HINES FAMILY ARTICLE

A booklet written in 1924 by J. Adger Stewart was used as an outline for the article on the descendants of Henry Hines, Sr. Mr. Stewart used as his source, the family papers of James D. Hines, Jr. of Bowling Green, Kentucky, who in 1911, just a few months prior to his death, undertook to gather the family records of the descendants of Henry Hines, Sr. The information secured by him contained the names of 13 children, 80 grandchildren and over 200 great-grandchildren of Henry Hines, Sr. It has been supplemented by consulting the following sources: 1850 Census Records of Ohio, Butler, and Warren Counties; 1860 Census Records of Ohio and Warren Counties; 1870 Census Records of Warren County; Marriage Records of Warren, Butler and Ohio Counties; Cemetery Records of Warren, Butler and Ohio Counties.

The manuscript, which is 25 pages in length will be continued in future editions of THE LONGHINTER. There will be an full-name index of all the children and their spouses at the conclusion of the article.

MEET OUR OFFICERS

Ute Halliburton, president of SKGS, is a retired County Extension Agent and was part-owner for several years of H & H Sales on the Russellville Road in Bowling Green. He is a member of First Baptist Church. Camping, which he has done in many states, is one of his favorite forms of recreation. He has one son and one daughter and three grandchildren. His lovely wife Ruva recently passed away after a brief illness, and we all wish to extend our deepest sympathy to him.

Kenneth C. Thomson, Jr., vice-president and co-editor of THE LONGHINTER is a former history professor. He is also president of the Edmonson Co. (KY) Historical Society. He naturally has an active interest in genealogy and is very knowledgeable about antiques.

Lucille F. Wallace, our recording secretary, is married to Furman A. Wallace. She was a teacher for twenty-five years in Kentucky and South Carolina. She and Furman have two sons, Furman F. and Robert C. Wallace. Other organizations of which she is a member include the DAR, Daughters of American Colonists, Colonial Dames of the 17th Century, Lioness Club, Surburan Homemakers and the Kentucky Mansions Preservation Foundation. She is active in churchwork at First Baptist and lists genealogy as her favorite hobby.

Margaret Elaine Bullock Winkenhoper, our corresponding secretary, is a former hospital dietitian. She is married to Willard Edward Winkenhofer and has three children, Kurt Presley, Willard Edward, Jr., and Karen Elaine. She is also a member of the Garden Club, Investment Club and Homemakers. Her interests include travel, genealogy, knitting and needlepoint.

Leroy Collier, our treasurer, is a retired salesman of Funk International. His wife Mildred is also an active member of SKGS. Their four children are Janice Marie Russell, James Michael Collier, Kenneth Allan Collier and Donna Ruth Parker. He is a deacon at the 12th Street Church of Christ and genealogy is his main avocation.

WHITE STONE QUARRY CHURCH
Submitted by Sue Spurlock, Bowling Green, KY

The White Stone Quarry Baptist Church is located approximately four and one-half miles southwest of Bowling Green's downtown square on Highway 432, known locally as Blue Level Road. Nearby are the ruins of the White Stone Quarry, which was a major Warren County industry in the late 1800's and early 1900's. Such famous landmarks as Brooklyn's Dime Savings Bank and Hall of Records, New York's Pulitzer Fountain, Philadelphia's Church of Our Lady of Victory, as well as Bowling Green's own First Baptist Church and other local landmarks, were constructed of the famous "Bowling Green Stone."

The Church will celebrate its 110th anniversary on July 8, 1986, in its original log building (logs are now concealed through remodeling and expansion). Members of The White Stone Quarry Church one hundred years ago were:

CAMPBELL FAMILY HISTORY

by Georgia Ennis Campbell

December 31, 1953

The Campbells of Amherst County, Virginia are descendants of a Scotch-Irish lineage whose services have distinguished them in private and public life on both hemispheres.

The name Campbell is of an indefinite origin. C. W. Bardsley in his book of English Surnames crosses to Scottish soil and places its source under "Nicknames." These soubriquets were expressive of the peculiar and individual characteristic of the person named. A Scottish chief was called Camoys, an appellation of Norman origin meaning "crooked mouth." He gave his defect as a name to his clan which distinguished it and it has gradually revolutionized into the name Campbell, which is the family name of the Lord of Argyll.

