WOMEN IN KENTUCKY

Although not many early records of women in Kentucky are available, women have played a part in all aspects of the development of the state. The first women in Kentucky were Native Americans, of whom we have no written records. According to Women in Kentucky by Helen Deiss Irvin, the first two white women in the Commonwealth were Mary Draper Ingles and Virginia Wiley. Both of these women were brought to Kentucky as captives of the Indians, and both managed to escape and return to their homes in Virginia.

Mary Draper Ingles, the daughter of George and Eleanor (Hardin) Draper, was born in Philadelphia in 1732. She married William Ingles in 1749. In July 1755, while the men were harvesting crops, Shawnee Indians attacked the settlement and captured Mary, her two sons, Thomas and George, and her sister-in-law. After a month long trip along the Kanawha and Ohio rivers the two boys and the sister-in-law were sent to distant villages, but Mary, who had won the respect of the Indians, was made an adopted daughter of the chief. In September 1755 the Indians took Mary and an elderly Dutch prisoner down the Ohio River to Big Bone Lick (Boone County, Kentucky) where the two women managed to escape. After traveling for forty days, they arrived at the farm of an old neighbor, Adam Harmon, who took them to the fort at Dunkard's Bottom where Mary and her husband were united. In 1768 the son Thomas was returned to his family. The younger son, Robert, had died within a few days after being taken from his mother. Mary Draper Ingles died in 1815 at her home in Virginia.

Virginia (Jenny) Sellards Wiley was born in Pennsylvania around 1760. Her father was Hezekiah Sellards. In 1779 she married Thomas Wiley. On October 1, 1789, while Thomas was away, the Indians attacked their cabin on Walker's Creek (Bland County, Virginia). They killed her brother and three of her children. Jenny, who was pregenant at the time, and her baby son were captured and brought to camps in what is today Carter, Lawrence, and Johnson counties in Kentucky. Her young son and the son who was born while she was in captivity were both murdered. When the Indians were camped at the falls of Little Mudlick Creek (Johnson County) she escaped and found her way to Harman's Station on John's Creek. She returned to her home in Virginia with a hunting party. In 1800 Jenny and Thomas, along with their five children born since her escape, migrated to Kentucky and settled in Johnson County. She remained there until her death in 1831.

By 1775 women had begun to move into Kentucky to live. Rebecca and Jemima Boone, along with Esther Whitley, were among the first to arrive. Life for these women, and those who followed, was not easy. They bore the children (usually a very large family), performed the household chores, and often helped the men with the outside work. The following letter written by an early settler's wife to her mother in Virginia gives some insight as to the living conditions in the 1700's.

Gasper River, Kentucky March 2, 1794

Dear Mammy:

King Fraser came to our cabin yesterday and stayed all night with us. He brought us beet and onion seed and gave me a needle and some flax seed.

We came here because Tolliver hired Sam to live on the Ball land and hold it. One of our horses died at Cumberland Gap and Sam sold the other one to a man for some food and ammunition and we made a boat and came down the river to the fort and from there walked here and put up a log cabin. We rowed down the river by night and laid by in the day and we walked three or four nights pretty near all night.

We hear Mr. Tolliver is going to send some more people out here and I wish he would as it is lonesome when Sam is gone.

We have about two or three acres cleared and planted in corn and pumpkins and we have enough venison dried to last for a year. My yellow linsey dress is nearly worn out but the cottonade is not. Sam made me a buckskin apron.

There are folks about twelve miles from us on Big Barren River and a Mr. McFadden who was hunting stray horses stayed all night with us about a month ago. He begged us to come up where he lived and said it was not safe for us here. But we don't feel afraid if it was not so lonesome. King said he was going to meet some surveyors and hunt for some military land.

Sometimes I cry about losing Bounce but Sam says that he knows the Ingin that stuck a tomahawk into Bounce won't ever kill another dog for he put a bullet into his hide.

They (the Indians) were here about one whole day whooping and hollering about - but they were great cowards, Sam says that Tolliver will come out here next year and if he does we will go back on a visit.

Tell everybody howdy and if you see anyone coming here write to me and send me some things. I can get them at McFadden's

Your affectionate daughter, Daphine

After 1792 land in Kentucky was available to veterans of the Continental and Virginia armies, settlers who brought immigrants to the frontier, and to settlers who erected buildings and cleared land. Because of this, many people began to settle in Kentucky, and as more people came and more land was cleared, the state became a more pleasant place in which to live. Evidence of this can be seen in a journal entry of Calista Cralle Long, dated January 6, 1837.

We travelled sixteen miles today........... We came through Elizabethtown and took up one mile from it. This is a small town but has some very fine buildings in it. Stock of almost every kind is still plenty, and I find a great deal of corn standing in the fields. At the most indifferent houses that you find you will see from three to eight horses, two to four cows, ten to forty sheep, ten to twenty hogs, nine to forty geese, and eight to ten bee hives.

And at a tolerable good house you will see from eight to fourteen horses, ten to fifty head of cattle, five to fifteen young mules, fifteen to fifty or eighty sheep, large parcels of geese, hogs and bee hives.

The inhabitants make from three hundred to one thousand weight of sugar and eight to twenty gallons of molasses, I am told, in one season and by one family.

