Old Inn, Munfordville, Ky. Here Andrew Jackson spent the night on his way to Washington to become President.
This article "Scraps of History" is taken from the scrap book of Bowling Sims, son or Henry Sims, Woodsonville. It was begun in 1889.

There is an old log house in this town that deserves a few notes. One wing of it was built in 1801, and the other in 1802. Both are in an excellent state of preservation. Mr. Robert Munford and Mr. Bowling Munford tell many interesting incidents about the house, and they are in a position to give reliable information, as the father of the former, Richard Munford, built it and the father of the latter "carried up" one corner. The timbers, we are told were cut in August, and the almost perfect state of the logs at this remote time verify the belief entertained by many that timber cut in that month is more durable when exposed than when cut at other seasons of the year. It is in fact about the oldest house in Kentucky, never weather-boarded, and still quite good enough for a dwelling, being now occupied by a colored family.

Richard Munford was one of the pioneers, and came from Virginia at the above date and took up a large survey of land here on the north side of the river. The land now covered by the town was at once cleared and a portion planted in peaches and yielded immense crops. The present court house square is in the peach orchard, as was also a portion of the county clerk's office. Although there are no traces of it to be seen now, there was an immense sinkhole immediately to the left of the latter building. Here, in a little cavern at the side, was found a colony of bees the age of which no one could judge, but several hogsheads of honey were taken out, none the less sweet for being wild.

A large spring at the foot of the river hills still flowing in a current large enough to run a gigantic mill the year round, made this a desirable seat for settlement, and being on the line of travel from Nashville to Louisville also made it an attractive place for weary travelers to stop over. It was the well known half way place for travelers to and from the above cities. Hence the house early became a house of entertainment. Circumstances and common notions of hospitality forced this, though against the will of the owner and occupant. Traders from all the upper portions of the country who carried tobacco and such other commodities as the virgin land produced, down the river on flat-boats to New Orleans, would return on horseback with a saddle bag of gold and silver on an extra horse, would stop here weary and with jaded horses. Thus it happens we are justified in the statement that there has been more money in this old log house than in any other private house or inn in the whole state.

The house that now looks so humble, but then so inviting, once sheltered an honored guest—one for whom many mountain Democrats still vote regularly and heartily—it was no less a personage than Andrew Jackson, on his way from Nashville to Washington in 1829, to be inaugurated President of the United States. This fact alone should make the house historic. "Old Hickory", we are told took in these "modern accomodations" with great grace and becoming dignity. We expect to have the house photographed as one of the Exposition series, and others who are interested can secure one.

WHERE EARLY BARREN COUNTIANS CAME FROM

Cecil E. Goode
Glasgow, KY.

(From article in Glasgow Daily Times)

A noted Kentucky historian told me recently that his guess is that a preponderance of our early settlers came from the Carolinas. I decided to test his theory and my earlier assumption that the early settlers came mostly from Virginia, by going to the first census that listed the place of birth for all who were enumerated - that was the 1850 census. I took a ten percent sample of Barren County's entire 1850 census and checked the place of birth for all heads of household and spouses. The results were very interesting.

A Look at the 1850 Census

Of 542 heads of household and their spouses in my sample a majority were born in Kentucky, so by 1850 our population had stabilized because there was not as much in-migration of people who were heads of families as there were those who were born here - fifty-five percent were born in Kentucky. But of those not born in Kentucky seventy percent were born in Virginia and twenty-one percent in North Carolina or Tennessee. Most of those who came here from Tennessee had either come originally from North Carolina or were born when Tennessee was a part of North Carolina. I do know, however, that some who came here from Tennessee or North Carolina had gone through Virginia, so the Virginia proportion of our earliest settlers probably is greater than seventy percent.

I divided the sample according to age: those up to twenty-five years of age and those twenty-six and above. As might be expected many more in the younger group were born in Kentucky than in the older group: ninety-two percent of the heads of household under twenty-six years of age were born in Kentucky but fifty percent of those in the older group were born in Kentucky. Interestingly very few were foreign born; there were none in the younger group and two from Ireland in the older group. In both groups, South Carolina, Maryland and Pennsylvania were next after Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. The distribution is as follows:

- Virginia - 70%
- North Carolina and Tennessee - 21%
- South Carolina - 2%
- Maryland - 1%
- Pennsylvania - 1%
- Others - 4%

A Look at Perrin's History

As a supplement to the figures taken from the 1850 census, I checked the ninety-three biographies from Barren County which were listed in Perrin's History of Kentucky published in 1886. Fifty-five percent of those listed were born in Barren County. Another twelve percent were born in the surrounding counties within a radius of fifty miles, and an additional four percent were born in other parts of Kentucky making a total of seventy-six percent as native Kentuckians. Almost nine percent were born in Virginia, seven percent in Tennessee and two percent in North Carolina. The birthplace of the parents of those listed in Perrin's History showed that forty-one percent were born in Kentucky and another forty-one percent in Virginia. Of those born outside Kentucky, the distribution was as follows:

- Virginia - 70%
- North Carolina and Tennessee - 22%
- Delaware - 6%
- South Carolina - 1%

One parent was listed as being born in Germany.

The grandparents were a different story. Only seven percent of them were born in Kentucky and ninety-three percent in other states, with Virginia predominating. Of the group born outside of Kentucky, the percentages were as follows:

- Virginia - 72%
- North Carolina and Tennessee - 12%
- Maryland - 3%
- South Carolina - 6%
- England - 3%
- Ireland - 3%

This review shows that only a few early settlers came directly from Europe. Twelve percent of the grandparents of those listed in Perrin's History came from British Isles. Barren County's settlers came from Virginia and the Carolinas principally, after having spent a generation or more in America. About eighty-five percent of our ancestors came from the British Isles with England and Scotland, or the Scottish from Ulster, constituting about three-fifths of the total. Nevertheless, there were some Germans, French and Dutch who came, although in small proportions. The later migration - say since 1900 - has undoubtedly added more nationalities and differing proportions of our original population base than existed toward the close of the nineteenth century.

Nationality Distribution (Those claiming Scottish and Scotch-Irish ancestry were listed in my article in the Spring 1986 issue of this quarterly.)