Genealogists are not agreed as to the origin of the family. One theory makes it of Anglo-Norman origin; another traces its descent through a long line of Celtic chiefs to King Arthur. The former seems more plausible, since several of the designs in the famous Bayeux Tapestry, a historic representation of the invasion and conquest of England by the Normans in 1066, are reproduced on the Campbell's Coat of Arms. Regardless of origin, the family began to settle in the North and Northwest portion of Scotland in the 11th century. Later they drifted to the South and became prominent in the stirring events of Scottish history.

The name first appeared in records in the 13th century in the promulgation of the "Laws of the Bretts and the Scots," when it held lands in Ayrshire and Argyll.

Politically, they were strong adherents to the Crown and brave defenders of their country. Their services not only won the confidence and the admiration of their sovereigns, but their bravery was perpetuated by the bestowal of distinguished honors. Alexander III knighted Colier M. Campbell in 1280. In 1445, Sir Duncan Campbell was knighted and received a Peerage. The Earldom dated from 1480, the Marquisate from 1641 and the Dukedom from 1701.

The early religious history of the Campbells is shrouded in mystery. Possibly there was infused into their ancient beliefs the conception of many faiths, both pagan and Christian. After the dawn of the Reformation in England, they were staunch Presbyterians. During his reign Charles I undertook the extension of the Church of England over Scotland and the enforcement of conformity to its doctrines and usages. The Scotch revolted against his proceedings. An arm of Covenanters was formed and the command given to Lord Campbell. Later during the reign of James I, who was a Catholic, Sir Archibald Campbell (Duke of Argyle) was executed because he refused to take the "test oath" without the clause, "as far as is consistent with the Protestant faith." His refusal was a charge of high treason and he was sentenced to die June the 30th, 1685. Many of the Campbells were Scotch Presbyterian ministers whose writings have made an impression on Church literature and have done much to perpetuate Church history. Aside from ecclesiastical writers not a few have won distinction in other branches of American and English letters.

The Covenant was signed at the Gray Friars Church in Edinburgh, Scotland. The Covenanters were Scotch Presbyterians and Puritans, and many are buried in the famous old churchyard. In Scott's "Old Mortality," we get much of the history of these brave people who sacrificed their lives for their beliefs.

During the early days of the stirring events, Ireland was emerging from a stagnant stage of civilization. Its isolation abandoned its people to frequent subjugation by stronger and more warlike factions. These frequent invasions caused oppression and dissatisfaction. After it was added to the Crown of England, Ulster became the hot bed of dissention. King James of England, to alleviate their conditions and to train them in the industrial pursuits, thrift and economy, sent many of his most skilled subjects to Ireland as representatives of the Crown, hoping to allay their distress as well as thus gain their allegiance. In the front ranks of this vast assemblage we find the name of Campbell enrolled with Breckenridge, Alexander, Cameron, Cabell, McDuff, McDonald, Lewis and a host of others whose descendants have acquired the appellation of Scotch-Irish in counter distinction of the native born Irish.

In the history of colonization of the new world, we find the same names of these worthy scions, trained and disciplined by a long line of privations and hardships and skilled in the arts and crafts that have become the "wool and woof" of a New Nation. Along the New England coast southward to the Carolinas and Virginia we find the Presbyterians, Puritans, Cavaliers and Catholics dwelling together peacefully in an atmosphere that was to create freedom of thought and religious liberty, which foreshadowed the Revolution and the separation from the mother country. This same undaunted spirit, backed by an indomitable energy, led them farther into the wilderness. They crossed the mountains and became the hardy pioneers of the Ohio Valley. They built homes and blazed the trail that led to the fundamental principles of a great republic. Today their posterity is building still for a greater America.

The immediate family of Campbells of which I shall write, were the descendants of these worthy pioneers. Joel Campbell and two brothers emigrated to Virginia and settled in Caroline County before the Revolution. Later Joel left his brothers and went to Amherst County where he settled on a large plantation, a land grant, a portion of which is still (1926) owned by his descendants. Subsequently he married a Miss Mills. To this union was born: Wiley, Joel Catlitt, William, Nancy (Lively), Stilly (Allcock), Lucinda, who died in infancy, and several others who died young.