I had heard a great deal said of Kentucky, and I can say, as the Queen of Sheba said of the wisdom of Solomon, the half had never been told.

Just as with many women today, some women of the mid-1800's found it necessary to seek employment outside the home in order to support themselves. What type of employment was available? A look at the Warren County, Kentucky license book, 1832-1879 will show how some of the women in this county were employed. It should be noted that some of these women were apparently good business managers because their licenses were renewed for several years, while others were for only one year.

Mary Wright was first issued a license as a tavern keeper on February 23, 1846. She continued to renew this license through 1865. On December 25, 1865 she was granted a hotel license with liquor privileges. The cost for a tavern keeper license was $10.00; the hotel license, $35.00

Another successful business woman of this time was Mary W. Smith. In 1863 she received a license to keep a tavern at the Morehead House (later became the Helm Hotel), and in 1864 at the Smithsonian House. Also, in 1864 she obtained a license to sell playing cards at a cost of $58.75. In 1866 her report of playing cards sold was for only $8.50. In 1868 she again obtained a tavern license and a hotel license.

When Mary W. Smith left the Morehead House, a license to keep the tavern there was issued to Julia A. Hess. In 1868 and in 1873 she obtained a tavern license without liquor priviledge. But between that time, 1869 - 1874, she had a tavern permit with liquor privilege.

Mary A. Ritter's first license was a hotel license with liquor privileges in 1865. In 1868 - 1874 she had a tavern license. Also, in 1874, for a cost of $50.00, she obtained a license to operate two billiard tables for a period of twelve months. In 1876 she again obtained a hotel license.

Other women obtained a license to operate a tavern for only one year. They were: Catharine T. Payne, 1851; Miss M. C. Delony, 1858; Margaret Houghton, 1873. The cost on all of these was $10.00. In 1858 Julia A. Hobson received a one year permit as a merchant to sell spirits, cost $5.00.

While some women served as tavern keepers at the Morehead Hotel, others were managers of the hotel. Listed as managers are: Sarah Armitage, Camilla Herdman, and Julia Dury.

Other women, preferring to work from their homes, served as caterers. Mrs. Emma Underwood prepared and served wedding suppers and banquets at the Morehead House. The following is a menu and bill for a wedding supper served by Frances Kersey, an African-American caterer. It is dated February 2, 1875.

In 1883 Miss Catherine Garrison served as principal of the College Street school. Listed as teachers at that time were: Mrs. Walker Hines, Miss Alice Barr, Mrs. Elma Hollingsmith, Miss Ada Peart, Miss Mag Calvert, and Miss Mary Dishman. Mrs. Mag Schaffer, Miss Mary Armitage, and Mrs. Alice Hackney were music teachers. Mrs. Schaffer is described as being very distinguished looking. She dressed in black and wore a black silk cape or Persian shawl.

Need an egg shampoo? Mrs. Cora Allen Lippincott would send one to your home for fifty cents. Or you could come to the Helm Hotel and Lena Wilson would give you one for fifty cents, also. Another versatile woman, Mrs. Childress (no first name available), was a beautician, chiropodist and paper hanger. She and her husband had the first automobile in Bowling Green. It had no top, and when they were riding, Mrs. Childress wore a linen duster and a veil tied over her head.

Clothing has always been of importance to women, and the clothing industry has been a source of employment to women for many years. Mrs. Amanda Roberts served as a milliner in 1869, while Mrs. Mag Devries made bonnets. Dressmakers in the 1860's and 1870's were Mrs. Patillo, and Lillie and Mattie Sumpter. The dressmaker in Bowling Green who won national recognition was Mrs. Carrie Taylor. See the article on her in this issue of the Longhunter.

Although, during the 1800's some women were successfully employed, many devoted their full time to the management of their homes, their husband and their children. Often these women, even though placed on a pedestal, led a very sheltered life. They lived in comfortable, spacious homes, had household help and concentrated on the finer things of life, social amenities, travel and the arts.

CARRIE BURNUM TAYLOR

Many women today do not feel well dressed if their clothes do not bear a designer label such as Liz Claiborne or Tommy Hilfiger. In the late 1800's and around the turn of the century a woman could feel stylish and well dressed if she were wearing a Taylor made garment. These garments were designed and produced by Bowling Green dressmaker Carrie Burnam Taylor.

Caroline (Carrie) Burnum was born April 1, 1855 in Bowling Green, Kentucky. She was the daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Hampton) Burnam, and the grandaughter of John Burnam, Kentucky's Confederate government treasurer. The Burnam family had emigrated to Kentucky from Virginia in the early pioneer days.

After receiving an elementary education in the Warren County schools, Carrie attended Cedar Bluff College (later known as Potter College) at Cedar Bluff, Kentucky. She graduated as a member of the class of 1877 with a Bachelor of Arts degree. Desiring to become a fashion designer, Carrie started a small dressmaking business in her home after she completed her education.

In 1879 Carrie Burnam and Aaron H. Taylor were married. Aaron Taylor was born in Greencastle, Warren County, Kentucky. Carrie and Aaron were the parents of two children - William Taylor (1880) and Louise (1882). Louise married Herbert H. Beckwith of Carthage, Missouri.

