A Valentine Message

IT WAS A VERY GOOD YEAR

As the Southern Kentucky Genealogical Society moves into its new year and Tenth Annivarsary Celebration we wish to take a moment to recapture the highlights of 1986. It was, indeed, a very good year. Under the leadership of Ute Halliburton, the Society and friends purchased and donated to local libraries books with a value over $2,000. Eight of our members completed and published books. We welcomed many new members--both local and nationwide. The 1986 Fall Festival was a great success with everyone enjoying the friendship, speakers, delicious food, book fair, and, of course, exchanging and comparing our genealogical notes. Our long-awaited Surname Index became a reality and we had an enjoyable and informative array of speakers for our monthly meetings. Christmas was celebrated by a musical program, followed by a beautiful dessert buffet. The year came to a nostalgic close before the soft twinkle of the yule logs burning in an open fire at the enchanting home of Betty and Tom Lyne, as they treated the Society to a Christmas Season open-house.

"Hooray" This Is Our Tenth Year

The Southern Kentucky Genealogical Society was organized Thursday 13 October 1977 at the Bowling Green Public Library. A regional name was adopted to include Warren and surrounding counties.

Teaching classes in genealogical research caused me to realize the great need for such a society and with the encouragement of my students a dream became reality. Thirteen persons attended the organizational meeting and it was agreed that all persons present at the next meeting would be the charter members.

The following are charter members including the officers:

President Vice President Secretary Treasurer Historian Publicity Hospitality

Other Members:

Fave Adamson Melvin Adamson Sue Evans Colleen Garrett Joseph Stephen Hays Ann Hocker Rosa H. Isbell

Claire Brawner Davenport J. David Evans Mary Frances Williams Dana Harlow Martha Jackson Virginia DeVries Beverly Wells

Sadie Howell Betty Lyne Billie Maxwell Lloyd Raymer Wilma Stringfield Juanita Wilcher

Our quarterly, THE LONGHUNTER, has a three hundred plus mailing list. We have annual seminars, have published several books and have purchased thousands of dollars in books and all types of research materials which have been donated to the Kentucky Library and the Bowling Green Public Library. Preservation of local court records in the region has also been promoted. Through the efforts of this organization many have established their lineages due in part, to the informative monthly programing.

At this time I would like to THANK each and every member for your hard work, dedication and loyalty which has made this society a successful venture.

CLAIRE BRAWNER DAVENPORT, Founder

THE SAGA OF THE YANKEE PEDDLER

by Kenneth C. Thomson, Jr.

The Yankee Peddler, more than any other person, influenced the lives of our ancestors on the frontier. Had it not been for this unique group, our forebears may not have survived the isolation to which they were captives. A more profound legacy cannot be found in the annals of American history.

History is more than scholarly accounts of wars, formal politics, religion and genealogical research. A yerning and fascination for a knowledge of daily life should take top priority in our quest for the best of a world that gave us our civilization.

Cicero once wrote: "To be ignorant of what happened before you were born is to live the life of a child forever." Remember from whence you came, where you are and where you are going.

Vacations are many times scheduled around historic areas which reveal to us the multiple talents of our ancestors. Fine design and craftsmanship can readily be found in their architecture, furniture and in every area of human endeavor. Historic recreations are not only informative but give us unlimited pleasure.

The Yankee Peddler was the settlers' link with the outside world. He came bringing real necessities called notions such as needles, pins, buttons, combs, table knives and spoons. Due to a shortage of hard money, most transactions were done by the bartering system, known to many as horse trading. The most important item that he brought was NEWS from the east and his own COMPANIONSHIP.

In 1650 Boston became the birthplace of the Yankee Peddler. It was here, in the largest port in the Colonies, that a way of life and living emerged that was to last for three-hundred years. This pipeline was to link the east with the settlements of the middle west and south.

The first peddlers in America were sailors from British ships who brought small notions on their person. The arrival of ships was announced by the town crier, who at all times carried a brass bell and a telescope.

Boston, during this early period, was a town of ten-thousand inhabitants living in sapling houses which were plastered inside and out. The brickyard supplied only enough bricks for chimneys. Log dwellings were unheard of until the coming of the Swedes several generations later. There were no named streets, no paved streets and pigs rooted at will.