Wiley Campbell, the eldest son, inherited most of his father's estate. He married Elizabeth Sales of Amherst County, Virginia. Their children were: Joel, Louis, John Sales, Alexander, Wiley Jr., Gustavus, Thomas, Eliza (Tucker), Betsey (Woodruff), and Mildred (Bethel) (Pendleton). Most of this family remained in Virginia except Alexander, who married and moved to Bristol, TN, where he practiced dentistry. He raised a large and influential family, some of whom still reside in that state.

John Sales Campbell, the third son and subject of this sketch, was born near Amherst Court House, Amherst County, Virginia, April 25, 1803. In the autumn of 1821, Joseph Allcock, his paternal uncle, who had migrated to Kentucky a few years perviously, returned to Virginia on a visit. His fascinating stories of adventure, the illusory possibilities of a new country and the lure of fortune stirred young Campbell's ambition and led him to a final decision to cast in his lot with that of his uncle in the Kentucky wilderness. Accompanied by his uncle and William Christian, a friend and neighbor, he began the long and perilous journey on horseback. It required between ten days and two weeks to make the trip. The roads in many places were mere trails that led over the mountain to dense forests, across streams and through dark ravines, made darker still by underbrush. There were no hotels. The tired travelers had to depend for accommodation on the scattered houses which were often meager, but hospitable. Mr. Campbell spent the first winter with his uncle and worked at his uncle's saw mill for 25 cents per day and his board. The mill, known later as Madison's Mill, was located on Middle Fork, a tributary of Drakes Creek.

In 1824, on March the 5th, John Sales Campbell married Mary Frances Ennis, daughter of George and Frances (Campbell) Ennis, who emigrated from Virginia to Warren County, Kentucky in 1800 and located near Rich Pond. After his marriage he bought a farm of 60 acres near the John Butts place and began housekeeping. The house of two rooms was built with a stack chimney. Their furniture included an old-fashioned cherry four poster, a tripod and a cherry bench. Wooden pins adorned the walls. On these were hung the spun cotton in hanks, the wool, flax and tow. Sometimes they laid planks across these pins. Then they became receptacles for the homespun cloth till it was sold or made into garments. The old-fashioned fire place did triple duty. It warmed the room, baked the Johnny cakes for supper and made the light by which to work and read during the long winter evenings. The kitchen and pantry were one. A box nailed to the wall, fitted with shelves and a piece of chintz adjusted on a wire or cord to keep the dust out, was the pioneer's cabinet.

A bail box made the dining table. Pewter plates, a mug, one fork and two knives (one made of wood) was the bride's tableware and the prospective heirlooms of the future generations. An oven, a pair of pot hooks, a skillet and lid, a few crocks, a pot and a grease lamp (called also a frog lamp because of its shape) were the essentials of the kitchen.

Flour from a bushel and half of wheat, four pounds of coffee, two pounds of sugar with meat and meal provided, when needed, made their first year's heavy grocery bill. Coffee and biscuits were Sunday and company luxuries with buttermilk and Johnny cake taking their place during the week. The buttermilk was obtained by Mrs. Campbell, who walked to her father's a mile distant for it, and churned before breakfast. The custom in those early days was to arise and work until nine o'clock when breakfast was served. The men were called from their work by the blowing of a tin trumpet, a horn or a conch shell. They fed their stock, ate breakfast, rested awhile and then returned to their work until two o'clock when they ate dinner.

Shortly after marriage, Mr. Campbell served an apprenticeship with Samuel Vontrees in the millwright trade to which he devoted most of his early life. His unswerving honesty, prompt business methods and a mastery of mechanics soon won for him a reputation which made him the laborer really worthy of his hire. It gave him work at home and in adjoining counties.