Mrs. Taylor is described as being a petite woman with graceful carriage who always cut a fine figure in her clothes. While still in school, she began helping classmates plan their garments. After her graduation, Mrs. Taylor continued to show an interest in the girls at the school, and many of them began buying the clothes that she designed. When the girls finished school and returned home, they would write Mrs. Taylor and order more clothes. This was one way in which her business was extended to all parts of the United States.

When Mrs. Taylor's business outgrew her home, she moved to an upstairs building on Fountain Square, then to a larger building on Main street between State and Chestnut streets. Her final location was in a building on State street known as the Legion Home. In 1902 the firm was incorporated as the Mrs. A. H. Taylor Company with a capital stock of twenty thousand dollars. At one time she employed 275 women. The women employed there worked from 6:55 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. six days a week. They were allowed thirty minutes for lunch and were supposed to work with "no gossiping or talking" while they were sewing.

Although, Mrs. Taylor designed the clothes, she did none of the actual sewing. The company made mostly dresses and suits. She would take orders for underwear for a trousseau, her specialty. The thing that set a Taylor made garment apart was the trim - rosettes, intricate buttons, and velvet dog ears.

Each year she made trips to New York City and Europe to buy supplies, sketch models, and cut patterns. It is reported that she would travel to New York City by train, spending two nights in a Pullman car, arrive in New York at daybreak, and after a twelve hour shopping spree in which she would spend anywhere from $100,000 to a quarter of a million dollars in raw materials, she would start on the return trip home. On one trip to Europe, April 1912, she stayed for an extra fashion show, causing her to, luckily, miss the ship for her return trip home. She had booked passage on the maiden voyage of the Titanic.

The Taylor Company operated mainly as a mail order business, and reportedly had 24,000 customers. Her advertisements were engraved cards on which were printed poetic messages. At one time she tried producing a fashion magazine, Styles and the Gist of It, but this operation was not too successful.

Carrie Burnam Taylor died on November 24, 1917 in Bowling Green. She left a successful business and an estate valued at more than $250,000. Her son tried to continue the business after her death, but the "guiding light - Carrie Taylor" had gone out.

MARGARET JETER AND THE BRITISH SOLDIERS

Mrs. Elizabeth Tomlinson of McHenry, Illinois, a long time member of SKGS, submitted the following story about her ancestor.

William Jeter, believed to have been the son of John Jeter, the immigrant, bought land in Amelia County, Virginia, in 1751. The deed to this land, dated October 24, 1751, reads, "William Jeter of Caroline County." When he sold this land the following year to his brother, Thomas Jeter, his deed reads, "William Jeter of Lunenburg County," so we know that he removed from Caroline to Lunenburg between October of 1751 and June of 1752.

He married, about 1741, Margaret Vaughan, daughter of Cornelius and Elizabeth Vaughan of Spotsylvania County, Virginia.

Cornelius Vaughan died in Spotsylvania before 1750, and two of his sons, Cornelius and Martin are mentioned in the records of that county. His wife, Elizabeth, died in Spotsylvania, November 14, 1775. Legatees mentioned in her will are, "my four children which are now alive, and my son Martin's four children, his part to be equally divided amongst them, Cornelius Vaughan, Bridget Broadus, Elizabeth Pemberton, and Margaret Geter." (Will Book "E," 1772-1798, page 251.)

On April 6, 1761, Martin Vaughan of Caroline County and Elinor, his wife, sold to John Bullard of Spotsylvania County, 233 acres of land in Spotsylvania, this being a part of a tract purchased by Cornelius Vaughan, Sr., of John Foster and conveyed by said Foster to Cornelius and the said Martin Vaughan, sons of Cornelius Vaughan, dec'd, as by deed of June 5, 1750.

A deed, recorded in Spotsylvania County, made by Cornelius Vaughan (Jr.) in 1750, is signed also by his wife, Frances Vaughan.

The names of William Jeter and his wife, Margaret, appear frequently in the records of Lunenburg County until 1769. Those of his son, William, Jr., and his daughter, California, who married Bartholemew Baker, are likewise mentioned, and Craddock Vaughan and his wife, Parthenia, appear in the records of Halifax County, which county was formed from Lunenburg.

From Lunenburg, William Jeter, took his wife and those children, who were not already married and settled in Virginia, to South Carolina and established a home in Edgefield District, where he died in 1797.

The story of the bravery of his wife, Margaret, has been handed down, from generation to generation, in his family, and has been contributed to this sketch by his great-great-grand-daughter, Mrs. Virginia (Jeter) Wilson, of Union, South Carolina.

At the outbreak of the Revolutionary War, William Jeter and his wife, Margaret, were living in Edgefield District, South Carolkina. They and their youngest children had come from Virginia some years before and had prospered greatly, owning much land, many slaves and a large sum of gold.

A young couple who lived near them had died a number of years before the war, leaving an only child, a little boy, whom his mother had given to Margaret, who had loved him as her own. He was now old enough to bear arms and was with the American forces. However, he soon sold himself to the British as a spy.

