SCOTTISH CLAN MAP

As Barren County, or more particularly, Barren River Lake State Park, has been chosen as the site of Glasgow, Kentucky's Highland Games and Gathering of Scottish Clans on May 30, 31 and June 1, 1986, it seems most appropriate to print material pertaining to our Scottish heritage. The Scots were among the very first settlers of this area, and our city was named for Glasgow, Scotland.

APOLOGY

It seems as though I am constantly apologizing for the lateness of our quarterly. Thank you for being patient with me. As the saying goes "I am doing the best I can with what I have to do with." I've had several major changes in my life, and have had to concentrate on other things. I won't promise that from now on the quarterly will be out on schedule, but I will promise that it will eventually be out. I am aware that many of you are interested in areas other than Barren county, and I apologize for including so much material from this county, and so little from others. Naturally, I have more access to Barren County material, and this quarterly in particular, has just been "thrown together". I work six days a week as a rural mail carrier, and if any of you think that is an easy job, you 'just ought to try it some time'. Please help me make this quarterly the very best by contributing material for publication, especially on other counties. Just because you already have it doesn't mean it isn't just what someone else is looking for. Then, they may contribute just what you want.

Thanks for your patience.

SCOTTISH HERITAGE

This article was written by Cecil Goode and was published in the Glasgow Daily Times.

Next spring, May 30 through June 1, our community will host for the first time the Glasgow Highland Games. I suppose the idea to host such an occasion was stimulated by the name of our county seat, which is definitely Scottish, plus the obvious fact that such an occasion will be enjoyable and colorful. This means we will be thinking Scottish between now and then.

Besides our county seat's name, which is the same as Scotland's largest city, what claim do we have to enough Scottish heritage to justify our hosting the Scottish Games? First of all, Franklin Gorin confused the origin of our town's name when he wrote more than a hundred years ago that it was named for Glasgow, Virginia. An opposing version has been that our town was named by one of our first town trustees, John Matthews, for his native town in Scotland. To my own satisfaction at least, after some research, I became satisfied that Gorin was wrong and that our Glasgow, in fact, was named for the big town in Scotland. Now, I have other evidence. John Matthews' son, Joseph W. Matthews, in his biography contained in Perrin's History of Kentucky in 1886, recorded that his father had given our Glasgow its name.

We have other reasons, too. As in all of Kentucky, we had a significant settlement of Scotch and Scotch-Irish pioneers who came here from Virginia, Pennsylvania and North and South Carolina. Of course, England provided the greatest number of settlers to the eastern seaboard and to Kentucky; but Scotland, including the Scotch-Irish, was second. Here, let me say that the Scotch-Irish are really Scottish as I will explain later.

Everyone knows that the Scots and the Presbyterian Church go together like ham and eggs. The Presbyterian Church became the established church in Scotland. Glasgow's first church, the First Presbyterian Church, was established in 1802, only three years after Glasgow was founded. Gorin said the Presbyterians had the largest body of members in town. It was 16 years before the next congregation, the Glasgow Baptist Church, was organized.

Many Scots came to our area to claim military land for having fought in the Revolution. In fact, some historians think that without the Scotch-Irish, we could not have won the Revolution. They had contended with the Irish in northern Ireland and with the English both before and after their move to Ulster. The principal reason they came to America in the first place was to escape English discrimination against them, so it was not very difficult for them to line up in America against England.

NUMBERS OF SCOTS: By 1776, some 250,000 people in the thirteen Colonies were Scottish or Scotch-Irish. That was a tenth of the total population. In a statistical analysis of Kentucky's early population, Thomas L. Purvis, writing in the Register of the Kentucky Historical Society, estimated that 24.8% of Kentucky's population in 1790 were Scottish or Scotch-Irish in origin. By 1820, the proportion was 18.2%. The English had the greatest share, of course. In 1790, that share was 51.6%, and in 1820 56.6%. So Kentucky had a sizable contingency of Scots in its population; way ahead of the next nationality which was the Welsh at 8.7%.

The proportion of Scottish ancestry in the country and in Kentucky in particular could well even be greater because in the early days the Scotch-Irish were called Irish, but the Irish did not really start coming to these shores in any significant numbers until the Potato Famine in 1840s. So some of those called Irish were probably actually Scotch-Irish. It is difficult to trace Scottish family names because many original Scottish names became anglicized after the union of Scotland and England.