The only bits of color to found in the town were the signs over the ORDINARIES. These signs carried the name of the establishment and, for the benefit of the unlettered, a representative picture depicting the type of facility.

In the town, as on the frontier, there was a cash shortage and in Boston this problem was alleviated by using Spanish doubloons. By 1652 the General Court of Massachusetts set up the first mint in the colonies and our country's first coin was minted and called the PINE TREE SHILLING.

HOW DID YOU KNOW THAT A PEDDLER WAS HONEST AND RELIABLE? HOW DID THEY TRAVEL: FROM INDIAN TRAIL TO EXPRESSWAY? TO BE CONTINUED IN THE NEXT EDITION.

Bowling Green Democrat, Bowling Green Kentucky April 27, 1872

An Outline of the Career of a Venerable Citizen of Warren County, Kentucky

A few weeks since, I enjoyed the hospitality of one of Warren County's venerable sons. At my request, he related to me some of the most interesting facts connected with his history, and as this estimable old gentlemen has a great many friends among the readers of your valuable paper, perhaps it will not be asking too much of you to give space to this sketch.

____ROBERT_GRAHAM

ROBERT GRAHAM was born on the 11th day of February, 1796, in the village of Cartersville, situated on the James River in the State of Virginia. His father died in 1802, and young Robert, in 1805, was sent to Richmond by his widowed mother for the purpose of learning a trade. He was placed under a master to learn the trade of brick-laying and plastering. While he was an apprentice in 1810, he witnessed the celebrated burning of the Theatre in the city of Richmond and assisted in burying sixty of the unfortunate persons who were burned. I had often read a description of that awful scene, and with interest, too; but when Mr Graham, in his good old-fashioned way, told me what he knew about it, it was a hundred times more interesting than ever before.

After Mr. Graham had served an apprenticeship of ten years, he left Richomnd and a cruel master who had often whipped him unmercifully with a cowhide, and went to Lynchburg in pursuit of work. From Lynchburg, he went to Charlottesville and assisted in building the Virginia University, under the direction of the illustrous Thomas Jefferson. He was personally acquainted with President Jefferson and was a guest at his house at different times.

In 1818, Mr. Graham left the Old Dominion to seek his fortune in Kentucky. He settled in Bowling Green, which was at that time a very small village. There were at that time four drygoods stores in the place. Messers Alexander, Graham, Samuel Scott Brooking and Stubbins were the drygood merchants.

Mr. Graham married Miss Elizabeth Renick, daughter of Col. William Renick who resided on Barren River near Martinsville, in October 1819. He removed from Bowling Green to Martinsville in 1820, and in 1833, removed from Martinsville to his presnet home, situated eight miles southeast of Bowling Green, one and a half miles from the village of Green Hill. Mr. Graham's wife died in 1860 and he was married again in 1862 to the widow Cassaday. He is the father of twelve children, eight of whom are now living, three in Tennessee, two in Texas and three in Kentucky. He has forty grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Mr. Graham has continued to work at his trade up to the present time. He assisted in building a college in 1819 in Bowling Green on the knoll now known as College Hill. Subsequently, he helped to build the Green River Hotel and many other buildings in town and county. He is now in his seventy-seventh year but enjoys excellent health and can do as much work in a day as two-thirds of the young men.

Mr. Graham was deprived of an education. He, however, learned to read and write after he became a married man, is one of the old fashioned, hospitable Kentuckians and knows how to treat his friends in true Kentucky style. May he live long, and may his example of industry, honesty and piety be imitated by the young men of our Country. Compiler: Kenneth Thomson 13790 Louisville Rd. Smiths Grove, KY 42171

by Wendell Crow

The following article was written by the late Wendell Crow, former editor and publisher of The Clay County Democrat in Rector, Arkansas. The article first appeared in that paper. The editor regrets no date was attached. We thank Mr. and Mrs. Rivers Ford for passing this informative piece on to us to share with the readers of THE LONGHUNTER.

Everybody has parents and grandparents and numerous cousins of varying degrees, but few are certain how to figure the "once removed" angle, and fewer still have ever encountered such a term as "second grandparents". At least, that's been my experience.

On Figuring Cousins

One of the two principal ways of figuring relationships, the Common or Canon Law method is now in general use and gives a more accurate description of cousin relationships than the Civil Law method, according to the seventh edition of the "How Book for Geneologists."