The proportions of nationalities listed by the Barren County biographees in Perrin's History, other than the English, Scotch and Scotch-Irish were as follows:

- Irish - 18%
- Welsh - 10%
- German - 8%
- French - 5%
- Dutch - 5%

The individuals, then, who claimed these other nationalities for one or more of their ancestors included:

- Irish
  - Dr. Carter W. Biggers
  - Henry H. Burks
  - Amasa P. Childress
  - Jefferson W. Henderson
  - J.T. Jones
  - James M. Megan
  - William S. Martin

Mostly from Virginia

In summary, from the analysis described in this article, I conclude that about seventy percent of our ancestors from the late 1700's through the 1800's came from Virginia. Another twenty percent or more came from North Carolina and Tennessee, which until 1796 was a part of North Carolina. Most Tennesseans in Barren County came from east Tennessee. A very small percentage - one to five percent each - came from South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware.

While our ancestry was predominately Virginian, they did not come for the most part from the Tidewater; instead, a majority probably came from the Piedmont, but many of them had come originally from the Tidewater. In general, the Virginians who came here were not FFV's (First Families of Virginia); instead, they were farmers for the most part searching for land which was supposedly plentiful in Kentucky.

IN AND AROUND THE MUSEUM

From "THE HART COUNTY NEWS" By Lucille Harp

Living on the Logsdon Valley Road, and among various Logsdon families, it came as no surprise to find Logsdons in the direct family line on my husband's side. On the lefthand side of the Valley Road is the tombstone of James O. Logsdon Feb. 9,1790 - July 15,1871. Mrs. Dolly Logsdon of Munfordville says James O. is her great great grandfather. A notebook in her possession, by Edwin C. Welch, Santa Barbara, Calif. begins the Logsdon family in America with a William Logsdon. The Hall of Records, Patent of Land Records, Annapolis, Maryland, Vol. 15, page 34 reads: Jan. 16,1674 - "Capt. Samuel Smith of VA proved his right to 300 acres of land, by Hanna, his wife, and Attorney for transporting Robert Dewsberry, Wm. Belcher, Thomas Humphries, Wm. Logsdon, George Young, Josiah Blackwell, and Wm. Golden, to this Province to inhabit."

The Land Commissioner of Maryland further states: "We beg to advise that the tract of land based on proof of rights, and recorded Lieber 18, folio 38, was applied to Second Choice, 300 acres surveyed for Samuel Smith of VA, 4, 23,1675 and patented to him, 1,10,1679. Lying in Somerset Co. at the head of the main branch of the Wicomico River, on north side of said branch, in neighborhood of Salisbury. . ."

Wm. Logsdon was probably an indentured man, and as such, probably served his four years and was released in 1678. He purchased land: May 12, 1707 - "By virtue of assignment of 100 acres warrant assigned by Gregory Davis of Baltimore Co. on the 19th of Apr. last, unto Wm. Logsdon of said County, part of a warrant for 200 acres granted said Gregory Davis, on the 17th day of Apr. last, I, John Israel, Deputy Surveyor under Mr. Clement Hill, Jr. have laid out to the aforesaid Wm. Logsdon that tract and parcel of land called Bedford lying in Baltimore Co. on the north side of the Potapac River. . ."

The story told to Mr. Welch was that 3 Logsdon brothers, Wm., Joseph and Daniel, came to this country in the 17th Century. One brother, Wm., married a beautiful Irish girl named Honor O'Flynn, who was a captive from the coast of Ireland. Wm. next acquired a land tract known as Brotherly Love, May 22, 1730, Located near the boundary line between York and Adams Co. in PA.

James O. (Oliver) Logsdon, Sr, February 9,1790 - July 15, 1871 mar Sally Jones 12 Oct 1813. He and Sally had the following children, according to research: 1. Thomas J. b 1815 mar Mary Spurlin and had Liza who mar Joe Wilkerson, 2. Joseph Engle b 1817, 3. Terra Hayden b 1819 mar Malinda Dawson. They had: Sarah E., Kate Cordelia, Nancy, Belle, Preston W., Peter Doc., Ellic, Tony, and Bert. 4. Muhulda Belle b 1820 mar James T.
West. 5. Mary Eliz. b 1821 mar Shadrack Reynolds; 6. Nancy mar
Gabriel Reynolds and had Wm. Thomas who mar Nancy Bird Lewis.
7. Geo. Webster b 20 June 1823 mar Luvicey Tharp and Martha Mc-
Cubbins. They had Louisa, Mildred J., Jordon Porter, Wm. T., Eliz., Geo., Harriet, Jacob S., and Bethalham. 8. Gabriel,

James O. mar second to Catherine Smeltzer. They are listed on the 1850 Hart County Census with Eliz. age 16. Catherine is listed as born in Tcm. All the rest were born in KY. Their Sarah Jane, and 15. Teletsha J. Later reported children are:

Amelia Beck's book "Iowa Cousins" lists the Logsdon who volunteered for the Civil War who were residing in Iowa. Among them was Geo. W. Logsdon, age 35. Res. Malaka Twp., Jasper Co., and mustered 1-1-64. Mustered out 7-21-65. Louisville, KY.
13th Infantry Company "B", Page 641. James Logsdon, 23, Centralia, MO and William Logsdon 23, Centralia, MO. were in Book III, Vol.

James O. Logsdon Sr's ancestral line extends back through his parents (some say Wm. Logsdon and Eliz. Carman; some say Thomas III and Annie Wilson), Thomas II and Annie Conner, Thomas Logsdon 1710 and Mary, to Wm. Logsdon and Honora O'Flynn.

Eugene Smith, Annet Route, Leitchfield, KY 42754, has these Logsdon lines in his family. His line extends forward from Wm.
Logsdon and Eliz. Carman (grandson of Thomas 1710 and Mary to the dau Nancy Logsdon b 1804 KY who mar Jordan Smith b 1796 - KY.
They had Andrew Jackson Smith b 1833 who mar Rosanna Perkins b 1837, dau of "Jim" Perkins and Jamima Hicks. Andrew and Rosanna had Theo. H. Monthavale Smith b 1859 Ind. who mar Sarah Ellen Wood, dau of Solomon Seamur Wood and Lovina Burba. Theo. and Sarah had Geo. Allen Smith and Bertha Belle Clemons, who had Eugene. Any further research on the Perkins, Smiths, Woods, or any of the above lines can be directed to Eugene.