The first mill he built was for Peter Lawrence, three miles from Woodburn, on a big spring that empties into Drakes Creek. He then constructed a horse mill for Joe Skiles on the Charles Skiles' place near Rich Pond. The ruins of this old mill are woven into the romantic setting of "Julytty," Mrs. McElroy's book, the scene of which is laid about this old home. Then came the saw and grist mill for J. Rumsey Skiles in the cave of Lost River over which Crump's Mill was located. The flooring for the old Green River Hotel at the corner of State Street and Frozen Row was cut there. The logs were hauled by Uncle Henry Skiles (col.) from east of Drakes Creek, with a team of oxen. Mr. Campbell set up the gearing for a cotton factory for William Rochester, Sr. near Bowling Green and a stationary threshing machine for Westal Hill near Rich Pond. The machinery was propelled by a large draft wheel to which horses were attached. This was a previously patented invention and was built in 1840, being the first of its kind in the country.

In 1838-39 he built a steam mill for J. Rumsey Skiles and Jacob VanMeter near Bowling Green. This mill burned but was rebuilt by Mr. Rawlings. In 1841 he built a threshing machine for Adam Bratton near Mt. Olivet Church, but he improved on the patent by making a perforated floor when he crossed the slats to separate the wheat from the straw. The next was a mill with an undershot wheel for Henry Mitchell on Barren River, later the property of the Umbenours. Then he built a flour and grist mill for Potter Brothers at Trammel, owned later by Henry Larmon. In 1848 he built a mill with a tread wheel for a Mr. Holman in the eastern part of the county. He also built a steam mill for John L. Rowe, purchased later by Frank Kister, Sr. A water mill was constructed for Briggs on Jennings Creek and another further up the same stream, still standing and known as Dishman's Mill. His last work as a millwright was for John L. Rowe, when he built the mill on Drakes Creek, later the property of Sweeney and Potter.

This is a partial list of the mills he built. During the time between jobs he built the Hadley Bridge which was washed away in 1854. In the following summer he built Locust Grove, a Southern Methodist church near his home, of which he was a member. In 1889 the congregation sold this property to John Covington and bought an interest in Greenwood, a union church that was more centrally located.

In 1839-40, J. Rumsey Skiles decided to build a railroad from where the Warren County Courthouse now stands, to the Double Springs on Barren River, a distance of about one mile. Mr. Campbell built the River Depot. The railroad car was drawn by a horse, and the driver announced the arrival and departure by the blowing of a tin trumpet. He also collected the passengers' fares and loaded and unloaded the baggage at both depots. This was the first railroad built in Warren County.

In 1838, Mr. Campbell sold his farm and rented the George Ennis place, near Rich Pond, the home of the late John M. Potter. In 1840, he moved to the Hamilton farm near Memphis Junction, later the property of Col. E. H. Motley, owned later by Wilson Brothers. In the spring of 1841 he bought 259 1/2 acres of timberland from J. Rumsey Skiles for $10.00 per acre, near Three Springs, south of Bowling Green. In this "primeval forest," he built his home where he resided for the rest of his life. During the winter and spring he cleared ten acres of land for corn and four for tobacco, and erected two log pens, the beginning of his house. One room was fitted up comfortably for occupancy, the other to be finished when time and means would permit. A short while before his death he sold thirty acres to James A. Campbell, his youngest son. The remainder was purchased after his death by his daughter, Mrs. Eliza Shields, to settle his estate. At present it is the property and home of Samuel Shields, Jr.

In 1855, Mr. Campbell retired from his trade and devoted his time to farming. He built a workshop near the house and fitted it with a set of cabinet tools and a blacksmith's shop. He was a skilled workman and could make anything from an elegant piece of furniture to a knife blade.

As the children came into the family to be cared for, there was an increase in the essentials of life, such as food and clothing, to be provided. Cotton and flax were grown, spun and woven into cloth. Everything about the house was homemade. This included sheets, tablecloths, towels, counterpanes, coverlets and all sorts of clothing. Berries and barks were used for coloring. The blue dye pot furnished the fadeless blues of wool, especially the much coveted coverlets of our grandmother's day and the blue jeans for men's clothing and quilts.

During the long winter evenings the older children carded rolls, spun the thread or knit the socks and stockings, while often the hum of the wheel drowned the sound of the hammer that drove the wooden pegs into the homemade shoes. In almost every community there were tan yards where hides were converted into leather. There were hatters who made hats from wool and fur. Nothing was wasted by these studry pioneers, who had to work and economize to survive.