No fewer than ten of our presidents were of Scotch-Irish ancestry. These included Wilson, Arthur, Jackson, Grant, McKinley, Polk, Buchanan, Cleveland Benjamin, Harrison and Andrew Johnson. Other famous Americans of Scotch-Irish ancestry were Stonewall Jackson, Davy Crockett and Sam Houston. Theodore Roosevelt gave them credit for our sturdy westward movement when he said that they were "the kernel of the distinctively and intensely American stock who were the pioneers of our people in the march westward."

THE SCOTTISH PEOPLE: There were and are today two distinct groups of Scots: Highlanders and Lowlanders. The Highlanders of western Scotland and the adjacent islands of Celtic origin similar to the Irish. The Lowlanders lived in what used to be called Northumbria and were a part of the Roman Empire. Their origin is similar to the English just to the south of them, and they are an amalgamation of the many adventuring and conquering peoples who came there: Celts, Romans, Frisians, Angles, Saxons, Danes, Normans and Flemings. The clans of the Highlands were hereditary as were their leaders' positions. The members were all related by blood. The Lowlanders were small farmers and did not find it too difficult to adjust to the new country of northern Ireland when some of them were settled there by the English.

The Scotch-Irish were mostly Lowlanders settled in northern Ireland by the English after 1603 to provide a foothold against the Irish who were Catholic. One thing in the Lowlanders' favor, so far as the English were concerned, is that they were at least Protestant. The lands that the Scots settled on in Ulster were appropriated from the Irish, which together with the religious difference, has proved to be the reason for the enmity between the Scots and the Irish in northern Ireland even to this day.

There was practically no inter-marriage between the Irish and the Scots who are called Ulster Scots in Britain, a more meaningful appellation than Scotch-Irish. While the Scotch-Irish did not assimilate with the Irish, they certainly have in this country, and with other nationalities as well, so much so in fact that most Americans today have forgotten their Scottish heritage. A main reason is that the Scots became accustomed to being uprooted when they went from Scotland to northern Ireland and then to America within a century or less.

MIGRATION TO AMERICA: As noted, 250,000 Scottish and Scotch-Irish people were living in America by 1776, the time of the American Revolution. There was a mass exodus of Scotch-Irish in the 18th century. Interest in the New World resulted from the tough new laws and policies of the British government against the Ulster Scots. The British government forbade the shipping of livestock into England. Ulster Scots had built up a thriving cattle trade, but the British did not want any competition with English cattle, so the Scots were forbidden to ship into England. When the Scots switched to wool production, the Parliament prohibited the export of their wool to any country. Then to add insult to injury, the Parliament forbade Presbyterians and other dissenters from holding civil and military offices.

By 1717, when the long-term leases under which most of the Ulster Scots were settled on the northern Ireland land came due, the English landlords demanded double and triple rents. The tenants who were poor anyway found the rents impossible, especially with their markets cut off, so they flocked to America. A study of a bundle of papers found in London for the years 1774 and 1775 covering migration from northern Ireland revealed almost unanimous reasons for leaving: rents had been doubled, extra labor was demanded by the landlords, and the price of cattle was drastically reduced.

The migration path was to New England and Pennsylvania initially. From Pennsylvania it was down the Shenandoah Valley into Virginia and the Carolina Piedmont, and on down to the Savannah River in South Carolina. They came to Kentucky during and following the Revolution from those original states. At first, most of them were indentured servants because they were very poor and could not afford their passage, or were prisoners; but because of their toughness, frugality and determination, they made their own way and quickly entered the mainstream of the country.

Between 1820 and 1950, some 800,000 Scots came from Scotland to America and Canada. This was after the big migration of the Scotch-Irish. But many of these Scots chose Canada over the U.S. After Cromwell defeated the Scots at Dunbar in 1650, 900 Scottish prisoners were shipped off to Virginia for forced labor. Many other Scots were sent to America and Canada as prisoners.

SCOTS IN BARREN COUNTY: We cannot be very precise as to the extent of Scottish settlement in Barren County, but it is safe to guess that it was easily as much as in the rest of Kentucky. In fact, it was probably more when we take into account the name of our county seat, the fact that one of the founding fathers was a Scot, that Presbyterianism was the dominant faith during the early years, and the fact that the area was reserved for Revolutionary soldiers. A goodly number of those who fought in the Revolution were of Scottish origin.