Clara Barger, R.R. 1, Box 115, Pekin, Indiana, 47165 also ties in with these lines through Dr. Joseph Carman Logsdon, son of Wm. Logsdon and Eliz. Carman, on her mother's side and through Lydia Logsdon, who mar Frances Blessett, dau of Wm. Logsdon and Eliz. Carman, on her father's side. Joseph and Lydia are her great great grandparents.

Two other Logsdon descendants are: James R. Virden, 49
S. West St., Versailles, Ohio 45320 and Geo. Stanley Druhot, 431 E. 4th St., Ontario, Canada, 91764.

Stanley Druhot's 1969 research begins also with Wm. Logsdon, who landed in America in 1674. One of his sons was Thomas I, born in 1714, mar a girl named Mary about 1740 and lived on the North Branch of the Potomac River. He had sons and dau which Wm. 5. John 6. probably Edward 7. possibly Elisha and 8. possibly James Vaughn.

1. JOSEPH was born in 1762. Geo. Washington names him in his diary as a guide. He probably got his nickname "Bulger Joe" at Kickapoo town where he crossed the river with his troops in 1791.

2. MARY was born about 1770. She married Henry White.
They were members of the Green River Baptist Church and lived
3. THOMAS II (Jr.) was born about 1750. He was probably the Thomas listed as one of the heads of families at Nolynn Station before 1783.

4. WM. b 1743 mar Eliz. He is listed as one of the heads of families at Nolynn Station before 1783. His son, Wm. b 1773, mar Eliz Carman b 1774 in Hardin Co in 1793.

5. JOHN b 1747 mar Ursula. As John R. Logsdon, he was prob. the one who was granted a tract of land in Barren Co. in 1804.

6. EDWARD b 1745 mar Mary Brown, possibly the dau of Joshua.

7. ELISHA b 1765 accord. to the 1810 Census. He is said to have mar Rebecca Howard ca 1748. He mar 2nd to Susannah Baker in Madison Co. in 1797.

8. JAMES V b 1766. He is one of the three Logsdons listed as heads of families at Nolynn Station before 1783.

By the end of 1790 Thomas, Edward, Elisha and Joseph were living in Madison Co.; Wm. and James V. in Hardin Co. (Remember KY did not exist as a state until 1793.)

In 1796 Land Grant Surveys were recorded in Logan Co. for Thomas Sr., Joseph, and Thomas Jr. These were Headright Grants, and one had to be 21 years of age, have a family, and live on the land one year before acquiring full possession. The grants owned by Thomas Sr. and Thomas Jr. became Warren Co. in 1796. Barren Co. in 1798, and Hart Co. In 1819 Wm. Logsdon was also living in Logan Co in 1796 as established by a Hardin Co. deed.

Thomas Logsdon, Jr. moved to Hardin Co. before April 23, 1796, as indicated on a deed of that date, listing him on Bacon Creek. Another deed, dated Feb 9, 1808, "from Wm. Gill of Barren Co. to Thomas Logsdon Jr. of Hardin Co." supports the fact he was in Hardin Co.

The 1800 U.S. Census of KY was destroyed when the British burned the Capitol and White House in 1814. The 1810 Census showed only four Thomas Logsdons in the state of KY: one in Barren Co., two in Hardin Co., and one in Fayette Co.

The Thomas Logsdon of Fayette Co., Druhot says, could possibly be the one who mar Annie Wilson. This Thomas may be the son of Wm. and Eliz. who had a son born in 1773 (Wm. who mar Eliz. Carman). The son of Thomas and Annie, Thomas II, mar and had another Thomas, the III; Thomas III mar Margaret and they had J.E. Logsdon.

Benj. H. Craddock, in his history of Robert Reams, says Thomas II was his grandfather, and lists the two Thomas Logsdon's families as: Thomas's children: James O., b 1790, Thomas, Joseph, b 1800, Boaz b 1812 (father of Joe at the depot), John C. b 1791 (a minister). Thomas the II's children: Dotson, Joseph, Dennis, Jacob, Thomas, Ossie mar. Wm. "Bill" Reams, and Eliz. mar Presley Jaggers.

Geo. Self in 1935 says he descended from James O. Logsdon (1790-1871) and Joseph b 1800 who mar Polly Fowler in 1818. He calls their father "Wm", but Druhot says it is Thomas II (son of Thomas and Annie Wilson) and the children are listed as: John C. mar Nancy Jones, James O. mar Sally Jones, Thomas mar two Smeltzer sisters, Boaz mar Mary Bush, Joseph mar Polly Fowler and had Martha Jane who mar Greene M. Self in 1841. Doston mar a Reams, Ossie mar a Reams, Creasy mar a Puckett.

If you are a Logsdon descendant and have proof on these lines, please contact us. Mr. Druhot's address in 1979 was Ontario, Canada, 431 E. 4th Street 91764.

RECOLLECTIONS OF W.M. EVANS ABOUT MEREDITH SAMPSYN REYNOLDS

Few of the things set down below are of my personal knowledge, as they occurred before my birth, and are no more than my memory of sayings of others I absorbed. Before proceeding with my recollections, I will say that Judge John Ritter did have a history of M.S. Reynolds, whose first wife was a Ritter. How extensive this history was I do not know, not having read it, but it is possible such a writing is in the archives of Judge Ritter’s family. If I am not in error, the Holtsclaw family (the original Mrs. Holtsclaw was one of M.S. Reynolds’s sister; I do not know her given name) had a family history book which was regarded accurate. Where the Holtsclaws now are I do not know. The last time I saw one of the family was in Miami in 1925 — Babe (I never knew him by any other name) was uncommunicative concerning his family, and, further than replying to a few questions about his family, he gave me no information. The Holtsclaws were good friends of the Winchesters, as I remember it and it is possible the Winchester girls may be able to give some information. When I lived in Kentucky there was quite lot of Reynolds living around, I think, Lawrenceburg, Salvisa and surrounding towns. A letter addressed to the postmaster at each of the places, with an enclosure addressed to a Reynolds, might bring forth some facts.

