The Callam Bailey Cabin

Callam Holman Bailey was born Jan. 1, 1749, on Owens Creek, Louisa County, Virginia, and died near Glasgow, Barren County, Kentucky, on December 30, 1842. He was married July 25, 1776 to Judith Ann Gillam, daughter of John Gillam and Sarah Farris.

He was drafted as a Private in the 5th Division of Virginia Militia in 1775 or 1776 and served until 1783.

In 1807, Callam Bailey moved to Barren County, Ky., and most likely built the log cabin pictured. Later, he, or his son (we are not certain which), built a large two-story frame house approximately ½ mile from the log cabin, and on the opposite side of the Lick Branch road from it.

The picture used was sketched from an old photograph. The land has changed owners many times over the years. At present it is owned and occupied by the Ralph Crews family, Route # 5, Box 188, Glasgow, Ky. However, the house has been so extensively remodeled that from the exterior it is impossible to see any indication of the old log house, although it is completely enclosed by the more modern structure.

The South Central Kentucky Historical and Genealogical Society is in the process of printing a Bailey family genealogy entitled, "CALLAM HOLMAN BAILEY, Early Settler of Barren County, Kentucky." This book of Bailey family records and history is a gift to the society by its author, Alice Morrey Bailey, of Salt Lake City, Utah. If you would like to purchase a copy of "THE BAILEY BOOK", you will find an order blank in the back of your Spring, 1984, issue of "TRACES" or you may order directly from: Katie Maude Smith, Rt. # 5, Box 271, Glasgow, Ky. 42141. Pre-publication price is $10.00 per copy (until Nov. 1, 1984) or $15.00 per copy after Nov. 1, 1984. Please include $1.00 for postage and handling. Ky. residents please add 5% sales tax.

If anyone has sketches suitable for the cover of the quarterly, we would be delighted to receive them. We have recently changed printers, and have been informed that we can now use photographs for the cover. We had been unable to do so before, so if you have any old photographs suitable for the cover, we would be delighted to receive them also. Please be sure to include a short history of the sketch or photograph.

Don't be too proud to ask advice when you are in doubt on any subject; but take counsel of good men of understanding. You will find that the flattering side of a prospect always presents itself first, and the side on which danger lies is dark and silent. Be careful to examine both sides attentively before you make a decision. By following this advice, you will avoid much trouble and difficulty through life, save your characters, and save your property.

Be humane to your servants; give them plenty of nourishing diet and clothing. This will make them esteem you and cause them to do their duty with cheerfulness. Don't keep a servant or white person about your house who is possessed of a bad disposition, or inclined to mischief; it is hard to change their minds and danger attends their living with you. But don't part from a good servant, or any other person in your employment, for a small fault; you may get one in his place that will not suit you so well. I have had experience in these matters. I have had men living with me from one to ten years—storekeepers, labourers on the farm, wagoners, blacksmiths, tanners, and others of different occupations, and I would not dismiss them for trifling offences.

I would advise you to select young men from the middle rank in life, of sober and industrious habits—sons of honest and respectable farmers. These are the best citizens in any country; these will consider themselves, in a great degree, dependant on you for their advancement in life, whereas the sons of wealthy parents will not think themselves under the same obligation to do their duty. This is a rule which I have adopted myself, and generally found to be correct; but if the character and capacity of a young man were such as I wished, I would only employ him for a short time at first, at low terms; because, they are not of much value until they get some experience in business. If I then found that they were honest, trusty and capable, I would engage them for a longer time, and increase their wages. I think it due to Jeremiah Cleveland, George Jones, and William R. Smith, to state, that they were taken into my employment, from the knowledge which I had of their parents. These men were possessed of honesty and industry. They lived with me from nine to eleven years, and when either of them was attending to my business, I was satisfied that all was right. They were obedient and faithful: they did well for me, and they have done well for themselves, and are now wealthy and respectable. Many others have lived with me who have done well; but I have mentioned these three, because they were in my employment longer than any others.