Perrine's History of Kentucky, published in 1886, included biographies of prominent people in each Kentucky county. There were 93 listed for Barren County. Two-thirds of these indicated the national origin of their first paternal ancestor - in a few cases, the maternal ancestor was listed as well. Of those indicating their ancestry, 29.5% were Scotch or Scotch-Irish.

The English constituted 27.8%. Considering that we earlier tended to call those from northern Ireland Irish rather than Scotch-Irish, the proportion would probably be higher.

Other nationalities included Irish, 18%; Welsh, 10%; German, 8%; Dutch, 5%; and French, 5%.

The Barren Countians claiming Scotch ancestry were: James Russell Barrick, Samuel B. Hatcher, James A. Hindman, Joseph W.
Matthews, Erastus Logan Owen, B. Mills Parrish (mother), James F. Price, Christopher C. Terry, William S. Terry, George C. Young.

THE SCOTTISH CHARACTER: Being generally poor yet hardy, the Scottish settlers were continually pushed to the edge of the frontier where they had to carve out their existence the hard way. They were accustomed to standing up for their rights as they saw them, so they combated the Indians and joined very willingly in the Revolution. A Hessian captain wrote about these Scottish soldiers in 1778: "Call this war by whatever name you may, only call it not an American rebellion; it is nothing more or less than a Scotch-Irish Presbyterian rebellion."

They were strong and aggressive and rather quickly made their way not only into the mainstream but to positions of leadership in government and economic endeavors. They were loyal churchgoers and adherents. They pushed education because they wanted a learned clergy. They disliked entrenched hereditary privilege, were independent and self-reliant and pushed for democratic processes and ideals.

One Kentucky industry owes its birth to a Scottish rebellion, the Whisky Rebellion in Pennsylvania. They stood off President George Washington who led a march against the rebel whisky makers in western Pennsylvania - most of them were Scotch-Irish. Congress had levied a tax on whisky, but these tough-minded, independent-spirited frontiersmen never had paid a tax on whisky and they were not about to start, in spite of the Father of the Country. So the whisky makers moved to Kentucky.

In addition to the attributes already mentioned - church loyalty, devotion to education, sturdiness in the backwoods, support of democratic principles, and aggressiveness - they were frugal, honest, family-loving and hard-working. Many of these attributes I think you will find in Barren County today.

From report of Registrar of General Birth, Deaths, and Marriages in Scotland in 1864.
This letter was received while our Editor was on a holiday. Since it is complimentary to our Society and to our Editor, I asked for permission to publish it in "Traces" to share with all of you.

Frances Young Jones

Dear Friends:
I certainly hope you are in existence and going strong!
I was a member of your Society in the early 1970's while living in Belleville, Illinois. Now, two children later and 7 houses later, I am back into my genealogical searches - and living outside Dallas, Texas.

My research centers on the Gorin family: John of Glasgow; his brother Henry of Christian and Logan (my husband's line); and brother Gladin who ended up in Stewart Co. Tenn. Over the years I've located about 900 Gorins from these three brothers and finally computerized boxes of data. Last month I "published" a 350 page book on Henry's descendants. I'm about 3/4 of the way through on Volume II now - John Gorin of Glasgow and his descendants. That's 235 pages so far. As soon as this is finished I'll start on Gladin Gorin.

I have several reasons for writing and hope you can help me out.
1. I would like to rejoin your society. How much are the dues now and how often do you publish?
2. When I was just starting my research in Glasgow, a very special lady in Glasgow helped me tremendously - Martha Reneau. Is she still working with you; if so, how can I contact her? My book on John includes a dedication to her and I'd like to write her.
3. Have you published any more books on Barren County history or compiled any marriage/death indexes? I still have some gaps and am always looking to expand the data I have.
4. Do you know anyone in Glasgow who would know if there existed any photographs of the family of John Gorin? I wrote to the newspaper but they didn't reply. I have only a faded photocopy of Franklin Gorin. Since some of John and Franklin's children lived late into 1800's - 1939 - I would dearly love to find some pictures. I don't know who to ask.
5. Are copies still available of "Times of Long Ago" and if so, what is the price now. Some of my husband's family have expressed an interest, I bought several copies.

I am desperately trying to work out a trip back to your dear city. I was there in 1972 and now have 2 daughters (8 and 11) who desperately want to find their roots!