As I recall the story of M.S. Reynolds, he was born at or near Culpeper Courthouse, Virginia, in 1806 (?), the oldest of a big family of children, with none too much of this world’s goods. Before he was twenty he had completed three round-trips from the headwaters of the Big Sandy to New Orleans on flat-boats, floating down coal, farm produce, etc., and hitch-hiking it back over the road from the Crescent City to Washington, which ran up the east bank of the Mississippi to Memphis, and there turned northeast, going by Gallatin and Red Boiling Springs, thence into Kentucky. On his fourth trip back from New Orleans he had reached Red Boiling Springs, where he was warned to be very careful, as the bandit Hamilton (someone around Glasgow can tell you Hamilton’s name) (Can anyone give us information about this Hamilton? It would make good material for future issues.) and his gang of cutthroats were infesting the road running along the bank of the Cumberland River, and M.S. Reynolds veered north to Scottsville and got as far as Glasgow on his return trip to Virginia. There he met Miss Ritter and decided to abandon the life of a river trader.

There were a thousand and one anecdotes current when I was a boy. Many of these related to the time of the Civil War. He was a protagonist of Harriet Beecher Stowe, John Brown and others who were against slavery, and had the reputation of being the first abolitionist leader in Kentucky. When he married the widow Richardson she had slaves (it may be that they came to her a little later on the death of her father, but she had them) and I have heard her say there was no peace in the family until they were set free.

As to a war story or two: Barren County (then much larger than now) sent about a regiment to the Confederate Army and about two companies to the Twenty-first Volunteer Infantry, raised by Lt. Col. James Clark Evans, of the Union Army. Most of these boys on both sides were personally known to M.S. Reynolds, and it was his disposition to help any home boy, whether he wore the blue or the gray, no matter what the predicament. And, as Glasgow was in "a no man's land", rarely a day passed that M.S. Reynolds was not called upon to appeal to the provost marshal or the officer of the day to settle some dispute. When the troops that had been recruited around Glasgow were in command of the town he had no difficulty. Even the Confederate troops recognized him as an Union sympathizer and the local Rebels knew him as an Union partisan he kept out of the guardhouse when the Rebels were in command of Glasgow by his uniform willingness to help them as individuals. Once, after a part of the Orphan Brigade had been in charge of the town, a regiment of freshly recruited Massachusetts troops was detrained at Cave City and set out on the march to Glasgow, on the way to Mid Tennessee. The Confederates folded their tents and (may be not) silently went away, and did not wait to see the Union troops arrive. But the natives of the village were not so discreet, and among sidewalk spectators was one M.S. Reynolds. The latter had spent no time in changing from his working clothes to his Sunday-meeting best, and one who never saw M.S. Reynolds with an oil shaker-cup in his hand at work can fully appreciate the disreputable condition he seemed to glory in getting his working clothes. Of course, Glasgow people knew "Uncle Meret", and his week-day appearance was no eye-sore to them, nor would it call for a second look; not so with this regiment of Yankees, headed by a down-east Colonel, upon whose uniform some military tailor apparently had spent several sleepless nights in making his appearance an acme of perfection. When the head of the regiment passed the Fowler place and swung south (I think) to pass the carding factory M.S. Reynolds started to step out into the road to salute the Colonel, the latter disdained his proffer of friendship, and, turning to his adjutant, ordered him to "put that damned old Secesh cook in the guardhouse". The leading citizens of the town, both Union and Confederate sympathizers, rallied to his support, and he was soon released from military arrest.

Undoubtedly the greatest sorrow that overtook M.S. Reynolds was when his 16 year old son Brice enlisted in the Confederate Army, and only second to that was when Burr McQuown enlisted in John Morgan's command.

On several occasions delegations of citizens waited on him to obtain his consent to make the race for one of the county offices, sheriff, jailer, county clerk or circuit court clerk, but he steadfastly resisted such efforts of his friends, saying that as a private citizen he was popular with practically everybody in Barren County, but that if he entered politics he would antagonize those who were of a different political faith.
M.S. Reynolds was essentially a manufacturer, although much of his time was devoted to farming. For many years he owned what was called "The Plantation", a sizable farm laying just off the Greensburg-Edmonton road, about opposite the McFerran place (earlier known as the Lawless place, where old Burrell Lawless shot and killed his young daughter's husband, Kuykendall, upon their return to seek parental forgiveness after their elopement). "The Plantation" supplied most of the food consumed at his home, but he reached the conclusion about 1875 that, because of the great amount of farm and garden truck he was required to accept in payment for work done at the carding factory, it should be disposed of. Thereafter, he confined his agricultural activities to cultivating the several acres surrounding the town house. Here he raised a field of corn and pumpkins, which in the fall were turned into hogs and an occasional steer for later table consumption.

And it is my memory that in this contact with the forces of nature did M.S. Reynolds get his greatest kick out of life. It was his delight to buy for a few dollars one of the decrepit oxen of George Harbison (and Harbison had the habit of working his oxen to a point where they were what might be termed "skin and bones"). Then he would nurse and coddle the steer until he had put several hundred pounds of new fat and flesh on it; than he would be slaughtered. And immediately following this advent of fresh beef into the family larder, the number of friends who were invited to dinner showed a decided increase, if that were possible, for, of the five or six years I lived under the grandparental roof there rarely was a day during the spring, summer and fall that there was not one guest seated at the board and on County Court day or during sessions of the Circuit Court there would be so many outsiders present that little Willie had to wait for a second table. On one occasion he had the twelve members of a jury for dinner (that meal was served at about 12 o'clock noon then). Jane M. Reynolds earlier in their married life had become used to the open-heartedness of M.S. Reynolds, yet it was her wish that he would notify her by at least 11 o'clock that there would be guests for dinner, and when he failed to do this and came trailing over from the factory at 12 with some friend it would, in the modern vernacular, "get her goat".