I wish to say a few words to the female part of my family: in the business in which your mother and I were engaged, we were often obliged to have the assistance of females. We sometimes took the daughters of ignorant parents, who had been raised in extreme indigence. They were frequently (when they first came) in such a condition, that they were not fit to be seen in company; but as soon as they were decently clothed, pride would take possession of their minds, and they soon got above their business; and although they had never known any thing but poverty and want, they became wasteful and extravagant as soon as they got where there was plenty. They were so deplorably ignorant, that they had no idea of economy, or the value of any thing about them; but used every thing as if there never could be an end of it. Such people should be avoided. Employ such as have some smartness and capacity for business, and are descended from honest and industrious parents. Such an one was Nancy McElroy, now Mrs. Clayton. She lived with us for several years until your mother's death; she was industrious, capable, and attentive to business; her parents were honest and respectable. She is now married to a man of excellent character and doing well.

I will soon close my remarks, and will take the liberty of cautioning you most seriously against the danger of speculation, when there is any uncertainty attending it. There have been instances of some of you attempting speculation, when it appeared almost certain that you would realize some profit, but how did it turn out? It was attended not only with direct pecuniary loss, but still greater loss at home in various ways. Dr. Franklin says, that the eye of the Master is worth both his hands, and to employ men to work for you without attending to them, is to leave them your purse open. Besides, the advantage that a man will derive by staying at home and attending to his business—it is a gratification to every person of a well regulated mind to be with his family. When I observe that any man is frequently from home, and appears regardless of the manner in which his business is going on, I come to the conclusion at once, that he is doing no good. And it is the same in regard to women—not that I object to occasional visits, they may be proper and even necessary, sometimes, but not often. A woman who is much from home, is apt to acquire the character of a gossip, than which there are few more despicable. Home is the place where your affections and your business should be centered, and if it should not be so extensive as to make you conspicuous in the world, it will make you useful and respectable. Many men have reduced themselves and their families from a high state of prosperity to poverty and want, by engaging in uncertain schemes of speculation. They could not exercise a little patience and wait for certain profit, but risked all to save time. Such men act with about as much sagacity as the boy who killed the goose which laid the golden eggs. He wanted all at once, and for want of proper consideration forever closed the door to future gain. If any of you should be deceived by villains, (as some of you have been) don't be discouraged, but renew your efforts and be more careful for the future; pick up courage and go ahead—just think of me and you will never yield; but you must be humble, don't try to cut a figure in the world until fortune smiles on your exertions again, and the world will honor you for your energy and perseverance.
Children, the little property which I have made, I have divided amongst you to the best of my judgment. When you take into view everything connected with it, I hope you will not think that I have exercised any partiality, for I can assure you that I had no such feeling, but made as just a distribution as I was able, so as to keep the principal property together in Asheville, and prevent it from going into the hands of strangers, for I wish my name to be there when I should be no more, and therefore imposed many burdens on your brother James, with which some of you are unacquainted. When you take into consideration my bad state of health, and the many misfortunes I have met with, I hope that you will think that I have acted with as much justice and impartiality as I was capable of. Without a correct statement of every thing, it would be impossible for you to judge with any degree of accuracy; but I could meet my God and say with a clear conscience, that I intended nothing but justice to each and every one of you. I hope you will all be satisfied, live in peace, and be an honour to each other. You have many advantages for which you should be thankful. You are young, blessed with common capacities, and have something to start on in the world; I had none of these. My education was very limited; I had no friends to lend me a helping hand, and at thirty-four years of age had but two hundred dollars; besides, many misfortunes came in my way which were obstacles to my success in life. I now believe, that it was for my good, that I was unfortunate in my youth; had I never met with disappointments, it is probable to me that I would not have effected as much as I have: for they caused me to think and act with caution. Remember that afflictions are sent for our good, and if we were to meet with nothing but prosperity, we would soon forget the source from whence we derive all our comfort and happiness.