It explains, by use of a diamond-shaped chart, the relationship of descendants of a common progenitor down to the tenth generation.

A simple formula for figuring cousin relationships given in that book follows:

Two people descended from a common ancestor want to find out how they are related. Here's how they start:

Count down the number of generations from the common ancestor, for each and subtract one (1) from the smaller of the two numbers. This is the cousin relationship.

Example: Say one of the persons is seven generations later than the common ancestor, and the other is four generations down. One from four [the smaller number] leaves three, so they are third cousins.

Then subtract the smaller number from the larger number (7 minus 4 equals three). This gives the "times removed" angle.

So the two are third cousins three times removed [SC SR].

Another example: Subject No. 1 is 9 generations down from the common ancestor, and Subject No. 2 is 6 steps down. (6 minus 1 equals 5th cousin) (9 minus 6 equals 3 times removed.)

So they are fifth cousins three times removed.

Of course, if the steps down from the common ancestor are the same, you simply subtract one (1) from that number, and it gives you their cousin relationship, and there are no times removed to be figured. Remember the common ancestor is never counted when figuring the steps down to the subject.

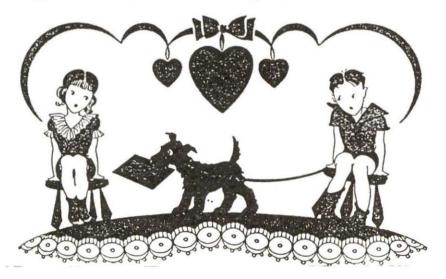

Another thing to remember: The child of your parents' brother or sister is your first cousin. However. your first cousin's child is NOT your second cousin, as some believe, but your first cousin once removed.

(The child of your first cousin once removed is your first cousin twice removed, and his child is your first cousin three times removed.

Your second cousin is actually your grandparents' brother's (or sister's) grandchild. That second cousin's child is your second cousin once removed, and his child is your second cousin twice removed, and his child is your second cousin three times removed, and so on.

And this is where your second grandparents come in. The parents of your great-grandmother and great-grandfather are your second great-grandparents and you are a second greatgrandson (or daughter) to them. (2GGS) etc.

Simple, isn't it?

The Burwell Cox family came with the Mobley's (also referred to in some sources as Moberly) to Arkansas in February 1830. Rebecca's parents, Isaiah and Frances Mobley, stopped on Lee's Creek in Crawford County, while Burwell went on to Cane Hill where his brother, Coleman Cox, lived.

There are a number of land transfers on the Warren County, Kentucky records made by Burwell. Some include:

Burwell Cox to Jackson Cox Book 13, page 365 (Jackson Cox was Burwell and Coleman's brother. He came to Arkansas for a very short time and then went back to Warren County, Kentucky, where he married Sarah (Sally) Johnson. Jackson Cox's daughter, Narcissa Cox, married Thomas Price, son of Daniel Price and Sarah Perkins. It is at this point that our Price line married into the Cox line. Burwell Cox to Benjmain S. Burwell and his wife Rebecca, and their daughter, Hester Ann Cox, were received into the Cane Hill Congregation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church on September 12, 1847. They later were members of the Salem Congregation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, Boonsboro, Arkansas, 1865-1905. It is stated in the Session Minutes of this church that Burwell died 1874, and also, on page 17, April 17, 1875, letters of dismission and recommendation are granted to S.A. Tarbet, Hester Tarbet, Rebecca Cox, Elvira Cox, Louise Morrow, Lenora Carter, and Lamar Carter.

A HISTORY OF EARLY LOGAN COUNTY, KENTUCKY

by

Mrs. A. V. (Louise) Shrum (continued from Vol. IX, No. 4)

A history of our county could not be complete without one story of Jesse James. This one was told to Milton Baker, news commentator, by Mayor Briggs--(Mrs. Margaret B. Stratton's book, Place-Names of Logan County and Oft-Told Tales). "When the Southern Bank of Kentucky was wound up, it was succeeded at Russellville by the banking house of Nimrod Long and Company, in which Mr. Norton retained an interest. Mr. Long had from the beginning been a very efficient director of the Southern Bank and was one of Mr. Norton's more devoted admirers and friends. This attachment lasted as long as both were alive. Away back in the 1840's, John L. Norton and Nimrod Long became interested in a young man of Logan County who had been recently licensed to preach in the Baptist Church and seemed very anxious to get a good education. He went to the Baptist College at Georgetown, Kentucky, and his bills were paid by Norton and Long. While there he married and moved to Missouri.

