A Surname Index can be an invaluable tool for any genealogist, whether he or she is new to this exciting field or has been researching for many years. The Index lets one know who else is working on the same family lines and may help one eliminate many hours of researching in courthouses or libraries which has already been done by someone else.

To properly use the Index, examine it for any surname in which you are interested. The numbers following the name denote persons on the Surname Roster who are working on that particular surname. By referring to those numbers, you will find the name and address of possibly newly-found relatives with whom you may correspond. Many times each of you may have information not possessed by the other; and by exchanging your data, you can each fill many gaps in your respective family trees.