I will mention some other reasons which I had for keeping the Asheville property together: in the first place, it was the wish of your good mother, who had done every thing in her power to assist you all, that it should remain in the hands of one of the children, and James was the one she named, as he was the oldest son. It was her lot to die and be buried in Asheville; it is my wish also to lie by the side of her and my mother, in the small space of ground which is laid off for that purpose. Another was, that when your mother died, your two youngest sisters had not received their education, the youngest being at that time only twelve years of age. Your brother James gratified my wishes in giving them excellent opportunities of improvement in Salem, Philadelphia and Nashville, which was attended with considerable expense; and his house, subsequent to that time, was the same to them that it had been before your mother's death; they were both married there without any cost or expense. Besides, it is a pleasant place for the family to meet together and enjoy sociality and friendship, and has been, and is at this time, a place of refuge for some of the connexion who have been unfortunate. These considerations afford me a great deal of pleasure, and at the very moment I am writing this sentence, I can look through my window and view the spot where I will soon repose; and how happy would be my transit from this world of toil and pain, if I were certain you would all do well. Although I have often erred, still I am pleased that God has blessed my weak means, and enabled me (at the advanced age of 84 years) to give you some advice for your good. And may the God of Grace, cheer and support me until the time of our separation on earth, and give me a life of blessed immortality beyond the grave. That you may live in peace and harmony with each other, and so spend your lives in this world, that you will be prepared for that which is to come, is the wish of your affectionate father.

JAMES PATTON

APPENDIX

A LIST OF THE BROTHERS AND SISTERS OF JAMES PATTON, WHOSE NARRATIVE IS ANNEXED.

THOMAS PATTON, his oldest brother, married Jane Shaw in Ireland, came to this country early, by assistance of his brother James, and died in Coffey County, Tennessee, where his widow is now (1844) still living. They had issue, now living, Neely S. Patton of Tennessee, James Patton, Jr., of Philadelphia, John Patton, of Tennessee, William Patton, of Charleston, Daniel Patton and Mary Anne, (Searcy) of Missouri.

WILLIAM PATTON, his second brother, lived and died a bachelor.

JAMES PATTON, whose narrative is annexed, was the third brother.

JOHN PATTON, the fourth brother, settled and died in the Calhoun settlement, Abbeville District, S.C.

DANIEL PATTON, the fifth brother, died in Bedford County, Tennessee, leaving two children.

NEELY PATTON, the sixth brother, went to the East-Indies, in the East India Company's service, and afterwards returned and lived near London; having a family.

JOSEPH PATTON, the seventh brother, died in Asheville, N.C.

GEORGE PATTON, the eighth brother, died near Franklin, Macon County, N.C., in 1843, leaving several sons and daughters; one daughter married to Col. Moore of Franklin.

The following letter gives the family of his sister, ROSANNA PATTON, who married a Mr. Campbell, of Pennsylvania.

Dear Brother, - You desired me to send you an account of my children, their wives, etc.; we unite in tendering our thanks to cousin William Patton for his kindness in remembering us, may he be blessed in all things that are lawful and right. I will now commence giving you an account, as near as I can, according to his request.

ELIZABETH, my eldest daughter, is in her 54th year, married to Alex Young, their children's names, etc., are John, (married to Ann M'Leod and they have had four children, two living and two dead,) Samuel, (he is dead), Alexander, William, James, Thomas, Isaac and Hugh, sons; Elizabeth and Mary, daughters.

JAMES PATTON CAMPBELL, my second, is in his 52nd year - Margaret Hoover, his wife; their children's names are Samuel Susannah, Rosy, Jane, Washington, Elizabeth, Archibald, Angelina, and James Franklin.

ARCHIBALD, my 3rd, is in his 49th year - Esther Hutcheson his wife; their children's names are William Hutcheson, (W.H. is married to Margaret Meals, daughter of Daniel Meals, etc.) Samuel A., Margaret Moorhead, Robert, Rosy Jane, Euphemia, James Patton, George Washington, David Fowler, (one dead between Jas.P. and Geo. W.)

