and then drifted into other business. He did some flat boating down the river to New Orleans. He located at South Carrollton and engaged in selling goods and other business. In the latter part of the 40's he was appointed as associate judge of Muhlenberg county. He dealt some in tobacco while in South Carrollton. After the war came up he moved to Greenville and became associated with F. B. Hancock in the merchandise business. He was superintendent of the Greenville Female School for a while. He was for several years an agent for the Fattman Tobacco Company, of New York, in buy and putting up tobacco for them at Greenville. In 1874 he was elected county clerk on the Republican ticket against J. D. Yonts, overcoming a great Democratic majority of from 400 to 500 at that time. He was afterwards defeated, but again elected in 1886 as county clerk, and in 1890 he served four years a deputy under J. G. Ellison. He then engaged in the hardware business, and when getting old he sold out, and lingering a few years, died in 1905. Thus ends the business career of Edmund Reno. His first wife was Adaline Downer, a daughter of Benjamin Downer; to this union were born and reared three children, Lewis, Lizzie and Sue. Their mother died in 1878. Lewis Reno, a son of Edmund, was born in 1847 and was given a collegiate course in education. He proved to be a noble man and good citizen of the county, of a pure and untainted character, his deportment was discreet and kind. He stood high in the estimation of all who knew him and was considered the Chesterfield of Greenville and the county. He had a fine business capacity backed by sufficient energy and succeeded in accumulating wealth when he became of age; he engaged with F. B. Hancock in general merchandise business and also had the agency of the railroad and express companies, which he attended to for years. In 1881 he went into the banking business; in 1882 he and M. C. Hay established the bank at Greenville of which he was cashier and director; In 1890 he helped organize and establish the First National Bank of Greenville in which he was cashier and vice-president until his death which occurred in 1906; he had considerable other business interests. In 1870 he married May Short, a most excellent lady and a daughter of Jonathan and Lucy Wing Short; to this union were born three children, Lewis, Lucy and Julia. Lewis died and his two daughters are living in other states.

Lizzie Reno, daughter of Edmund Reno, was married to Judge Wm. Yost in 1870; she was a noble woman, unassuming and admired by all who knew her. She died in 1903.

Sue Reno married C. W. Short in 1872, a son of Jonathan Short; he engaged in various callings for some years in the county, and then moved to Pineville, Bell county, where he died. His wife survives him.

Edmund Reno's second wife was Kate Palmer, who survived him a short time. No children.

Now, in conclusion of our scattered sketch of the lives of Jesse and Edmund Reno and their families, we would say that we knew these men when they were in middle life and engaged in the active business affairs, and there were no men of their generation more useful, progressive and influential, and commanded a higher respect of the people than Jesse and Edmund Reno. They always had the confidence and support of the people, and when they met with the people they exhibited a spirit of generosity and kindness irrespective of rank or file or condition of life, the same with the poor as with the wealthy; they always met people with a smile of gentleness and politeness, extending a warm hand shake and always presented the bright side of the picture of life, cheerful in adversity as well as prosperity; they were not stubborn, austere or repulsive, always of a compromising disposition. Before the war they succeeded in accumulating considerable means and were ranked among the wealthiest men of the county. They were slave owners. Jesse Reno owned quite a number of slaves. Before the war they were Whigs in politics, and during the war they were union men. After the war they were Republicans, but not aggressive, and pugnacious. Their reputation was not confined to the limits of the county but extended to other parts of the state. Jesse and Edmund Reno, Joseph Ricketts, F. B. Hancock, Edward Weir, E. W. Martin, Lawson Reno and John McIntire were the leaders of the union element for many years in the county. Owing to the generosity and kindness of Jesse and Edmund Reno they became complicate with security obligations which greatly affected their financial strength. They were both devout and devoted Christians and of the Methodist faith and persuasion.

We now need more men like the Renos in the county.