Not only was M.S. Reynolds generous in the way related in the preceding paragraph, but none of his less-well-placed neighbors were allowed to suffer if the fact that they were in want was brought to his attention. It mattered not whether such needy were old residents of Barren County - all he needed to know was that they were human beings in want, and his helping hand was extended without question.

As I left Glasgow just before I was 20, and for four years prior to my permanent departure I had been away at school most of that time, my personal recollection of the last years of M. S. Reynolds's life are not worth recording.
A SPLENDID MAN GONE.

Mr. M.S. Reynolds died at his home in this place at 4 o'clock last Monday morning, after a long and exhausting illness. No better man ever lived or died in Barren County than Mr. Reynolds.

Mr. Reynolds was born as his parents were removing from Virginia to Kentucky eighty-six years ago. His parents settled in Anderson County, and there Mr. Reynolds lived for many years. For over half a century he has resided in Glasgow, and no man was ever more highly esteemed or more thoroughly deserving of esteem. As artless and simple as a child, his integrity was unbending, and his warmth of feelings melted even the frosts that oft-times gather around the heart of old age. Mr. Reynolds was the first man who ever voted for abolition in Barren, and at one time himself and one other man cast the only two votes polled for it in Barren County. As proof of the high esteem in which he has always been held, it can be stated that Mr. Reynolds voted his abolition sentiments at times when it was almost, worth a man's life, yet he was never harmed, or even threatened with harm.

A little incident occurring here several years ago shows this most excellent man in his true light. One terribly cold night of an unusually hard winter, Col. Jas. C. Evans passed his premises and observed his corn crib door wide open. He stepped in and called Mr. Reynolds' attention to it. "Well, Jimmy," said the old gentleman, "I know nobody is going to take my corn unless they need it, and if they need it, God knows, they are welcome to it. Let her stay open," and open she stayed. Truly such men are the salt of the earth. So firmly imbedded in his nature was the abhorrence of slavery, that, when his wife's father died and several slaves fell to him in the division of the estate, he absolutely refused to take them. On another occasion he bought a negro woman for the sole purpose of giving her her freedom. Mr. Reynolds had been for almost a lifetime a consistent member of the Christian church.

A large concourse of sorrowing friends and relatives followed the beloved remains to their final resting place in Odd Fellows cemetery yesterday evening at 3:30 o'clock.

 Truly a good man is at rest in the bosom of his God.

"A SHORT LEGAL HISTORY OF MAIMOTH CAVE"

Contributed by a Friend

I may be pardoned for giving a broad interpretation to the subject assigned me for underemphasizing the word "legal" in my treatment of the history of Mammoth Cave. Perhaps its early history may be of some interest to you and I shall be able to correct some errors relating to its discovery which have appeared frequently in many publications and are ordinarily quoted as being founded upon common tradition.

Bayard Taylor somewhere among the sketches of his travels declares that Mammoth Cave was first discovered in 1802. Collins in his "History of Kentucky" fixes its discovery in the year 1811. Horace C. Hovey, the famous cave explorer and author of illustrated lectures upon the subterranean caverns of several States of the Union, published a guidebook to Mammoth Cave Kentucky, which the trustees of the Mammoth Cave estate declared to be standard. He rejects the statement of Bayard Taylor and accepts the commonly received tradition that it was discovered by a hunter named Houchins in 1809 while pursuing a wounded bear. He further says that the first purchaser of this valuable property was McLean, who for $40.00 bought the cave and 200 acres besides. The most recent statement of this tradition may be found in the opinion of the Court of Appeals, 6th Circuit, delivered May 16, 1928, in the case of Wyatt, et.al. v. Mammoth Cave Development Company, et.al. Judge Donohue recites:

It does not clearly appear when this cave was first discovered, probably in the latter part of the 18th century, but it is at least certain that a natural opening to the cave was discovered or rediscovered about 1809 by a hunter named Houchins, while in pursuit of a bear. This opening was located on a 200-acre tract of land conveyed in 1811 by Platt to McLean. It first came into public notice during the War of 1812, when saltpeter was extracted for powder-making purposes from its nitrons deposits. It was then known as Mammoth Cave, but its extent and boundaries were then and still are unknown.

All of these statements except the last two sentences are either wholly or partly untrue. One can readily reach the conclusion that the Mammoth Cave was well known during the last decade of the 18th century when we reflect that Warren County, within the bounds of which the cave was located at that time, was established in 1796 and that the town of Bowling Green, just thirty miles distant, was founded in March, 1798, and that during these years the whole Green River country was being overrun by hunters, adventurers and settlers.

But we need not rely upon inference. In surveyors' Book A, page 268, in the Warren County Clerk's office, appears the entry of a survey of 200 acres of land on Green River in the name of Valentine Simmons, who was the first owner of this celebrated cavern. This survey was made on September 3, 1799, by Elijah M. Covington, then county surveyor of Warren County and one of the wealthy men of the Green River section. This survey gives the metes and bounds of the 200 acre tract and concludes with the words "to the beginning including two saltpeter caves."

These two caves were Dixon's Cave and the Mammoth Cave as appears from the patent issued January 31, 1812, by Charles Scott, esquire, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, based upon the survey and entry just mentioned to Valentine Simmons. The patent gives the same metes and bounds of the same 200-acre tract of land and concludes with the words, "including two saltpeter caves, the one called Dixon's, the other the Mammoth Cave".

It is reasonable inference that Simmons entered a survey of this land because of the two caves located thereon and in view of the fact that they were known to contain large deposits of nitrous earth. While January 31, 1812, is the first time the name Mammoth Cave appears on record, yet it is easy to assume that the name began to be applied to this great cavern as it became known in the last decade of the 18th century.

War with Great Britain was declared in June, 1812, but the two countries had been having serious misunderstandings for many months and Simmons possibly hastened to obtain his patent in January, 1812, because he anticipated war and the future value of the saltpeter dirt contained in these caves. Both names still persist, but we now know that they are not two separate caves, but merely parts of an extensive system of subterranean avenues and passageways covering an area of many square miles.