It was an easy matter for him to make frequent visits to the home of his foster parents, to whom he seemed most deeply attached. always appearing most solicitous concerning the welfare of "Father." On learning that the British Soldiers were nearing that part of the country William placed his gold in kegs, said to be seven of them, and, with the assistance of a faithful African slave, Toby, they carried it and buried it, at midnight, in a cluster of five oak trees near the house. The British had heard of William's gold and had determined to possess it.

A squad of soldiers under the charge of an officer came to the Jeter home to search for the gold. They prowled through the entire dwelling and every outbuilding on the plantation, ripped open all the beds and quilts, and burned the pillows. Finding nothing of value they were much enraged and seizing Toby, who was always to be found near his mistress, they handled him very roughly, commanding him to show them where the gold was hidden, and to lead them to his master. Toby stoutly denied any knowledge of the money or of his master's whereabouts. They then built a huge fire, and placing his feet to it, kept them there until the soles were baked. Their efforts proving fruitless, they left, vowing to come again and not leave until the treasure was found.

The young man made another visit to "Mother," who told him that "Father" hoped for an opportunity to come home about a certain time. This was told, also, to the British, who, secretly, kept a watch over the premises.

William came, was surprised and captured in his own home. Threats of torture and death had no effect on the courageous American, so, as in Toby's case, they resorted to torture by fire. Taking two forked sticks and implanting them firmly in the ground, they built a fire between them, and, binding William hand and foot, hung him over the blaze.

When Margaret saw what the villains were about fury possessed her soul. Looking quickly for some weapon with which to defend her husband, she seized a reap hook, which was hanging on a wall nearby, and rushed to his assistance. In desperation she threw herself in the midst of her enemies, cutting and slashing, right and left, with all her might. The British were terrified and, in their agony, ran from the avenging fury, as if all the American soldiers were at their heels. William was released from his perilous position and, in a short while, was entirely recovered from the effects of his ordeal.

A few days after this occurrence Cornwallis went to the Jeter home. Margaret saw him coming, and, nothing daunted, met him at the door. Removing his hat, he made a low bow, and, extending his hand, said, "My respects to the bravest woman I ever saw." Stepping back, Margaret put her hands behind her, saying, "My hands are for my friends, and not for robbers and murderers." Cornwallis showed no displeasure at this thrust, but continued, "Had I an army of such soldiers as you, I had quelled this rebellion long since." With a look of defiance she replied, "Then you would have the women to reckon with."

Cornwallis must have greatly admired her indomitable spirit for he gave orders that she should never more be molested.

(Mrs. Tomlinson's ancestor chart is included in this issue of the Longhunter.)

MARTHA McKAMIE STEELE

An example of a Kentucky wife who proved brave when her husband was in trouble is Martha Steele. The daughter of Robert and Martha (Breckinridge) McKamie, Martha Steele was born near Mercersburg, Pennsylvania around 1748. She married Richard Steele in 1769. They were the parents of thirteen children. In 1780 they moved to Kentucky to occupy the land which Richard had been granted for his military service. After traveling down the Ohio River on flatboats to Corn Island at the Falls of the Ohio, the Steeles and their companions settled along Beargrass Creek in Jefferson County and erected a stockage, Spring Station.

When Spring Station was attacked by Indians, Martha, along with the other women and the children, went to Floyd Station. It was felt that they would be safer in this larger and better fortified stockade. When Martha learned that her husband had been seriously injured in the shoulder, she left the stockade. Traveling by night and carrying her small child, she rode past the Indian encampment, and returned to Spring Station to nurse her husband back to health.

In 1784, the Steele family moved to Fayette County where they settled on a 1,000 acre farm. Martha Steele died September 22, 1822 in Shelbyville at the home of her eldest son.

Lucretia Hart Clay, daughter of Col. Thomas and Susanna Gray Hart was born March 18, 1781 in Hagerstown, Maryland. She moved to Kentucky in 1784 and on April 11, 1784 she was married to Henry Clay. They were the parents of eleven children (seven reached adulthood). As the mistress of Ashland she was hostess to many prominent citizens of her day, and she wisely and successfully managed the family farm in Fayette County.

ELIZA CAROLINE CALVERT OBENCHAIN (ELIZA CALVERT HALL)

On February 11, 1856, in Bowling Green Kentucky, a daughter, Eliza Caroline, was born to Thomas Chalmers and Margaret (Younglove) Calvert. The paternal grandparents, Samuel Wilson and Elizabeth Caroline Hall Calvert, were among the early settlers of Bowling Green. Eliza was educated at private schools in Bowling Green and attended Western College, Cincinnati, for one year. On her return to Bowling Green, she taught until July 8, 1885 when she married William Alexander Obenchain. They were the parents of four children - Margery Winston, Cecilia Reams, William Alexander, and Thomas Hall.

Eliza Obenchain was a suffragist and author. Using the penname Eliza Calvert Hall, she wrote poems, essays, and stories about western Kentucky. Her works were published in Scribner's, Cosmopolitan, Ladies' Home Journal, and the women's page of the New York Times. As a suffragist she worked for women's rights to property and divorce. Her most popular short story, "Sally Ann's Experience," combines her concern for women's rights and western Kentucky local color. (See excerpt below.) This story was published in Aunt Jane of Kentucky, a collection of her short stories. Other books published by Obenchain are: The Land of Long Ago, Clover and Bluegrass, and To Love, To Cherish. Eliza wrote one nonfiction book - a study of folk craft titled A Book of Hand-Woven Coverlets.