THE ALLISON FAMILY

Pioneers and Factors in Muhlenberg History

Some weeks ago Young E. Allison, of Louisville, who is an associate editor of The Insurance Field, a trade journal of prominence, was in Greenville on a visit with rela tives. Mr. Allison is a son of Young E. Allison, Sr., who was born and reared in Muhlenberg county.

Samuel Allison, the father of Young E. Allison, Sr., was born in Ireland and came, with his parents, to this country and located in North Carolina. In after years he came to Tennessee and there married Margaret Dixon, and in 1801 they came to Muhlenberg county and located about four miles southwest of Greenville, near where the Friendship church now stands. At this place Samuel Allison and his wife lived, died and were buried. Samuel Allison died in 1827, his wife in 1834. To Samuel and Margaret Dixon Allison were born and reared five sons and one daughter.

Charles M., the oldest son, born 1796; died 1815.

William Dixon, the second son, born 1798; died 1860.

Young E., the third son, born 1801; died 1874.

John A., the fourth son, born 1803; died 1875.

Samuel H., the fifth son; born 1805; date of death unknown to writer.

Nancy R., born 1810; died 1864.

Samuel Allison, Sr. was said to be a man of rare wit and humor. It is said that in the last years of his life he had a spell of sickness during which, at one time he was thought to be dying. His friends gathered around him and while some of them were bending down watching him, he made a sudden loud puff at them which at once dispelled their grief.

John A. Allison, a son of Samuel Allison, lived and died in Muhlenberg county. He was married in 1825 to Fanny Watkins, who was born in 1803 and died in 1887. She was a daughter of James Watkins, of English descent. They settled about two and one half miles west of Greenville, where they lived and died. They were buried at the old Liberty church burying ground. To John A. and Fanny Watkins Allison were born and reared four sons and one daughter.

James W., the oldest son, was born in 1826 and died in 1870. In 1849 he married Laura A. Martin, a daughter of Hutson Martin. They remained in Muhlenberg county until 1855 when they moved to Missouri, where James Allison and several of his children died, after which his wife came back to Kentucky, where she now survives in Greenville at the age of eighty-five. She brought back with her two children, a son, B. F. Allison, now residing in Oakland, California, a daughter, Annie, who afterwards married and in a short time died in 1890.

Finis M., the second son of John Allison, was born in 1829 and died in Greenville, Ky. in 1886. When young he was made a deputy clerk under Charles F. Wing and served several years. He also studied law. In 1852 he went to California and in 1854 returned to Kentucky and located at Morgantown, Butler county, where he was elected Circuit and County Clerk, which offices he held for several years. In 1865 he came to Greenville and commenced the practice of law. In 1867 he was elected to the State Senate, afterwards was appointed Tobacco Inspector and then appointed United States Commissioner, afterwards practiced law until his death. He was married in 1849 to Julia A. Burks, a daughter of Foster James, of Butler county; she died during the year 1900; to them were born and reared six children, three sons and three daughters, Finis, John and James; Lucy, Alice and Naomi. Finis became a doctor and preacher and died in the western part of the state. John was a prominent lawyer and practiced law in Greenville, where he died in 1903. James went to Chicago, where he died in 1898. Lucy married Joseph Frazier and went to Texas. Two daughters are now living in Greenville, Mrs. Alice Stokes and Mrs. Naomi Lovell.

Samuel H., the third son of John Allison, born 1833, left the state in early manhood and died in Wisconsin in 1855.

William, the fourth son of John Allison, born 1839, died at Hopkinsville, ky., in 1875.

Annie L., daughter of John Allison, born in 1855, married Britton Davis in 1859 and died in 1886. To them were born five children, three of whom died in early life. Two daughters survive in the county, Mrs. Belle Duvall and Mrs. Pearl Elkins. (Editor's note: Ann Luro Davis was born in 1835, according to her tombstone, and not in 1855 as printed in Mr. Martin's article.)

John A. Allison was a good citizen, of moral habits, and a man of good sense and information. He was of jovial temperment; it seemed to do him great good to get a crowd of people around him and tell anecdotes and jokes. He was full of wit and of quick discernment; he was rather timid and bashful man. We have heard him say that he always disliked to approach a crowd of people, that his hands seemed to be greatly in his way and he did not know what to do with them.