The inferior banking system of the state caused a continual financial depression. In business transactions the currency was often a problem. There were silver dollars, halves and quarters. If smaller change was needed the dollar was cut into four pieces; these quarters were then cut into two pieces, or bits. The term "bits" comes from the frontier's practice of hacking up Spanish dollars into eight pieces or bits to provide change as small minted coins were lacking. Six bits made seventy five cents. There were no banks in Bowling Green in these early days, but there were negotiable notes or "shin plasters." These notes were negotiable, made payable to the individual on presentation by the one who executed them. The collateral was the honesty of and the integrity of the individual parties concerned.

The postal system was inadequate and expensive. There were no envelopes. The letter was folded and sealed with a small red wax wafer. The recipient paid the postage, which varied with the weight and distance from twelve to twenty-five cents. The mail was sent by stage to the large towns and cities, then distributed to minor points in the county by boys on horseback.

The building of the Louisville and Nashville Pike by state aid in 1831-32 was not only an advantage to the postal system, but it placed Bowling Green in touch with commercial centers and gave to the producer other markets than by flat boat to New Orleans.

The school system was unknown during these primitive days. The settlements were so far apart that the children were taught at home by their parents. Later there were subscription schools for three months during the winter when the boys on the farm were at leisure. These were usually taught by traveling Yankees. The school houses were rude log huts with stick chimneys and puncheon floors made of logs split and fitted closely together. On one side a log was cut out full length of the building for a window. Under the window a plank was placed for a writing desk for the older pupils. The seats were made of hewed logs with legs. All were of the same height and without backs. These log school houses were poorly lighted and ventilated. The text books were scarce, difficult and impractical. The children were assigned lessons in whatever books they brought to school. Everyone studied aloud and the geography lessons were sung. Any one who could read, write, spell and cipher to the rule of three was considered quite a scholar. Slates and pencils were used at that time. The teacher furnished the goose quill pens and set the copies. A ferule and a bunch of switches were the teacher's efficient assistants.

Politically, Mr. Campbell was a Whig in early life, a firm adherent to the Monroe Doctrine and a staunch Democrat in later years. He cast his first vote for Henry Clay in the presidential campaign of 1824, when John Quincy Adams was elected. As a slave holder, like most Southern people, he regarded his slaves as property, and he was frank and sincere in his views and also in defending his rights. He inherited slaves and transported them to Kentucky from Virginia on horseback. One negro boy, Ellis Campbell, rode behind Mr. Campbell from the old home in Amherst County to Warren County. When the final crisis came between the states he sacrificed his personal welfare and all partisan principles and voted for the Union. Perhaps he was influenced in his decision by the policy so ably advocated by the Louisville Journal founded in 1830 and to which he was an annual subscriber for more than fifty years.

He had a nice collection of books, most of them of a religious character, that he had purchased from time to time from itinerant preachers who were colporteurs (persons traveling about and distributing Bibles, tracts, etc.) from their congregations and communities. In early days there were no magazines and few newspapers. Nearly every home had a copy of Pilgrims' Progress, Foxe's Book of Martyrs, a dictionary and a family Bible.

In the latter part of his life, Mr. Campbell devoted most of his leisure time to reading. He took an active interest in the current events of the day and discussed entertainingly reminiscences of early days. At the age of seventy he discontinued the use of glasses. His eyesight was such that he could read the finest print and he could shoot a rifle with the accuracy of his younger days.

During these days of intermingled hardships and happiness, he visited his old Virginia home once every five years during his mother's life. He made these trips on horseback with the exception of one when he was accompanied by his wife and baby daughter Frances. They drove through in a shay loaned to him by Mr. Moses Potter, a friend and neighbor. This was Mrs. Campbell's only visit to Virginia and to Mr. Campbell's people and her parents' former home. The great meteoric shower of November, 1833, occurred during their trip home. His first visit to Virginia was made memorable by his conversion at Old Poplar, a Southern Methodist Church where his family worshipped near his old home. A woman conducted the protracted service and preached from the text, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul, or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul." When he returned to his own home in Kentucky, he united with the M. E. Church South, and lived a consecrated Christian life until his death.