"Things is different from what they used to be," she went on, as she folded her pieces into a compact bundle and tied it with a piece of gray yarn. "My son-in-law was tellin' me last summer how a passel o' women kept goin' up to Frankfort and so pesterin' the Legislatur', that they had to change the laws to git rid of 'em. So married women now has all the property rights they want, and more'n some of 'em has sense to use, I reckon."

"How about you and Uncle Abram?" I suggested. "Didn't Sally Ann say anything about you in her experience?"

Aunt Jane's black eyes snapped with some of the fire of her long-past youth. "La! no, child," she said. "Abram never was that kind of a man, and I never was that kind of a woman. I ricollect as we was walkin' home that night Abram says, sort o' humble-like: 'Jane, hadn't you better git that brown merino you was lookin' at last County Court day?'

"And I says, 'Don't you worry about that brown merino, Abram. It's a-lyin' in my bottom drawer right now. I told the storekeeper to cut it off jest as soon as your back was turned, and Mis' Simpson is goin to make it next week.' And Abram he jest laughed, and says, 'Well, Jane, I never saw your beat.' You see, I never was any hand at 'submittin' myself to my husband, like some women............I've noticed that whenever a woman's willin' to be imposed upon, there's always a man standin' round ready to do the imposin'. I never went to a law-book to find out what my rights was. I did my duty faithful to Abram, and when I wanted anything I went and got it, and Abram paid for it, and I can't see but what we got on jest as well as we'd 'a' done if I'd a-'submitted' myself."

LAND GRANTS

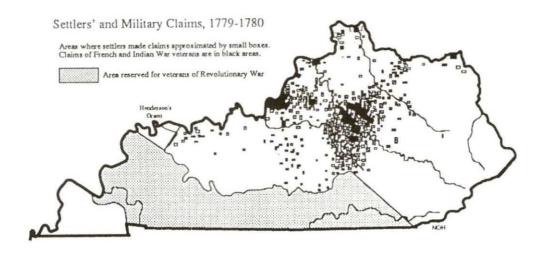

Many people settled in Kentucky because of the availability of free land. Between the years of 1782 and 1792 these grants were made by the state of Virginia, and from 1793 until 1856 by the state of Kentucky. The majority of the land went to soldiers and sailors or their heirs who served in either the State or Continental Line Revolutionary forces. Settlers who brought immigrants to the frontier could apply for warrants based upon "importation rights." Settlers who erected buildings and cleared land could apply for "preemption" warrants, and poor settlers could obtain warrents on credit.

The amount of land awarded to Revolutionary veterans was based on their rank and time of service. For serving his full three year enlistment or to the end of the war a common soldier received 100 acres and a noncommissioned officer, 400 acres. A commissioned officer who served throughout the war received a much greater amount: A lieutenant, 2000 acres; a surgeon, 2666; a captain, 3000; a major, 4000; and a colonel, 5000.

Four steps were required in the acquisition of land. 1. A warrant or certificate was obtained. 2. The warrant, which gave the number of acres and the location of the tract, was filed with the county surveyor. 3. The county surveyor was required to survey the tract, at the owners expense. 4. The survey was returned to the land office and the Grant, the final document giving title to the purchaser, was "granted" by the Governor of the State.

It should be noted that the governors of Virginia and Kentucky were very generous in awarding land grants, the surveying methods were inaccurate, and there were no comprehensive or accurate maps on which the entries could be marked. Thus, even though the proper procedures were followed, some found their claims worthless because the same land had already been claimed and patented by others. In many cases the holders of these patents would simply abandon their claims, and after several years of non-payment of taxes, any rights they had to the tracts would revert to the state.

The map below shows settlers' and military claims, 1779 - 1780. The black areas show land awarded to veterans of the French and Indian War. The shaded area indicates the land reserved for veterans of the Revolutionary War.

FIRST CENSUS TAKERS

(This article first appeared in the "KENTUCKY FARMER" and was written by Nevyle Shackelford who is with the Department of Public Information, College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky. For this publication it was taken from America on Line, January 27, 1997.)

"Sir: I beg to report that I have been dog bit, goose-pecked, cowkicked, briar-scratched, shot at, and called every 'fowel' that can be tho't of. I have worked 12 days and made $2. I have had enough and I beg to resign my position as a census taker for Crittenden Township."

So wrote Roger Waite to a marshal of census enumerators for the State of Vermont on August 24, 1790 - the year of the first national census in the United States.

Research does not reveal whether or not the disheartened and disgusted Waite's resignation was accepted or denied. What is revealed is that the pay for enumerators was very low, even for that day. Government records show that the highest rate paid under any conditions was $1.00 for the count of 50 persons and that was for enumerators in outlying districts where the inhabitants were "widely dispersed." In cities and towns the rate was $1.00 for every 300 persons counted. Out of these amounts, the census takers were obliged to furnish their own schedules "properly ruled" and to take care of any other expenses incurred. In some instances the cost of the schedules was more than the fees collected.