On July 9, 1812, Valentine Simmons and his wife sold this land, including the two caves, to John Flatt, of Barren County, Kentucky for $116.67. On the same day Flatt sold it for $400.00 cash to George Leonard and John McClean. Again, on the same day the McCleans sold 156 acres of this tract to Fleming Gatewood and Charles Wilkins for $3,000.00 cash. The war was on and men were evidently eagerly seeking possession of the valuable deposits of saltpeter in the cave. On August 25, 1812, Gatewood sold his half interest in the 156 acres mentioned which embraced Mammoth Cave to Hyman Gratz for $10,000 cash. This deed recites "including the saltpeter cave known by name of Flatt's, now the Mammoth Cave". On April 20, 1813, in consideration of $400.00 cash, Hyman Gratz purchased the remaining 40 acres of the 200 acre survey, which embraced Dixon's Cave.

We know nothing of Simmons or of Flatt. Fleming Gatewood was a brother-in-law of the founder of Bell's Tavern, a celebrated hostelry of bygone days located at what is now Glasgow Junction. Gratz was a wealthy man of Philadelphia and Wilkins was a wealthy bachelor of Lexington, Kentucky, where his will may be found probated in October, 1827. Gratz and Wilkins exploited the saltpeter deposits of the caves during the entire period of the War of 1812 and are said to have realized large profits.

The earth of the floor of the caves was found impregnated with nitrates of calcium and potash and by leaching processes was made available for commerce. The vats and wooden pipes are still plain to be seen near the mouth of the Mammoth Cave. Kentucky salt, as it was called, or Peter's dirt, as it was known to the pioneer, helped win the War of 1812, if it can be said to have been won at all.

But there is still an earlier history of the cave, for many prehistoric remains have been found, though most of them have been very widely scattered in the various museums of the United States and the world. I can not pause to describe these remains, but I may say that just as interesting are the log ages of history during which the caves themselves were in process of formation.

May I say here that the region south of Green River and running southwestwardly to and beyond Bowling Green was in early times known as the Barrens? To this territory Dr. W.R. Jillson has appropriately given the name of the Pennyroyal Plateau. Just to the northwest of Cave City, Smiths Grove, and Bowling Green rise the hills of Edmonson County, and in this region lie the great caves of the Mammoth Cave area. Dr. Jillson has given to this territory the name of the Dripping Springs Escarpment.

Superimposed upon it is a shallow ledge of sandstone and beneath the sandstone lies the Mammoth Cave limestone of varying depth, between 50 and 500 feet. In this limestone the great caves have been carved out by the solvent and erosive action of water through a period of time which, for lack of a better measure, we may speak inaccurately as a million years. It is a region known for its absence of surface streams. The rainfall trickling down vertically, through fissures here and there, in long ages of time made the pits and the domes found in the caves of this region. Then where the water found a level, it forced its way horizontally, producing the halls, chambers, and long avenues, that are among the wonders of the subterranean country.

In a publication of the Kentucky Geological Survey of 1928, prepared by Mr. A.K. Lobeck of the University of Wisconsin, it is said that there are three great plateau ridges in the cave region. The first is the Mammoth Cave ridge, on top of which one travels from Cave City to Mammoth Cave. This is one of the largest and beneath it are a labyrinth of subterranean passages, including those now known as Mammoth Cave and the New Entrance to Mammoth Cave, several miles distant. The statement is frequently made that Mammoth Cave has over 150 miles of explored passageways. Mr. Lobeck says: "As a matter of fact, it probably contains hundreds, if not thousands, of miles of channels of all sizes, for this limestone mass is literally honeycombed with openings." The Mammoth Cave region is said to embrace about 3,000 square miles. Professor N.S. Shaler, at one time State Geologist for Kentucky, is authority for the statement that there are at least 1,000,000 miles of open caverns beneath the surface of the carboniferous limestone in Kentucky.

A second great ridge is called Chestnut Grove beneath which says Lobeck there is undoubtedly a maze of caverns perhaps even more extensive than that under Mammoth Cave ridge because of its greater size. On the margin of this ridge, have been opened Colossal Cavern and Great Onyx Cave. A third is Elko ridge, and besides these, there are others smaller in extent.

It may be said to be literally true that half of this cave region has never been explored and that in the hands of the National Park Service of the United States, new and greater wonders will be exposed to public view, so marvelous in beauty and so inspiring in size and grandeur that the National Park in Kentucky will in process of time definitely determine that Kentucky is to be one of the great tourist States of the Union.

Following the War of 1812, Mammoth Cave and Dixon Cave fell greatly in value and on June 28, 1828, the executors of Charles Wilkins, deceased, sold his entire one-half interest to the other joint owner, Hyman Gratz, for $200.00 cash. In the spring of the year 1838 the cave was purchased by Mr. Franklin Gorin, of Glasgow, Kentucky, a prominent lawyer of Barren County. He held it only a short time and, in December, 1839, conveyed it to Mr. John Croghan. Croghan was a son of Major William Croghan, a Scotsman who had distinguished himself in the United States Army. At Louisville, Major Croghan was married to a sister of General George Rogers Clark. His second son, John was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1813, studied medicine with Dr. Rush of Philadelphia, and afterwards took a supplementary course at Edinburg, Scotland. Dr. Croghan, although a Kentuckian, first heard accounts of the great Mammoth Cave while in Europe, and was induced to purchase it. It was he who first extensively developed and explored the cave and exploited it commercially as one of the great wonders of the world. Dr. Croghan, a bachelor, died in 1849, leaving a remarkable will probated in Jefferson County, Kentucky, by the terms of which he devised all the cave properties, embracing over 1,600 acres of land to trustees to be held for nine nephews and nieces until the death of the last one. The last of the group died in California on August 27, 1926. In this interval of 77 years the cave estate has been controlled and operated by trustees under the trust created by this will.

The first active trustee was Senator Joseph R. Underwood, of Bowling Green, Kentucky. Upon his death, members of the immediate family acted as trustees until about the year of 1900, when Mr. Albert J. Janin, husband of one of the heirs, assumed for all practical purposes sole management and control. Mr. Janin was a gentleman of culture and a lawyer of some attainments, of French extraction, and a native of the State of Louisiana. For a quarter of a century he ruled the Mammoth Cave estate like any monarch and, to add to the regal illusion, there was ever about him a number of retainers and satellites and favorites. He was ordinarily known as "The Judge" and many of his sayings and habits became the common talk of the countryside.