While returning from the second visit home Mr. Campbell had the pleasure of witnessing a grand spectacle of nature. On the summit of the Cumberland mountains an electrical storm was raging. Alone in the sunshine of the summit of the cloud-girded and lightning-guarded mountain, he sat on his horse and listened to the thunder's roar and the rain as it poured on the forest below. Everything about him was beautiful in the awesome stillness—a reminder of the couplet, "Be still sad heart and cease repining, For behind the cloud the sun is still shining." In descending the mountain road after the storm had ceased and the clouds had cleared away, he saw a pine cone full of sprouts half buried in a rut over which the water was gurgling. He dismounted, lifted it from the sand, wrapped it in one of his homeknit mittens and placed it in his saddle bags with his clothes. When he arrived home he planted the sprouts in his yard. Four of them lived and became large and beautiful. In the spring of 1889, a cyclone blew them down. Some of them measured two feet in diameter. The following summer the logs that were not too badly damaged by the wind were sawn into lumber.

On the 25th of April, 1891, the family celebrated his 88th birthday with a family reunion at the parental home where dinner was served from a table made from these broad planks. In the following November his casket was placed in a box made of some of the same lumber at his request. Then he was laid to rest in the family burying ground by the side of his wife who had preceded him to the grave four years before. Like Jacob of old, he wanted his family buried on the ground he had purchased with his own money and most of the the family is buried at this old home.

Thus ended his life, whose checkered career was marked by honest toil and many hardships, but Mr. Campbell lived to enjoy prosperity in his old age. He saw Warren County develop into one of the foremost counties in the state and Bowling Green grow from a mere hamlet to a prosperous and flourishing town. He reared a large and influential family and left a heritage of a life well filled with good deeds and honesty of purpose.

HELEN GILLMORE SMITH THOMAS

A dear friend and club member departed this life 24 March 1986—a lady who loved genealogy and helping others find their ancestors.

Helen Gillmore Smith Thomas was born 23 May 1896 in Warren County, Kentucky to Lula Carter and James Howard Gillmore and lived most of her life in Warren County. On 24 December 1916, she married James Ewing Smith and they had one child James William Smith, born 12 Jan 1918. Mr. Smith was killed in a farm accident on 29 July 1918 and Helen was married second on 29 December 1929 to Clint Thomas. They enjoyed a long, happy life until his death in the 60's. They owned and operated the Thomas Flower Shop. She loved working with flowers.

She was a lady who devoted so much to genealogy. She gladly gave of her time and knowledge, and her door was always open to anyone asking for help. She knew more of Warren County's history and people than any other person and helped people all over the United States trace their ancestors.

We owe so much to Mrs. Thomas for having the foresight to save the old records of this county. Several years ago the Warren County Courthouse decided to remodel and discard many old records. Mrs. Thomas and Nora Ferguson climbed down into the basement and saved the old marriage bonds and other records. They took them home, placed each one in a separate envelope with name and date recorded on the outside. These records are so invaluable as many give other data such as the parents' names, and this information may not be recorded anywhere else. These records are now housed in the Helen Thomas and Nora Ferguson Collections in the Manuscript Department of the Kentucky Building Library at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green.

She was one of the founders of the Patrick Gillmore D.A.R. Chapter, which was named for her ancestor. Helen was a member of the First Christian Church, Warren County Historical Chapter, Eastern Star and other clubs. She loved music and played the organ for many of the above organizations.

Mrs. Thomas had tragedy in her life, but she was a fighter and endured it. She was a very independent person who always said, "I want to depend on no one." She was able until her death to have this wish as she lived by herself. A gracious lady, whom I loved dearly, she will be remembered and sadly missed by so many.

RUVA JONES HALLIBURTON

Ruva Hilliburton, wife of our president Ute Halliburton, died 15 April 1986. She was a jovial lady, who always had a smile on her face.

She was born 22 May 1914 in Weakley County, Tennessee, the daughter of Mary Ann Elizabeth Brundige and William Wayne Jones. She married Ute Halliburton and they were blessed with two children. Their daughter Betty was born 1 Dec. 1940 and married Joerg Seitz. They have one daughter and live in Bowling Green. Their son Jerry has a son and daughter and lives in Houston, Texas.