Many people had never been enumerated before and were naturally suspicious of strangers coming around asking questions. Others, remembering the Biblical reference to the head count for purposes of taxation at the time of the birth of Christ, often displayed a downright unfriendly attitude. Then still other citizens, recalling the plagues that befell the children of Israel following the enumeration made by King David, also refused to cooperate.

So when the enumerators persisted with their questioning, they were often lucky to get by with just a dog bite. In a sparsely settled area in Pennsylvania, there is one instance of an enumerator being killed.

There were various other reasons on the part of the population for the reluctance to answer questions, but in a 1909 publication issued by the U. S. Census Bureau it is written that the most potent factor was the widespread belief that the census was connected with taxes.

At the end of the first census in 1790, the total population count was a fraction under 4 million. Some authorities of that time, however, were a bit dubious of that figure. Because of the low pay they believed that to make ends meet, some of the enumerators in the "more remote and sparsely settled sections" of the country may have included "some persons not in existence." One reasonable ground for such suspicion stemmed from what was described as the "absurd and ludicrous combinations of names and surnames" listed on the census taker schedules and turned in to the marshals. Officers of the Bureau of Census believed that such names as "Joseph Came, Peter Went, John Sat, Joseph Grackbone, Ruth Shaves, Web Ashbean, Comfort Clock, Sarah Goosehorn, Moses Rainwater, Mercy Cheese, Unity Tallowback, Lookinbill Barnthistle, Sussannsh Beersticker,

Constance Cathole,' and hundreds of other equally absurd, were spurious and not the names of real citizens.

The old Bureau of Census publication goes on to say that in 1790, there were 27,337 surnames in the United States with English and Scotch names, or derivations of these names, being preponderant.

Two centuries later, the cost of counting the heads of some 222 million citizens was much more than in 1790. And as in the days of old, some members of the population may have resented what they considered an invasion of privacy and may have set their dogs on the enumerator. But as sociologists agree, taking the census is necessary for the continued good welfare of the nation.

SMOCK MARRIAGES

In the 18th century, widows sometimes remarried clad only in a smock, or sometimes wearing nothing at all. This custom was based on the notion that according to common law, a man who married a woman with few or no clothes would not be responsible for her debts or those of her first husband. The noted jurist Francis Wharton (1820-89) called this concept "a vulgar error."

These "smock marriages," which originated in England, were not uncommon in the New England colonies during the early 1700's. The custom varied according to the region. In some places, the marriage took place after the groom and his scantily clad bride had crossed a highway one or more times. In other areas, the bride, often naked, stood in a closet and put out one arm during the wedding ceremony. Sometimes the bride-groom lent wedding clothes to his bride-to-be, keeping her modest while he protected his money. (Selected)

Samuel Henderson and Miss Elizabeth Calloway were the first couple married in Kentucky.

Mrs. William Coomes was the first teacher in Kentucky.

Mary E. Merritt was the first black nurse licensed in Kentucky.

EARLY COURT RECORDS WARREN COUNTY, KENTUCKY

Warren County officially became a county March 1, 1797. The first court in the new county was held on March 7, 1797 at James Stuart's. During that first session William Marrs, John Marshall, Price Curd, John Garnet, James Campbell, George Moore, James Stuart, Robert Wallace, Phenias Cox, Bailey Anderson and James Dougan were appointed justices of the peace. Elijah M. Covington produced a commission from the governor appointing him sheriff of Warren County. William Chapline produced a certificate from the judges of the Court of Appeals certifying him as county clerk. John Cox was appointed as tax commissioner. A motion was made by Robert King asking the sheriff to summon a jury to meet on the last Saturday of the month on his lands where he had erected a water grist mill and make a report to the next court. It was decided that the several courts of the county would be held at Robert Moore's. The minutes were signed by James Dougan.

When the court met again on May 2nd several roads were ordered built. The following appointments were made: Roland Madison, surveyor; John Campbell, constable; Valentine Dickerson and Samuel Doughty. commissioners. John Marker was granted the right to keep a tavern at his house. Robert King was granted a stock mark - "a cross and slit in the right ear and cross and hole in the left."

The report of Robert King's mill, as ordered by the previous court, was as follows: "We the jurors find that no person or persons of his or their property will be injured by Robert Kings erecting a water grist mill on the aforesaid place. Witness our hand and seals this 24th day of March 1797. s/s John Cox, Jr., Fulker Cox, Samuel McGown, Obidiah Chisom."

