The Griders came to Pennsylvania, then to Kentucky

By PEGGY BUSH
Contributing Writer

The Grider family, now of Bowling Green, came from Switzerland in 1716 or 1717, and settled in Lancaster County, Pa.

One branch of the family was Moravian, members of a communal sect begun in 1400. The Moravians were persecuted for their beliefs in Europe, and taxed and fined for their resistance to military service in America. They did missionary work among the American Indians, in Iceland, New Zealand and other places. John Wesley, attending a Moravian service, wrote that he felt his heart "strangely warmed." They founded cities with Biblical names in Pennsylvania and brought Christmas customs that have spread throughout the country.

The other branch of the family believed in serving God, but also in defending the country. Henry Grider, Sr. was born in 1735 in Lancaster County and moved to Culpepper County, Va., in 1781. He entered the Revolutionary Army at 17, served in campaigns with Wayne, Macintosh, Scott and Clark, and received wounds at Blue Lick from which he never fully recovered.

In 1782 he married Elizabeth (Betsy) Smith of a family prominent in both Virginia and Kentucky. They settled near Bryan's Station, near where Danville is now.

Frances Rogers Underwood, wife of Col. Benjamine Covington Grider, wrote, "I have heard my father, Mr. Warner Lewis (Underwood,) say that Capt. Henry Grider, as the old soldier was often called, was the finest specimen of a man he ever saw — 6 ft. 2 inches in his stocking feet, and weighed 210 pounds ... well educated for his day, speaking English and German fluently ... an entertaining talker, especially when his subject was the Revolution, the War of 1812, or the adventures of the pioneers in Kentucky."

Although exempted by age and previous war injuries, Henry enlisted in the War of 1812. Mrs. Grider wrote that Henry was impetuous and cheerful in spite of being blind for a number of years before his death in 1844. His brother Jacob was at the surrender of Cornwallis and was buried with military honors in Illinois, being the last Revolutionary soldier.

Mrs. Grider described her May, 1853, wedding at her father's country home, "Mount Air." She called it an "old fashioned wedding to which all our friends and kindred were invited, many coming from a distance.... The good things that were served would be regarded as a marvel in this day of receptions and light refreshments."

Two days after the wedding the couple were given an "In Fair" at the home of the groom's father, Col. Henry Grider. Mrs. Grider related, "We were anxious to go on a bridal trip immediately, but my father insisted that things be conducted at his first daughter's marriage as they were in Old Virginia." This style of wedding was just coming into style then in this part of Kentucky, but the couple deferred to Judge Underwood's wishes.

In July, at the close of the spring term of court, the couple, along with the bride's mother and sister, the groom's sisters and a party of friends from Clarksville, went to see the Crystal Palace and the World's Fair in New York. They made a trip through West Point, Niagra Falls, Saratoga and came back to Bowling Green by way of Washington, D.C.

They then set up housekeeping in a house given by her father on State Street, just below the Methodist Church.

Col. Benjamine Grider organized the 9th Regiment, which was assigned to the 3rd Division (Crittenden's), Left Wing of the 14th Army Corps, First Brigade. He served in several severe campaigns, including Shiloh and Stone River. Having studied in the office of his father, Col. Henry Grider and his partner, Judge William E. Loring, Grider practiced law in Bowling Green. His practice took him away from home frequently, so the family moved from the farm they then occupied to the Morehead House. Col. Grider died there at the age of 46.