In the spring of 1868, three men stopped into the bank at Russellville and proposed to sell a bond which they exhibited.

Mr. Long examined it, and finding some irregularities in its issure, declined to buy. They then produced a large bank note, and asked that it be changed, but the note was believed to be spurious, and the change was not given. The man then told Mr. Long that they were cattle buyers and would be some days in the county, and left the bank.

In a day or two they called again, and after this, again, each time making some pretext for their visits, but never transacting any business.

On the 20th of March, about two o'clock p.m., when both the clerk and cashier had gone to dinner, these men again entered the bank, leaving a fourth man at the door, and another on horseback in the street.

Approaching the counter rapidly, they again demanded the change for their spurious note, and were again refused by Mr. Long, who was the only officer in the bank. Upon his refusal, they drew pistols, two of them leaped over the counter, and Mr. Long ran into the back room only to be met by the other man who had just entered that room from a side door.

This man shot him, and leaving him for dead, joined his companions in the front room, and robbed the bank of about nine thousand dollars, with which they and their companions on the outside made good their escape.

Mr. Long was only stunned by the shot, so that he was quickly on his feet and gave the alarm on the street, but not in time to secure the capture of these bold freebooters.

Jesse James, the leader of this gang, was the son of Robert James, the young preacher who was educated by Long and Norton.

Mr. G. W. Norton, though then living in Louisville, sustained his part of the loss occasioned by the son of the man whom his deceased brother had befriended. Major George Briggs, grandson of Nimrod Long, owns the pistol which was picked up the morning of the robbery.

Stamped on one side of the trigger guard is the name of Frank, and the last name cut into the other side, it read Frank James. Later it was learned that the five were Frank and Jesse James, George and Oliver Shepherd, and Cole Younger.

But an amazing finale came later when the bank president, Mr. Long, received a letter from Jesse James apologizing for the robbery, and sending his part of the loot back by express.

The reason, as before stated, the bank officials had loaned James' father money to study at Georgetown college and become a Baptist minister."

The years 1870-1900 marked Russellville distinctly as a college town. In the year 1856 both Bethel and Logan Colleges began their careers as institutions of higher learning that ranked with any of the institutions of the West.

The years from 1900 to 1930 have been years of progress. But these last thirty years have not seen the forward movement alone. Near the beginning of the century the pendulum seemed to swing backward. Mr. Coffman in his book, The Story of Russellville, gives the following account: "Russellville, the home of so many statesmen and soldiers, the town which had cradled so many legislators who made the law, so many executives who administered the law, and so many judges who interpreted the law, now became the scene of lawless violence and saw the law trampled under foot. No matter what the provocation nor the circumstances, the good citizen and the true patriot deplores the ruthless act of the cowardly mob and is humiliated when the precincts of his home town are invaded by the beat of the night-riders' hoofs. And this shame came to Russellville in the early years of the Twentieth Century.

It was in 1897 that the Procters were taken from the Russellville jail and hanged to a tree just outside the city limits. Bill Procter's gang operated in and around Adairville. Several murders were attributed to them. It was said that they took Ed Traughber out and hung him. A colored man named Prince Wells said that he drove the surrey when they killed Traughber. But Prince Wells died and at the trial the Procters were acquitted. And then a man named Crafton was killed. Bill Procter and his brother and his brother's son were arrested and placed in jail at Russellville to await trial. There was just cause for the good people in and near Adairville to be aroused. The Procters deserved punishment if found guilty. But the court was not allowed to function.

In the night a mob came to Russellville and entered the jail. Bill Procter would not be taken. He was killed in his cell. Arch and Dink Procter were carried out of the town. The next morning they were hanging from a little double cedar tree at the foot of Gardner's Knob.

This little cedar tree has a history. Seven men have been hanged from its limbs. First the two Procters, who were white men. Later five negroes followed them and met death at the same place.

In 1907 the town was stirred by a legal execution. Four men assaulted German girl on the highway from Russellville to Lewisburg. This time the law was allowed to take its course, and on February 15, 1907, Polk Fletcher and Guy Lyon paid the price with their lives. The execution took place in an enclosure in the jail yard. The other two men who were implicated received sentences to the penitentiary.