John Cox were ordered to let bids for for the public buildings of the county to the lowest bidder. The courthouse was to be of "hewn logs twenty four by twenty, one story and an half high, two rooms up stairs likewise a log jail sixteen feet by twelve the logs to be one foot square with a partition.. Robert Moore gave two acres of land for public buildings and again several roads were ordered built, one of which was a road to Nashville. Andrew Alexander took the oath of Justice of Peace; David Stuart was appointed constable; Samuel Coker and George Moore were appointed commissioners; and Samuel Coker and Daniel Curd appointed deputies. A motion was passed allowing John Curd and James Stuart to keep a ferry on big Barren River on their lands. It was ordered that the surveyors of Warren County meet with the surveyors of Logan County "on the nineteenth of this Inst in order to run the County line between said Counties according to Law and make Report thereof to the next County Court." John Robertson was granted leave to keep a tavern at his house. The court fixed the following tavern rates and ordered that the tavern keepers in the county could receive these rates and no more:

The court met again August 1st, at which time, W. P. Anderson was licensed as an attorney and more roads were ordered built. On a motion filed by Edwin L. Harris it was ordered "to be certified that he is a person of Honesty probity and good Demeanor." The court ruled that "after reading the act of Assembly for the Division of Logan County" the settlement known as Georgia Settlement is included in Warren County, not Logan County. Mary Rose bound her son, John Rose, as an apprentice to Elias McFadin until he is twenty-one years of age.

The commissioners were ordered to let the public buildings as directed by the July Court. They were to be let in the following manner - "(Viz) a barr to be built for the benefit of the practicing attornies to be completely finished, also a good and Sufficient Bench for the Courts of Said County of Warren a Clerks Table also a shingle roof to said Court house and floors of Sawed Plank to be pinned down. Each Room to have two other windows with good Shutters and two Doors to the lower Room to be opposite each other also a good and sufficient Staircase."

During the fall and winter of 1797 the court met three times. On October 3rd hands were appointed to build more roads, John Nancarrow was appointed constable. John McNeel and Richard Higgins were given a stock mark. McNeel's mark was a cross off the right ear, a swallowfork in the left and under bit out of each ear. Higgins' stock mark was a cross and under keel in the right ear and hole in the left. The county surveyor was ordered to meet the Logan County surveyor on the third Tuesday of the month in order to run the county line between the two counties.

At the November 7th meeting Allen M. Wakefield was licensed as an attorney. Thomas Cook, the bastard child of Christian Cook, was bound out to Samuel Meanes to learn the carpenter trade. Fanny Skillet, daughter of John Skillet, was bound to John Williams to learn to knit. John Cox was ordered to take Christian Skillet, a lunatic, into his care and confine him for one month. The court was to pay Cox for his trouble. The court ordered that Samuel Means be paid for building a courthouse, and that James Mobley be paid for building a prison. Several men were paid for "Wolf Scalps" and the sheriff was ordered to collect taxes. The sheriff was ordered to summon a jury to meet on the land of Jonathan Russel where he wanted to erect a water grist mill. It was ordered that George Moore and Gladin Gorin let to the lowest bidder the building of a stray pen.

When the final court of 1797 met on December 5th John Hall was ordered to keep John Dickerson "who was decrepit at his house until the said Dickerson shall get well of his disorder." John Garnett and Abel Hennon were appointed to let the keeping of Dickerson to the lowest bidder and to report to the court. They were ordered to sell Dickerson's horse and apply the money toward the expenses of keeping him. (When the court met January 2, 1789 a group of men protested that 24 shillings every 24 hours was not enough pay for sitting with John Dickerson.) John Curd was granted permission to keep a tavern in his home and Jonathan Hightower was given the right to "Solemnize the Rites of Matrimony" as he had produced credentials of his ordination to the ministry in the United Baptist Church and of his being in communion. George Moore and Gladin Gorin were ordered to let to the lowest bidder the building of a stray pen. The pen was to be twenty yards square, to be made of good oak timber, 7 feet high, and was to have a good sufficient gate and lock. The sheriff was to pay William Chapline L16 out of the present depositum for the use of buying record books.

During 1797 the following marriage records are recorded:

HENRY THOMAS - KENTUCKY PIONEER

Submitted by Bud Thomas 61 Badger Road, Kite, Georgia 31049

Family tradition is that pioneer Henry Thomas was born in Virginia. Upon weighing the numerous court records, land deeds, estate settlements, census records, petition signings, and tax statements tied to Henry during his life span, a birth date of about 1755 would be a close estimate.

Henry can first be found on records dated 1774 in what is now southwest Pennsylvania living on land very near the Monongehela River. He and several relations were arrested for protecting their family properties from claim jumpers. Southwest Pennsylvania, at that time, was claimed alternately by Virginia and Pennsylvania and land ownership disputes among the local citizenry was commonplace.

One of Henry's neighbors in Pennsylvania was one James Harrod. In this same year (1774) Harrod and a small group of adventurous men traveled down the Monongehela and Ohio Rivers in a successful attempt to form the very first settlement in what is now the Commonwealth of Kentucky. One of the men with Harrod was Henry Thomas' future brother-in-law, William Myers.

Henry Thomas' initial trip to Kentucky region was with relations in the year 1776. He is on record as having filed a land claim for property located on the Salt River, near Fort Harrod (Harrodsburg). Further 1776 records show him signing petitions with other known relations against the Transylvania Company and its boss, Richard Henderson. Henderson had claimed ownership, by his company, of nearly the whole of Kentucky. The petitions were ultimately upheld by the Virginia Assembly and Henderson's land claims were largely nullified.