Samuel Allison, Sr., settled in a neighborhood with other pioneer settlers who raised families that grew up with the Allisons. These families were that of Henry Black, Jerry Langley, Matthew Rice, Kennard Hay and Richard Reynolds, all of whom were good men. The young men that grew up in the same neighborhood with the Allison boys were Wiley, Kincheon and Charles Hay, Henry Felix and Nathan Black, John, Thomas and George Reynolds, William, Wesley and Sylvanus Langley, Reson, William and Claborne Rice; All these sons of pioneers became prominent men. Out of the sixteen mentioned ten became professional men. There is no other neighborhood in the county that has produced a better set of men than were produced in the Sam Allison neighborhood. The Black boys grew up and left the county. Felix Black became a prominent Methodist preacher and located in Cincinnati. Henry Black became a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher and located in Illinois. Nathan became a lawyer of distinction and located in western Kentucky. Wesley and Sylvanus Langley went south. William remained in the county. John Reynolds located at Hopkinsville, Ky. Thomas became a Methodist preacher and located in Louisiana. George went to Illinois. Wiley Hay remained in the county and became a prominent man. Kincheon became a Baptist preacher and located in Illinois. Charles became a Cumberland Presbyterian preacher and located in the western part of Kentucky. Dixon, Young and Samuel Allison located in Henderson county, Ky., where Dixon became the Circuit clerk and Young the County clerk, which offices they held for many years. They all raised families, the history of whom were not informed.

Reson Rice, who married Louise Black, remained in the county and settled near the old Black homestead. He was a man of fine sense and information but he had an awkward appearance and movement, and in a common way was not a glib talker. Upon one occasion he had a lawsuit of some interest and acted as his own attorney in the case, having studied law some but had never practiced; and when he assumed his case the judge and lawyers seemed to be amused as if they expected some fun, as Rice was a little slow in getting off. But as the case proceeded Rice began to handle it with considerable skill, and when he made his speech he straightened up and with the fire of his unexpected eloquence astonished the whole outfit and won his case. He was afterwards regarded as a man of ability.

In the conclusion of this article we shall add that all these sons of pioneers mentioned would gather at the old log school house in the neighborhood of Samuel Allison, where they learned their first lessons from Kennard Hay, a school teacher. The school house was also used for religious worship, and was called Hickory Withe, and there they would carry on debating societies every year and by practice some of them became good speakers and in after years became distinguished speakers. These sons of the pioneer families of the Samuel Allison neighborhood have long since disappeared from the walks of life.

After the death of Samuel Allison and his wife, the old homestead passed into the hands of John Staples who reared a large family on it, where he built a horse mill which was run for years. At this old horse mill John A. Allison, Reson Rice and John Staples would often meet and discuss history, religion and politics; they were all well posted in such matters. After the Staples family had abandoned the Allison homestead it passed into different hands and is now owned by one William McWirter.

Muhlenberg County was cut out of parts of Logan and Christian counties in 1798; there is and has always been a considerable tie-in with the families in those two counties, particularly in the northern sections of each. It would seem well, then, for us to publish some records from each. Beginning with this issue, we are giving the names of Logan County heads of families as found in the 1810 census. We also give the page number on the microfilm reel in order that the reader may go to the reel for additional needed data.

NOTICE! NOTICE! The 1850 Muhlenberg Census, and Vol. 1 of the Muhlenberg County Cemeteries are both out of print. As of this writing only two copies of Vol. 2 of the Cemetery records are left. Mrs. Hammers has written that she could reprint all of these, but would have to have a guaranteed sale of 25 copies of each to justify the undertaking. All you people who need these books, but have not bought them, should get in touch with her at once, so a new printing can be made. The address is: Mrs. Marian G. Hammers, 651 S. Scott Street, Madisonville, Ky. 42431. All these publications are invaluable sources of information.