And then came the troubles of the tobacco planters. In 1907 prices paid for tobacco had gone so low that the planters felt forced to organize for self-protection. Men who failed to go into the organization were intimidated. During the winter of 1907-1908 a peaceful assembly of farmers rode one day on horseback into Russellville, near noon, for a conference with the tobacco buyers. Hundreds of them were in the procession. But not waiting for peaceful means to remedy the situation, on the night of January 3, 1908, a band of night-riders entered Russellville, took possession of the town and burned two large tobacco warehouses. The same trouble was prevalent in Western Kentucky at the time. Many warehouses were burned and intimidations of planters continued until the Governor sent troops into Western Kentucky and power of the night-rider was broken.

In the same year, Rufus Browder, a Negro, killed his employer, a Mr. Cunningham, who lived near Olmstead, ten miles from Russellville. Browder wanted to get off from work for a baseball game one afternoon. Cunningham told him he could not spare him, as the wheat cutting season was in progress. When Browder came into the field in the afternoon dressed in a base ball suit, there was an argument, and Browder shot Cunningham and killed him."

The Twentieth Century of progress and advancement has been ushered in first by a backward and then by a forward movement. We have only to drive around in the county to see the great improvement in rural homes and the advancement that has been made in farm life. The next thirty years will be written by those of the present and of the coming generations. Logan County has a rich heritage and has splendid traditions to hand down to those of today. But the making of the record today lies only in hands of those who are living and loving Logan County in this, our own age.

LINEAGE and RECORDS

by Glenn M. Turnell

The subject of lineage could actually read LINEAGE-RECORDS as an hyphenated word, as no lineage could ever be established without records. This year of 1986 is the 900th of the first all encompassing record we English speaking people have of the citizens of a state. In 1085 King William I, during his Christmas court commissioned the Domesday survey. I rather imagine that when most of us think of this survey we assume it lists the names of all the people of England, a total of some one and one-half-million persons, but most of them did not have names as we know them, that is, first and last names. Only a very limited number of the actual population was listed by name. To give you an idea of the record as presented to the King, I will show one area only, Albury, in Surrey England in the year 1086. The entry in the DOMESDAY SURVEY relating to Albury and translated from the Latin, is told by R. Charles Walmsley, F.R.I.C.S. in a little booklet published in 1974. The "Doomsday Book" is said to be so named because it judged all men without bias-like the Last Judgement--named landowners only and showed the value of their holdings and the extent. I hope the following account of the Survey made under William the Congueror will be of as much interest to others as it was to me.

DOMESDAY SURVEY Relating to ALBURY

In Blacheatfield (Blackheath) Hundred.

Roger holds of Richard Eldeberie. Azor held it of King Edward. It was then assessed for 4 hides; now for $2\frac{1}{2}$ hides. The land is for 6 ploughs. In demesne there is 1, and (there are) 11 villeins and 5 bordars with 6 ploughs. There is a church; and 4 serfs; and a mill worth 5 shillings. Wood worth 30 hogs (a year). Of these hides, a knight holds 1 hide; and (he has) there in demesne $\frac{1\frac{1}{2}}{2}$ ploughs, and 1 villein and 1 serf; and there is an acre of meadow. The whole, in the time of king Edward, was worth 10 pounds, and afterwards 100 shillings; now 9 pounds.

The following Notes help explain some of the terms and names of the above.

- Blackheath Hundred. A county was divided into Hundreds, each of several parishes, for what we should call police purposes.
- 2. Roger d'Abernon, whose descendants held Albury for five centuries.
- Richard de Tonebridge, ancestor of the great house of de Clare, Earls of Hertford and of Gloucester.
- Eldeberie--i.e. 'the old Bury'. Doubtless derived from the Roman enclosed settlement on Farley Heath.
- Azor. An Englishman who held large estates of King Edward, and did not lose them all at the Conquest. He had made his peace with the Conqueror, but died before 1086.
- Assessed for 4 hides. A hide was 120 acres, but it does not follow that there were really 480 acres here. It is what we call a rateable value, so reckoned for purposes of taxation.

