We turn again to one of the many historical articles written by Mr. R. T. Martin and published in the early days of this century in the Greenville newspapers. This one was copied from one of Mr. Martin's scrapbooks and unfortunately bears no date or place of publication. It has much family history in it, so may be of help to some of our readers.

WILLIAM MARTIN

We give here a sketch of the family of William Martin, a pioneer settler in Muhlenberg county. He was a son of Thomas Martin of Virginia, who was said to be a son of John Martin, born in England and emigrated to Virginia. Thomas Martin was a soldier of the revolution of 1776. He married Susannah Walker, in 1840, and to them were born and reared five children, three boys, William, born in Goochland county, Va., 1776; Dabney, born 1778, Nancy, born 1779, Betty, born 1774 and Hutson, born 1781. After the death of Thomas Martin, his wife and family came to Nelson county, Ky., in about 1796, where they remained a few years. (See note following end of article.)

Dabney Martin, the second son of Thomas Martin, went south and married and located at Decatur, Ala., where he raised a large family, the descendants of whom have drifted westward.

William Martin, the oldest son of Thomas Martin married Jane Campbell, who was born in Virginia in 1776, the same year her husband was born, two months between their births, two months between their deaths, both dying at the same age, during the year 1851 in their seventy-fifth years of their age. They located a few years in Woodford county, Ky., and in 1805 came to Muhlenberg county and settled five miles west of Greenville.

Hutson Martin, the third son of Thomas Martin, married Ann Lockridge who was born in 1787 and died in 1879 and was the daughter of Colonel Lockridge, of Tennessee, a soldier of the revolution. They also came to Muhlenberg county and settled six miles west of Greenville near William Martin's. Hutson Martin died in 1838.

In this article we shall only allude to the family of William Martin. To William Martin and Jane Campbell Martin were born and reared seven children, five boys: Thomas L., born in 1801, died in 1874; William C., born 1802, died in 1890; Dabney A., born 1809 and died 1885; Charles C., born 1811, died 1892; Ellington W., born 1819 and died 1903. Two daughters, Fliza Ann, born 1804 and died 1874, and Susannah, born 1807 and died 1840.

Thomas L. Martin, the oldest son of William Martin, married Mahala Bell, born 1811 and died 1886. She was a daughter of Josiah Bell, a pioneer settler from Virginia. To them were born and reared six children, five boys, Dabney M., David H., Richard T., Charles E., and Thomas A. Martin; one daughter, Mattie J. Three of this family survive, David H., Richard T., and Charles E., now old men.

William C. Martin, the second son of William Martin, married America Niblack, born in 1813 and died 1893. She was a daughter of Hugh Niblack. To them were born and reared three children, two sons, Hugh N and Thomas H., one daughter, Ann Florence. Hugh N. is the survivor of this family.

Eliza Ann, the oldest daughter of William Martin, married Samuel M. Wilkins, who was born in 1803 and died 1879. To them were born and reared six children, four boys, Ellington M., John F., Samuel J. and Thomas A.; two daughters, Nancy J. and Susanna L. Of this family we believe but one survives, Susannah L., the youngest child. This family moved to Texas in 1857. The descendants are scattered in the West.

Susannah Martin, the second daughter of William Martin, married James Hancock, who was born 1803 and died in 1857. To them were born and reared two children, a son, Walker, a daughter, Ann P., both dead and the children scattered.

Dabney A., the third son of William Martin, married Elizabeth Britt; to them was born and reared one daughter, Jennie, now Browder, who survives.

Charles C., the fourth son of William Martin, married Nancy Y. Reynolds. She was born in 1820 and died in 1902. She was a daughter of Joseph C. Reynolds. To them were born and reared eight children, five boys, John E., Joseph R., William A., Charles Y. and Dabney T; three girls, Susan M., Betty J. and Ann Y. Five of this family survive, Susan M., Bettie J., Ann Y., William A. and Charles Y. All have passed the meridian of life.

Ellington W. Martin, the fifth son of William Martin, married Emily Elliott, daughter of Richard Elliott. (To them were born) three sons, Richard E., Harold and William, and one girl, Lilly. Ellington W. Martin was married three times, his second wife was Margaret Offut; third wife was Sophrona Campbell Harris. No children.

Thomas L., William C. and Charles C. Martin were progressive farmers and respectable citizens of the county. Dabney A. and Ellington W. Martin were for many years progressive merchants and tobacconists in Greenville. They commenced the manufacture of tobacco in 1840 and continued in that business until 1860. Their tobacco had a wide reputation as the Greenville tobacco and was sold considerably over the South. They operated under the firm name of D. A. and E. W. Martin.

William Martin was the first to raise and ship tobacco from Muhlenberg county. In the early history of the county a novel way was adopted to get hogsheads of tobacco to the shipping place. It was done by rolling the hogshead instead of hauling. William Martin was the first person in the county to roll a hogshead of tobacco to Kincheloe's landing on Green river and shipped it to New Orleans, then the tobacco market. The way they managed the rolling of the hogshead, they put a shaft or a pole in the center of the hogshead, and had it to protrude from each end. They would prize the tobacco around the pole in the hogshead and head it out with the pole projecting at each end, then they would get hickory poles for shafts and fasten them around the projecting end of the center pole and then fasten them to the hames of a horse and would roll it to the shipping point.