During the reign of Judge Janin there was a great destruction of the splendid timber reserves upon the estate. Some of the most intelligent citizens of Edmonson County, who had by this time acquired a latent sense that the public held some kind of an interest in this great cave and the surrounding territory, grumbled sometimes audibly over the wasteful destruction of great trees of immeasurable value, far beyond the lumber or ties which they might produce. Nothing, however, could be done to prevent it and not one of the heirs-at-law seemed disposed to intervene.

Finally in July, 1924, the then living beneficiaries under the will of Dr. Croghan filed an exparte petition in the Edmonson Circuit Court, seeking the appointment of three named persons, members or connections of the family, to act as trustees in conjunction with the two existing trustees, A.C. Janin and W.E. Wyatt. The then Judge of Edmonson Circuit Court, possibly with a sense of a public interest of some nature in the Mammoth Cave estate, granted the prayer of the petition, but ignored the request for the appointment of the persons selected to act, and appointed as trustees three citizens of Edmonson County.

The heirs were astounded at this result and very indignant and the two trustees, then acting and who had not been made parties in the proceeding, attempted to appeal to the Kentucky Court of Appeals, but without entering a motion in the lower court to set the judgement aside, as required by Section 763 of the Civil Code. In the case of Janin v. Logan, 209 Kentucky 811 the appeal was dismissed, but in rendering the opinion Judge Clark declared the judgement appointing the new trustees was utterly void. Thereafter in the year 1927, following the death of the last life-tenant, all the beneficiaries of the estate, who at the time were sixteen in number and some of them owning only a one-fifty-fourth interest united in a deed of trust or trust agreement, by which they conveyed all their interest of every kind in the cave and the 1,610 acres of land constituting the estate to the Fidelity and Columbia Trust Company of Louisville, Kentucky, William E. Wyatt and Violet Blair Janin as trustees for the use and benefits of the then beneficial owners in the proportions of their respective fractional interests in the estate. The interests of the beneficiaries were evidenced by participation certificates and such interest, it was expressly agreed, were limited to a prorata participation in any division or distribution of the income from the property itself being vested in the trustees and the participation certificates being regarded as personal property exclusively transferable by assignment, and passing to executors or administrators as personal estate only.

A three fourths in interest of the certificate holders may control the trustees. By common report it is said that the Mammoth Cave National Park Association has bought participation certificates aggregating a two-thirds interest under this deed of trust and probably acquired the power of control.

By Act of Congress of May 25, 1926, it was provided that when title to lands within the Mammoth Cave area shall have been vested in the United States in fee simple, there should be established and dedicated as a National Park a tract of land in the Mammoth Cave region in Kentucky, containing approximately 70,618 acres. This park, it was provided, was to be administered under the National Park Service and under the supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. There were two provisions attached that the minimum area to be administered was 20,000 acres "including all the caves", and that no general development of the area should be undertaken until a major portion of the remainder of such area should have been accepted by the Secretary of the Interior. Thus the Mammoth Cave National Park can be secured by the conveyance to the Government of the United States of 20,000 acres, including the caves; but, to secure the general development of the area that it desires, 45,306 acres must be secured.

By Act of the General Assembly of Kentucky of 1928, the Kentucky National Park Commission was established as a corporation and authorized to further the establishment of a National Park in Kentucky and endowed with a power of eminent domain to condemn for the purposes of such National Park land, caves and other real or personal property; and thereafter to vest the same in fee simple in the United States of America on conditions that a National Park should be established and maintained in and on all of said property.

In the year 1928 the Kentucky National Park Commission filed a proceeding in the Edmonson County Court for the condemnation of the Mammoth Cave estate. The trustees and beneficiaries of the estate filed a motion for the removal of the case to the United States District Court for the Western District of Kentucky which was overruled by the Judge of the Edmonson County Court. Thereafter the record was filed in said District Court and the motion renewed. Judge Dawson held that the case was not removable because of the Commonwealth of Kentucky was in reality the plaintiff. He refused, however, to pass upon the question whether or not under constitutional provisions the Commission could exercise the power of eminent domain for the purpose of conveying the property condemned to the United States of America for use as a National Park.

In the legal history of Mammoth Cave there are very few cases of interest. The most noteworthy perhaps is that of Wyatt, et al., v. Mammoth Cave Development Company, et al., decided by the Circuit Court of Appeals, 6th Circuit, and reported in 26th Federal Reporter Second Series, page 322. About 1915 one George D. Morrison, prospecting for oil in Edmonson County, Kentucky became impressed with the idea that the avenues of Mammoth Cave ran far beyond the surface boundaries of the Mammoth Cave estate. He began to take options on a large extent of territory surrounding the Mammoth Cave estate and to obtain a survey of its subterranean passages. He is said to have sent persons into the cave to listen for the sound of drilling machines which he was operating. He was charged also with sending others into the cave to fire heavy charges of dynamite in the hope of lifting the surface of the ground and thereby indicating its location. He actually secured an entry by this method and was discovered with a party of men in Mammoth Cave and arrested and fined for trespass. In the year 1916 he found an entrance upon the land of Perry Cox and actually again found his way into Mammoth Cave. But here the Colossal Cavern Company, which owns the cave rights in the Perry Cox land intervened and enjoined him. In the year 1921 he formed the Mammoth Cave Development Company and renewed his efforts to find a surface entrance through those subterranean caverns which he was convinced could be found underneath the great Mammoth Cave region and yet outside of the boundaries of the Mammoth Cave estate. This he eventually succeeded in and the same is now called the New Entrance to Mammoth Cave.