- 7. Now--i.e. in 1086 the rateable value is lowered.
- 8. 6 ploughs. This almost certainly refers to an ancient valuation of King Edward's days, not to any definite measure of land.
- 9. demesne. The part of the estate farmed by the lord's bailiff. 'Home Farm', we should call it.
- 10. there is 1--one plough, meaning one team of eight oxen.
- 11. villiens. Small farmers who had land of their own, worked by them in co-operation, of which they could not be deprived, but who owed certain work on the lord's land and certain payments, and were not free to leave. There were 11 villein holdings here, with one man responsible for each, but most probably with several sons, brothers or relatives on each holding. The population can not be estimated from this.
- 12. bordars. Tenants in a lower class than villeins, perhaps with only a cottage and garden and no farming land. The same remark applies to this number as to that of the villeins.
- church. The Church of Albury Park bears traces of the church mentioned here.
- serfs. Absolute slaves who could be bought and sold. Probably heads of families. They had no holdings of land, as even bordars had on a small scale.
- 15. mill. A water mill. Dues paid for grinding at it worth 5s a year. The villeins would grind their corn here.
- 16. Wood worth 30 hogs. Wood from which thirty hogs could be provided a year, but it would feed very many more. Thirty killed.
- 17. a knight. In all probability this unnamed knight was ancestor of the family afterwards called de Weston. Weston Street is the correct name of the main street of Albury village. De Westons held it as a separate manor under the de Clares (see Note 3).
- 18. 1¹₂ ploughs. This sound mysterious, but a plough means eight oxen. He had twelve oxen--enough to draw one plough with four over. Surrey farmers would plough with less than eight oxen. He also had two tenants--his managing farmer and one slave under him.
- 19. worth 10 pounds--i.e. in the time of King Edward, before 1066.
- 20. afterwards. After the Conquest of 1066 and the ravage of the country by the march of William's army. which came through or near Albury. The value of the land dropped by one-half that year (1066/7).
- now. In 1086, it has nearly recovered, but the lowered assessment for taxation is allowed to stand.

From the time of the survey in 1086 until Runnymede on June 15, 1215 when the great charter--MAGNA CHARTA--was granted by King John of England, the people had started to add second or SURNAMES to the first names and many occurrences of their lives were being recorded, such as marriages, births and deaths. Most of these records were kept by the churches of England (as well as those of other countries) and even today, if one knows where to look--county or area--many of them are availaable. When the ownership of property became more prevalent, the records were kept by the civil authorities.

By the time of the first settlement in 1607 in this country some of the people, not all of course, were able to read, held property which could be sold or traded and the transactions had to be recorded. From these records we are often able to carry down generation after generation of a family to form a pedigree. Without records it would be almost impossible to do this. I know there are some cultures where the genealogies are given orally by a very limited number of people, such as was done by the Hawaiians, but even they have now had this information put into book form. When a people have writing they have records, when they do not, there is no way to establish a true genealogy.

From the time of the first settlement in this country until just before the Revolution, records were fairly well kept, both in the churches and by the civil governments, primairly because of property, and names of the titheables which were the principal source for taxes. Marriages, births and deaths were often kept by local ministers of some of the churches as their private property, but many Parish Churches still have existing records which are valuable for research. One of the most informative and complete sources for church records is William Wade Hinshaw's ENCYCLOPEDIA OF AMERICAN OUAKER GENEALOGY. The Quakers kept meticulous records and even though there may be no indication that an ancestor was a Quaker, these records are worth looking into, especially up until the early 1800s when the people started migrating over the mountains and from older states of the coast into the Northwest Territory and other new areas of the country. The hardest period of research seems to be from the end of the Revolution until the first complete census of 1850; until then land records and sometimes Wills were kept but not much else because of distances involved to seats of government and the lack of laws. It was not until after the early 1900s that most of our states required that vital statistics be recorded, which certainly made for easier research.

One of the most important and often overlooked places for records are the family Bibles or Record Books. The prize possession of many of our early families was the Bible. In these were recorded the marriages, birth and deaths, often for a number of generations, and these Bibles were passed down from member to member of a family. If a family Bible is available for research, feel most fortunate! If the contents of any known Bible have not already been published in some form, see that it is done, so the information will not be lost forever from this prime source of LINEAGE-RECORDS.

Searching records can be frustrating, but remember, you have established a bit of history when you have found an answer to a problem and that can be most enjoyable!