William Martin was one of the first to build a water mill in the county. He built a mill near his residence on a little creek known as Jarrel's creek, which heads near the old fair grounds at Greenville and winds its way westward to Pond river in a run of about ten miles. The mill was built on a narrow bottom of the creek, a log and mud dam was made across the creek to projecting hills on each side, about a hundred and fifty yards in length. It caught and held a considerable lake of water which served to run the mill for the most of the year and did a good deal of grinding for the people of the western part of the county. He also constructed a still house at his mill and made whiskey for the natives and old pioneers, which gave them comfort and solace in their exposures and hardships of a rude pioneer life. Most of the old pioneers would keep a barrel of whiskey on hands. It sold for twenty-five cents per gallon and was good. It was not rectified or adulterated and did not make people wild and crazy as it does now, but it would put a good humor into the soul and generally made them kind-hearted, liberal and accommodating, and it seemed to have a religious tendency on the people.

The still had not been running long before there was a considerable religious feeling manifested in the surrounding country. Prayer meetings and protracted meetings were held and a church was organized and regular preaching continued in the neighborhood. William C. Martin was the distiller. He became an expert in the business and made fire water to perfection and hard to beat. Now, a person passing down Jarrel's creek by the spot where the old mill and still house stood, would not believe that a mill was ever run on that spot. Not a vestage of its existence can be seen, no sign of a mill dam. We remember when we were small boys of seeing some signs of the mill and still house.

We shall relate an occurrence that took place while the mill was in operation, which we heard the man that ran the mill narrate. During his milling days he said on one occasion some young men who lived near Friendship church sent word that they would come down to the mill on a certain night to get grinding done; so he went up to the mill about dark to be on hand and while fixing to build a fire he heard a noise as if some persons were hallooing; he went out and answered and the noise continued and not sounding right and seeming to come nearer rapidly, he made for his horse which was greatly agitated. He mounted in a hurry and had gone but a short distance until a frightful scream was uttered close behind him; his animal, being fleet, made an extra spring from the noise, and he urged it on. Soon another scream was uttered behind him. This was kept up until he reached his house which was something over a mile from the mill. He said he believed that whatever it was, when it screamed it would crouch to spring on him and his horse, and then his animal would gain on it and it would have to run to catch up for another spring. After that occurrence the miller never went to the mill at night without company. We would like to have witnessed the race if we could have been where we could have taken in the entire scene. No doubt it would have been exciting as well as interesting. It was never definitely determined whether it was a ferocious beast that chased the miller or a ghost or haunt that were known to be lurking in the neighborhood of the mill.

Just above the mill was a small field that was known for a long time as "Hill's Old Field." A man by the name of Hill settled it in a very early day and built a house and cleared up a field, but soon left it and the county; afterwards ghosts and many wonderful sights were seen there, haunts and all kinds of alarming noises could be heard by those who would go about the place. People would shy around "Hill's Old field" especially at night. When we were a boy, we would sometimes cross the fields and on hearing noise our hair would rise up on our head and we would go through in a hurry. A man by the name of Lee, from North Carolina, was the first person that ever tried to live near "Hill's Old field." He had quite a sensational experience with the ghosts and haunts of the old field. He related that while living near, he was greatly troubled with haunts. He stated that on one occasion, late in the evening, he was sitting in his dour watching the night hawks that were then very plentiful, flying around that he observed a man's head come rolling, tumbling along and through his yard, and making a noise like Mimy, Mimy, Mimy, _____, and then in a short time a human body came trotting along following the course of the head, and that on another occasion, and while sitting in his house, it seemed like a dozen men were tearing up the boards from his roof, and that he could often hear pounding near his house like someone beating on the ground with a maul, and often at night he could hear distressing groans being uttered as if someone was in the throes of death; on another occasion while passing through "Hill's Old Field" it appeared that he was meeting two well dressed young ladies, and as he neared them, he raised his hat and said, "Servant, Ladies," and just then he heard a noise like the loud crack of a wagon whip and something lapped him around the waist and nearly took his breath, and he looked and could see no person. Lee was terribly harassed by the haunts of "Hill's Old Field" and he was compelled to move away to a more quiet and congenial habitation. Lee had some brothers that had some experience with the ghosts and haunts of the neighborhood.

William Martin was one of the first manufacturers of tobacco in Kentucky. He manufactured according to the old custom with beams and levers. He sold his tobacco South. He discontinued the business when his sons, D. A. and E. W. Martin commenced to manufacture in Greenville. William and Hutson Martin's sons and their sons generally were dealers in tobacco.

The family of William Martin have all gone down in death and disappeared from the sight of the living. Many of his grandchildren have followed. Those remaining bear the mark of age and soon shall disappear and be unknown in the bustle of life.

(Note: In typing the preceeding article, one line in the first paragraph was inadvertently omitted, which totally altered the meaning. The correct copy should read: "He married Susannah Walker, who was born in 1754 and died in Todd county, Ky., in 1840..." It might be added that they were married Oct. 24, 1772, in Goochland Co., Va.)