In closing - here's my husband's lineage
Henry GORIN (b 1768) (brother of John of Glasgow) married Sarah Pell. Their son:

BUCK SHAW CEMETERY

Contributed by Mrs. Margaret L. Hill, P. O. Box 236, Mollusk, VA, 22517.

The Buck Shaw Cemetery is located near Cave City, Kentucky. From the intersection of Rt. 90 and Rt. 31W, travel west on 31W for approximately 1.0 mile. Turn right on Peden Road. Crossing the railroad track, go approximately 0.6 mile, where a gate can be seen on the right. (A wind-flattened barn can also be seen.) The cemetery is north of the gate, in the midst of a field. There are presently (Dec '85) no trees near the gravestones.

My main interest in this cemetery is as the final resting place of Mecca Morris Shaw. Mecca was the mother of my maternal grandmother, Daisy Anna (Shaw) Sanderson. Mecca died when Daisy was only seven months old. Daisy's father, Jacob Robert Shaw, was born 12 May 1849, in Kentucky. He died 15 Nov 1929, at Tarpon Springs, Florida.
Outstanding among the pioneer buildings of Barren County was the Holman Hotel, which was located on Buck Creek about 2 miles west of Rocky Hill (Finney). The first settlement was made at this place in 1809 by Joseph Holman, (this is incorrect, as we will see in documents which will be printed later in "Traces") who built a large residence, and a sulphur springs nearby attracted so much attention and travelers stopping here became so numerous that in 1839 an addition was built to the residence making it an 18 room building and it was then called a hotel.

The Holman Hotel was not on the Stovall Road, which was the main highway from the north to the south and crossed Barren River at Port Oliver, but a good dirt road was maintained from the hotel to the Stovall Road at Rocky Hill.

So noted had the resort become that in the forties and fifties the rich planters from the south came in their fine carriages, drawn by two and sometimes four fine horses, to drink the sulphur water and eat the good meals consisting of ham and turkey, which were usually preceded by a drink of Buck Creek corn whiskey, made by A.M. Lawrence, the pioneer distiller of Buck Creek.

Mr. Lawrence had a daughter, Miss Nancy, known later as "Aunt Nan" who sold whiskey on Buck Creek for 50 years. Aside from her affinity for selling liquor "Aunt Nan" was rated as a good woman, she had many admirable traits of character, was kind and neighborly - but she would sell liquor.

The records show that she served at least a dozen terms in the Glasgow jail for violating the liquor laws, however, it is thought that some of these sentences were unjust, as many believe that some men caught with whiskey would swear that they bought it from "Aunt Nan".

It was not necessary for her to sell whiskey to obtain a livelihood, as her husband, Harmon Bishop, owned a very good farm and besides he, having served as a Bugler in the Union Army during the Civil War, drew a pension, so we see that with "Aunt Nan" selling liquor was a hobby, rather than a necessity.

"Aunt Nan" utilizing her time while serving sentences in the Glasgow Jail, pieced quilts, and at the end of her career she had nine complete quilts.

On past the site of the Nan Bishop house (It burned some years ago) stands an old log house. This farm is now owned by Bryant Green. One of the largely unknown tragedies of Barren County happened here.

In October, 1826, Agnes Harris was married to James Wiltshire. According to his descendants, James Wiltshire was born in England. On or before 1840, he and Agnes moved to Buck Creek. Somewhere around 1854, James died, as did several other members of his family, and others in the neighborhood. (Possibly cholera)
Agnes lived on in this log house, and living with her was at least one of her daughters and some granddaughters.

About 1888, when Agnes was an old woman, she and her family had a visitor. Evidently they had had this same visitor before. His last name was Weaver, but no one seems to be able to remember his first name. It seems that Mr. Weaver lived in Allen County, but often came into Barren to buy whiskey (Possibly from "Aunt Nan")?. When he was intoxicated, he liked to chase the women. He made one fatal mistake. Agnes and her family did not like him.

Several days later, one of the neighbors riding back and forth up the road on business, kept noticing a little dog which would run out of the bushes at him. This dog looked very much like one which belonged to Mr. Weaver. Eventually, the man noticed that the dog had worn a path, and followed it. It led to a very deep sinkhole on what was the Wade Lawrence place (now owned by Jesse Butler of Indiana). Peering down into the sinkhole, he could see something at the bottom, and scraps of what looked like fabric hung on roots, briars, etc., on the sides of the sinkhole.