BARBARA, my 4th, her age is 47, married to Samuel Bell; their children are James Campbell, Samuel, Rosy Ann, Archibald, Martha Jane, and Erwin, (five dead, names in part unknown.)

JENNY, my 5th, her age 45, married to Fergus Hutcheson; their children are William, Margaret Jane, Samuel Campbell, Robert, Rosy Ann, Esther, Isabella, (three dead, names unknown.)

POLLY, my 6th, her age 43, married to Robert Donaldson; their children are Samuel Campbell, Eliza Jane, Isabella, Rosy Anne, Margaret, Andrew Patton, James Campbell.

ROSANNA, my 7th and last, her age 41, married to Andrew Donaldson, Esq.; their children are Isabella Sprout, Rosy Anne, Samuel Campbell, Margaret Jane, Catherine, Fergus Hutcheson, Henderson, John Bredin.

Dear Brother, - When you write, I wish you to give some particular account of W. Patton and Andrew; we are more particularly acquainted with them. In particular, Archibald my son, wishes to know how they. W. and A., are employed.

I now tell you, I send you a remembrance of me, a knot of my hair blossoming for the grave; it is said the hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness. May mine so be found.

I remain your affectionate sister,
ROSANNA CAMPBELL.

Dear Uncle, - I and my wife and children, send our best wishes to you and yours; may we have a joyful prospect in life, and a glorious immortality beyond the grave. Your nephew, niece, and their children. - Farewell!

ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL.

JAMES PATTON.

The Fiscal Court of Barren County with the assistance of the citizens along the way, would long since doubtless have relocated this road or macadamized it, but it was objected to for reasons that it be preserved as an antique curiosity. Its beauty would be marred if covered with crushed rock. While it would be much easier for travel and traffic if piked, yet, it would tend to curdle, if not actually clabber the milk of human kindness, that is daily displayed by teamsters pulling each other out of the chuck holes and up the hillsides.

One of the peculiar features of this road is its elasticity. It is governed by the weather. During a drought the distance to Dry Fork is fifteen miles, but during a prolonged rainy spell it has been known to reach a length of 26 miles, 2 feet, and 5 inches.

One of the principal charms of the road is its meanderings, but this road does not meander any more. It formerly meandered with the Bristletown Branch. It was, indeed, beautiful to witness the affection displayed, one for the other as in fond embrace they meandered to the Creek. The despoilers have done their work; ruthlessly separated a loving pair—it was pathetic. It never meanders any more—goes right up, right down, and straight across.

This is not a road, strictly speaking, but a trail. It was made by the Indians coming from Indian Creek and Indian Camp Branch to Flint Knob, in the Barrens for arrow heads. From time to time the trail was widened until a wagon can go over its entire length; in places it is wide enough for two wagons to pass each other. Most of the rail fences on the hills along the way have been set on fire and burned by sparks flying from the locked wagon wheels.

It is supposed the Indians, in granting the right-of-way over this trail, stipulated that it should not be moved from its present location; otherwise, the road would have eliminated many many hills by removal a few yards. It was a good trail, but a bad road. Since it has been widened the increasing weight put upon it has caused it to pull apart in many places. There is considerable gap on the top of Dodd Hill; the road would slip off into Boyds Creek were it not for the tough clay on the hill side. The business of Glasgow and the country tributary to this road is greatly crippled by its condition. It does not hurt Pikeville so much as it is a phantom city, not dependent on material things for success.

The road and Skeggs Creek are in a controversy now over the right-of-way across the bottom just beyond the bridge, with the creek holding trump hand. It the creek wins, and it is little doubt that it will, some enterprizing man will establish a ferry down about the old ford, and the bridge will go for junk....

There are many curios on this road, and should the County ever supplant it with another highway, it should be preserved as one of the sights for the inquisitive tourists.