Henry returned to southwest Pennsylvania in the fall of 1776 and no Kentucky record can be found for him until April of 1780. It was then that Henry Thomas and his young bride, Catherine (Simmons), along with his father-in-law Henry Simmons, mother-in-law "Christiana" and other family members traveled down the "River Ohio" to Kentucky arriving at "The Falls" (now Louisville). Christiana was previously married to a "Myers" and William Myers was one of her sons by this previous marriage. Records prove that Catherine Simmons was the "only chile" born to the marriage of Henry Simmons and Christiana. Thus making Catherine Thomas a half sister to Christiana's earlier children.

William Myers fought with George Rogers Clark in the northwest campaigns and was "Clark's messenger" carrying vital information from Clark's Army to Patrick Henry, then Governor in Virginia. On one of these missions, (March, 1779) Myers was waylaid by six Wyandott Indians and was "killed and scalped." Clark mentions Myers sadly in his diary.

Henry Simmons' purpose for the Kentucky trip was to settle his family on the land claims of his deceased step-son, William Myers. The two Henry's (Simmons and Thomas) built several cabins on the Myer's claim which became well known as "Thomas Station" following the death of Henry Simmons in 1788. Thomas Station was located about two miles northwest of what is now Danville.

In August of 1782 Henry Thomas was serving in the Kentucky Militia under the command of Ben Logan during the seige by the British and Indians at Bryans Station, located just outside of what is now the city of Lexington. Logan and his men were summoned to aid in the defense of that settlement, but upon arrival it was discovered that the enemy had retreated northeast. Further, that John Todd, Daniel Boone and 180 others from the Boonesboro area decided to give chase without waiting for the Logan reinforcements. Boone and company ran into a trap at a place called "Blue Licks" where over 60 officers and enlisted men were slaughtered by the British and Indians hiding in ambush. The Logan command arrived after the battle and had the sad duty of burying the dead. In November of 1782 Henry Thomas was again with Logan, under G. R. Clark's command, and participated in the big (1,054 mounted men) raid on the Ohio Indian towns in revenge of Blue Licks.

During his years near Danville, Henry helped found the townships of Harrodsburg and Danville, was instrumental in having tobacco inspection warehouses constructed along the Dicks and Kentucky Rivers, and was appointed "overseer" of the main road from Danville to Harrodsburg. Thomas Station served as a boarding and livery stop for new settlers coming to Kentucky.

In the very early 1790's Henry Thomas, with others, began exploring lands in the relatively unsettled southwest Kentucky region. In October of 1791 Thomas purchased land in what is now Warren County from the early Harrod pioneer and Indian fighter, Abraham Chapline. In late 1797, Henry sold Thomas Station and moved onto his previously purchased land in Warren County. Records prove his Warren County land was located "on the north side of the Big Barren River about 3 or 4 miles above McFadden's Station." The property can new be found along Ben Thomas Road. Jesse Thomas, a son of Ben Thomas and a descendent of Henry Thomas resides there today.

Henry Thomas lived the remainder of his life on his Warren County property situated between his fellow pioneers and friends William Hays and Thomas Hendricks. His land was distributed among his heirs following his death in the year 1817. Today, many descendents of Henry and Catherine Thomas reside in Warren County and throughout the USA.

Henry Thomas, born about 1755, died 1817. Catherine (Simmons) Thomas, born about 1762, died after 1834.

Known children of Henry and Catherine Thomas were (1) John Thomas born 14 Feb. 1786, died 11 Nov. 1851, married Elizabeth Hays daughter of James Hays. (2) Jesse W. Thomas born about 1788, married Jenny Flanigan. (3) Daniel Thomas born 1790, died before 1850 married Elizabeth Hendrick daughter of Thomas Hendrick. (4) Jane Thomas born 28 July 1796, died 3 June 1868, married Thomas Roberson, son of Bazel Roberson. (5) Jeremiah "Jerry" Thomas born 1797, died after 1850, married Frances "Fanny" Hays, daughter of James Hays. (6) Elizabeth "Betsey" Thomas born 1800, married Squire Hendrick son of Thomas Hendrick.

WARREN COUNTY, KENTUCKY, DEED BOOKS, 1821-1825

T.L.C. Genealogy

This book has very detailed and accurate abstracts of all 953 documents in Warren County deed books K-10 and L-11, many of which involve debtors, some rich, many not. In Warren County, checking just a grantor-grantee index is especially unrewarding since many people are mentioned only in the body of a deed as an assignee, a neighbor, or a witness. This book may be purchased for $20.00 postpaid (FL residents add 6½% sales tax) from T.L.C. Genealogy, P.O. Box 403369, Miami Beach, FL 33140-1369, 1-800-858-8558, staff@tlc-gen.com. VISA, MasterCard or Discover orders are accepted.

SPINSTERS

Why is an unmarried woman called a spinster? At one time women were prohibited from marrying until they had spun a full set of bed furnishings. Until the time of her marriage, a woman spent much of her time at the spinning wheel, thus she was called a spinster.

GENEALOGICAL TIP

In some records the occupation is capitalized as identification and follows a name without a comma. Very few people in the colonial period had three names. John William Carpenter in 1785 was probably John Williams, carpenter. John Henry Taylor may well have been John Henry, tailor. Some wills and deeds have been found to have been indexed by occupation, not the name.

When researching information in the 1850 census, remember that IA indicated Indiana, not Iowa as it does in later records.