He alerted the neighborhood, and people began to gather. As word got out, they came in droves, with children and picnic lunches to camp on the site until someone could be found to go down into the sinkhole and retrieve whatever the strange object was below. Much discussion was made, and eventually someone was found who was brave enough to descend into the hole. Plow lines were tied together, and the adventurous young man descended. What he sent back up shocked the people. It was Mr. Weaver, but he was cut up into tiny pieces, as one bystander remembered, about the size of pork chops.

It seems that Agnes and her family had had enough. They killed him, cut him up in little pieces, wrapped the pieces in a quilt, and dragged him to a sinkhole, where they threw him in.

Evidently, they admitted doing this, and the neighborhood must have thought it was deserved, for no formal charges were ever made. The neighbors just asked Agnes and her family to leave, which they did, going to some western state.

This was told to me by William L. Thomas, and was told to him by Henry Payne, who was born ca 1882-84 and remembered going to watch the proceedings as a small child.

Miss Effie G. Wilson, 82, a well-known retired Cumberland County, Kentucky, school teacher, historian, and genealogist died at her home at Marrowbone, KY, Jan. 20, 1986.

She was affectionately known by her pupils and all who knew her as 'Miss Effie'. She possessed a natural talent for winning the attention and respect in the classroom and for making the most difficult subject and assignment easy for her pupils.

She was a graduate of Marrowbone High School and the Old Western Kentucky Teachers College class of 1932 at Bowling Green, KY. Her career in teaching commenced in 1924 at Leatherwood School, a one-room building located on Leatherwood Creek in Cumberland Co., KY. She started teaching in high school at Martha Norris Memorial at Marrowbone in 1933.

'Miss Effie' kept in close contact with her students after graduation, especially those who served in the military. Receiving a letter from her which contained interesting bits of news and words of encouragement was always inspiring. She was among one of the first persons to become a member of the South Central Kentucky Historical and Genealogical Society when it was chartered in 1973 at Glasgow, KY. During her lifetime, she collected a huge amount of genealogy and historical facts which she gladly shared with others.

On the morning of Jan. 20, 1986 she was found lying in bed. During the night 'Miss Effie' passed away quietly in her sleep to become enrolled in the Class that is reserved for the Redeemed.

She was the daughter of the late Melvin A. Wilson and Carrie White of Monroe and Cumberland Co., KY. She was preceded in death by a brother, Harley Wilson in 1985.

Survivors include two brothers, Charlie Wilson and James A. Wilson of Marrowbone, KY.; four nieces, Eva G. Britt of Madisonville, KY.; Kay Hayes of Bowling Green, KY.; Towna Wilson and Micha Wilson of Glasgow, KY.; two great-nephews, Joe Britt and Cy Britt of Madisonville, KY. Funeral services were held at Ballou Funeral Home at 10:00 A.M. on Jan. 22 at Burkesville, KY. with Rev. James Evans officiating. Burial was in the Marrowbone Cemetery at Marrowbone, KY.

Dear friend:

I am now available to do genealogical research in Kentucky and Tennessee. This research will be done at different courthouses and libraries, but mainly at the Department of Libraries and Archives at Frankfort, Kentucky, and the State Library and Archives in Nashville, Tennessee.

I have been involved in genealogical research for over twelve years, having traced my own lines back to their coming to America. I have also dug into the family histories of others, by working for a fee. I love this research work, and want to use my experience to help others. Thus this great offer.

I will research a Surname in either Kentucky or Tennessee, in a particular county or counties of either state or both. I have hundreds of vertical files at my disposal on Tennessee families alone. This collection of files comes from my past research in Tennessee. I have also indexed all census records for all counties of Tennessee 1810 - 1910, giving me quick reference to what county and district in that county a name can be found. I hope to do the same in Kentucky.

My fee for this research is only $40.00, for each Surname. You pay me nothing until you receive my report. At that time I hope you will possibly have another name for me to research. Afterwards your name, address, and the Surname of interest will go onto my mailing list just in case I come up with new information for you. So you see my work for you would never really stop.

I want very much to establish myself as a researcher in Kentucky, and Tennessee. I feel this offer is a good way in which to do that. I hope you will give me an opportunity to help you or anyone that you might know with genealogical research in Kentucky and Tennessee. Give me a try - put me to work today.

Sincerely yours,

Terry G. McBroom