One of the great natural wonders of the road is the "Hanted" Cave near the Peters Creek ford. There is not telling the splendors that would be revealed, were this cave explored and developed; and it would long since have become a popular resort, had it not been for the "hants" that infest it. No one wants to intrude on the hanted property. The man who owns the cave has used every means to induce the "hants" to vacate, but so far, unsuccessful. Some years ago three or four venturesome young men undertook to explore the cave. After going a few hundred yards with difficulty, they entered a wide avenue with high ceiling, through which they travelled for half a mile, crossing a stream they went a few yards and the way became narrow and rugged and led down a very steep incline for several hundred feet; then leading out onto a level for a short distance, four avenues branched out. Turning into one and going a few yards they entered a large chamber, in which were a number of skeletons of men and beasts. There were skeletons of a woman and infant child lying together and that of a man on a ledge nearby. Also, two others with skulls missing, partly covered by sand and a few gravel. I should have said as they advanced into the cave they begun to hear strange sounds which became more distinct and weird until they entered the last chamber when they became deafening and of such heart-rending tones as to freighten the explorers out of their wits. Needless to say, they hastened out as fast as they could, and no one has had the temerity to venture in since. The hants seen and heard about this cave are supposed to be the ghosts of people who were murdered by the Indians and John A. Murrell and the Harps.

Back to the road: - This road would have lost its identity after reaching the foot of Roseville Hill had not Rose Creek generously offered to share its bed with it up the Fisher Ford. However, not to be outdone in generosity, we understand that the road has proposed to do the same thing for Peters Creek. The creek "on a high" goes over the road now, and proposes to go over permanently, soon.

ATTENTION !!! BOOKS !!!! BOOKS!!! BOOKS!!!

Many of you have written to the society asking for a complete list of publications of the society and its members. Thusly, we have compiled the following list of most publications that have been advertised in past issues of TRACES, and many that we have not previously advertised. Some are included which are not published by members of our society, but have been included because of their special interest to our members. We will not again print a complete listing of this length, so please keep this as a reference. Some of these books we advertised some years ago, and are marked with an *. We suggest that before you attempt to order one thus marked, you might write the author to see if it is still available.

It has recently become our policy to not advertise any book in TRACES unless we are presented with a copy of that book for review in TRACES, and to become a part of our growing library. If you print a book on your family, or of genealogical or historical interest, we would very much appreciate a copy for our library. We will, in return, review this book, and print any advertisement you might have for it.

Thank you,
The Editorial Staff

When Barren Co., Ky. Records began, in 1798, the deed books were the repository of many types of instruments other than deeds, including mortgages. In 1829 the recording of mortgages in a separate book was started. Mortgages are very valuable sources of research, as they show the lifestyle of our ancestors. By studying the items which were mortgaged, other than land, we can picture their homes and furnishings, their educational levels, their farming potentials; everything imaginable was listed - Bibles, books, sugar bowls and shirts, shovels & shocks of corn, cattle & kettles, tobacco tools. Price: $10.00 postpaid. Ky residents please add 5% sales tax. Order from: Mrs. Gladys B. Wilson, 128 St. Mary's Ct., Glasgow, Ky. 42141

This book is composed of the results of fifteen years of intense research about the Skaggs family who settled in the south central Kentucky area, and eventually spread over the entire state. The front portion of the book includes general information about the family from the grandsons of an Irishman who came to Maryland during the seventeenth century to the descendants of those same grandsons, Henry Skaggs and his cousin William Skaggs who were famous Long Hunters and brave early pioneers. There are many maps, a 13 page section containing a Mormon index of Kentucky Skaggs, Kentucky Land Grants, as well as a listing of the formation dates of all the Kentucky counties. The balance of the book consists of very valuable information from 36 Kentucky counties, which are listed alphabetically, and gives source material such as census records - many of them including the 1900 census, court records such as deeds, marriages, wills, court orders, etc., cemetery records, vital statistics, tax records - all records from every source available to the compiler. Mrs. Luttrell does not attempt to build the family tree of each branch of the family; she gives you the material from which you may construct your own family tree.