Ruva was graduated from the University of Tennessee Junior College and received her BS degree from University of Tennessee in 1937. She taught school for several years at Woodland High, Lebanon and Richardsville Schools. She was a representative for World Book Child Craft.

She was a member of the First Baptist Church in Bowling Green. Being an accomplished pianist, she played for the Senior Adult Fellowship and the Old Hymners, a group that sings at various nursing homes and other affairs. She was a member of the Home Economist Club, a loyal and active member of the Southern Kentucky Genealogy Society of which she was Hospitality Chairman for several years always ensuring that everything was perfect for our dinners. She was active in other clubs and gave so much of herself for others.

A favorite hobby was weaving and she made wonderful pieces for so many people. She placed her loom at the church so weaving could be seen by others. She gave a program to our Society on weaving, which was enjoyed by everyone.

I was fortunate to have Ruva in one of my genealogy classes a few years ago. She brought her tape recorder to each class to make sure she wouldn't miss anything. Doing this made her most thorough in using research tools accurately. I am happy that I could be of help to her in finding her ancestors.

Ruva loved camping. She and Ute spent many happy times camping in many states.

She was a lady who always could be best in her fellow man. Her jovial personality will be missed by all of us. She is gone, but will never be forgotten.

THE LIBRARY CORNER

It is the goal of the S.K.G.S. Library Committee to complete the indexes (or tax lists) for Kentucky and surrounding states up to 1850, at which time we hope to begin buying the 1860 indexes for Kentucky and surrounding states. The Committee has also recently placed an order for the following books: The Roster of South Carolina Patriots in the American Revolution, Early Georgia Intestate Records, Index to Tennessee Confederate Pension Applications.

HINES FAMILY OF BUTLER AND WARREN COUNTIES, KENTUCKY
DESCENDANTS OF HENRY HINES, SR.

FIRST GENERATION

- (1) HENRY HINES, SR., the father of the Hines family which settled in Warren and Butler Counties, Kentucky, between 1803 and 1820, was born in 1732 in Campbell Co., VA and died in Charlotte Co., VA in 1810. He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, as was his brother James Hines, who died in service. Henry Hines, Sr., a prosperous planter, first married Dorcas Kelly, also of Campbell County. By this marriage there were six sons and three daughters. After her death, he married Elizabeth Harvey, moved to Charlotte Co., Virginia, and had two sons and two daughters. After Henry's death, she married second Lewis Jackson. All the children by his first marriage settled in the western part of Warren County, except Tobitha Hines, who married Thomas Parsons and settled in northern Kentucky, and Elizabeth Hines, who married Jack Puckett and settled in Butler County. The four children by the second marriage all settled in Butler County, Kentucky. All of the sons were above the average height, most of them over six feet and all had (as did the daughters) a good English education. The descendants of these thirteen children are scattered over many states union and number many hundreds.

SECOND GENERATION

- (2) JOHN HINES, son of Henry, Sr. and Dorcas (Kelly) Hines (1), was born in Campbell Co., VA, October 21, 1771 and died in Warren Co., KY, July 30, 1853. He married first on March 19, 1795 in Charlotte Co., VA, Sarah Davis, born @1779, and died 1819, the daughter of Temple Davis, Sr., of Culpeper Co., VA. He then married his first wife's widowed sister, Nancy (Davis) Herald, who was born in Virginia @1788. John, the first of the family to migrate to Kentucky, came with his family in 1803 through Cumberland Gap over the old Wilderness Road and settled on the waters of Gasper River, thirteen miles west of Bowling Green, Kentucky. He lived a number of years in this locality, eventually moving to what is now known as the Ches Wiley Place on the east bank of Gasper River, where he built a saw and gristmill, known for many years as Hines Mill. He prospered greatly, was unusually successful and accumulated a large fortune. He was sheriff of Warren County for several years and was a large tobacco planter with about 3,000 acres of land and over 100 slaves. He wrote an excellent hand, and the deeds, contracts and other legal papers that have been preserved show that he was a man much above the average in business attainments. He was a member of the Methodist Church, as were all of his brothers and sisters. He served as a major in the War of 1812 and was transferred from the 61st Regiment, 20th Brigade to the 25th Regt. on January 16, 1815.