For a time the rival claims as to which really was the better and the more wonderful part of Mammoth Cave were very loud and conflicting. Finally, the trustees of the Mammoth Cave estate sought to enjoin the Mammoth Cave Development Company in the District Court of the United States for the western district of Kentucky from the use of the name, Mammoth Cave estate. The proof disclosed the remarkable fact that underneath the Mammoth Cave ridge is a great labyrinth of subterranean passages all connecting. Indeed the Colossal Cavern Company had known for a long number of years that the caverns underneath some of its land connected with the caverns underneath the lands of the Mammoth Cave estate. The court held that the word "Mammoth Cave" was fairly applicable to all this general system or labyrinth of caverns and possessed no special or secondary meaning which could be appropriated by the trustees of the Mammoth Cave estate. But both the District Court and the Circuit Court of Appeals held that the defendants had been guilty of unfair practices and that for the protection of the public the defendants were compelled to advertise with all of their literature using the phrase, "We do not show any part of the cave which prior to 1907 was generally known as Mammoth Cave, that portion of the cave can be seen only through the old entrance."

While not directly bearing upon Mammoth Cave, yet the same case of Cox v. Colossal Cavern Company, decided by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky in October, 1925, and reported in 210 Kentucky, 612, is interesting because it defines what is a cave and sets out the measure and extent of cave ownership. It was declared a separate property right might exist and in a cavern distinct from the ownership of the ground that this property right included the right of exclusive possession of the cave, to maintain the ground beneath and the travel, and to preserve and protect the natural formation found in these caverns and that are some of the most admired and beautiful wonders of the cave region. The cave owner may explore, improve, exhibit, and enjoy them, but in doing so he may in no wise disturb the surface or any other part of the land except that it is reasonably necessary to do so in exercising rights of ingress and egress and in making reasonable exploration.

May we conclude this sketch of Kentucky's most remarkable natural wonder with a quotation from George D. Prentiss's "Mammoth Cave."

"high pillar'd domes,
With stars and flowers all fretted like the halls
Of Oriental monarchs -- rivers dark and drear and voiceless as oblivion's stream,
That flows through death's dim vale of silence--gulfs
All fathomless, down which the loosened rock
Plunges until its far--off echoes come
Fainter and fainter like the dying roll
Of thunder in the distance--Stygian pools
Whose agitated waves give back a sound
Hollow and toneless, like the sullen roar
In the volcano's depths--these, these have left
Their spell upon me, and their memories
Have passed into my spirit, and are now Blent with my being until they seem a part of my own immortality."

Franklin Gorin, the author of "The Times of Long Ago", born in Glasgow, KY, on the 3rd of May 1798 was not the first child born in Barren County. Barren County was not then established. In the area that later became Barren County, Polly Wright, the first child of Jacob and Miriam (Helm) Wright was born on 16 November 1797, five and one-half months before the birth of Franklin Gorin, son of John and Elizabeth (Franklin) Gorin. The 1797 Tax Rolls of Warren County (Barren County was created 20 Dec 1798, to be effective 10 May 1799) show that Jacob and his mother Elizabeth Wright were placed on the rolls in July 1797. Elizabeth (Waters) Wright is the Widow Wright mentioned as one of the first four families living in Barren County. Polly, who never married, is buried on the Crump Farm, near Smith's Grove, Kentucky. The date of Polly's birth has been printed twice as the above date, supposedly from the Bible of Jacob and Miriam Wright, which was in the possession of Mrs. Lizzie Roberts when copied by Mrs. Lorenzo Dow (Marie Ellis) Rasdall (1909-1969). If any one knows the whereabouts of this Bible, I would like to contact them as it supposedly has information on Wrights other than Jacob and Miriam.

LETTER FROM MEMBER

Secretary:

Recently received Vol 13, Fall 1985, Issue 3. In it was a Muster Roll of Captain Thompson Crenshaw, Kentucky Militia, 11th Regt of Col. Saml. Caldwell, 8 May 1813. In the muster are two names I am interested in: Obadiah Levell and David Deweese.

I went through some Kentucky books in our small library and found Capt. Thompson Crenshaw in Barren Co., KY, 1810 Census. On Col. Saml. Caldwell I found the following entries:
1. Major in "Cornstalk Militia, 1797
2. 1800 Census
3. Lt. Col "Cornstalk Militia", 1806

Apparently Caldwell came from VA as a few are listed in KY Land Grants as veterans, though his name was not listed. Judging from his rank and this info I would guess he was a VA veteran of the Rev. War.

Back to Levell: He may have also come from VA, though I have never seen his name. I do know Level(Levell, Leavel, Lovel) were from VA, some from PA and N.C. I checked all books and could not find him. My guess he would be born about 1790 to be a young person in the War 1812 of low rank, and not head of a household (1810-1820). Do you know anything more of Level in your general area?

Dweese were as early as 1790 in Kentucky. Most likely from PA as the name is early Palatine. Later some were in your area. David Dweese must have been young as he is not head of a household in 1810, and was a private, therefore born about 1790. What more do you know of this family name? Later in Census I find Daniel.

This muster or Muster roll could be of a few surrounding counties in your area as some of the family names are scattered about.

By the way, have you sent a copy of the muster to the Kentucky Military Dept. (National Guard)? They may not know of this list of men. I know Obadiah Levell is not on their list. They do have the book of "Cornstalk Militia".

Who was Judge Shelly T. Riherd? Perhaps he may have had more old papers of interest. Do answer.
On 10 August 1799 a 200 acre survey was run for Valentine Dickerson, located on the west side of Big Buck Creek. It was bounded on the South by Seth Thurston's (later Crenson heirs) 200 acre survey; on the East by the Cumberland Co. Jackson brothers; (Griffin, Elijah and Hezikiah) (later John Holland Owen and John Haynes) and on the north by William Hammett and later Robert Wheatley, Geo. Settles and the Luttrells.

To the immediate North and West was much as yet unclaimed land which later was to be assigned to Valentine Dickerson and Elijah M. Covington, Warren Co surveyor by Johnathan and John Lowell, this also took in the old Grimsley place.

On this 200 acre survey, the old Blue Licks survivor, built a brick house for his family on a hill near a fresh icy sink spring just above the Duck Spring Rim. It was here with Valentine that another old soldier, Sgt. Benjamin Martin, stayed while he improved his 1000 acre tract on Big Barren river overlooking the mouth of Buck Creek and below the Duck Spring rim.

After traipsing throughout early Kentucky Bluegrass regions during the Revolution, and afterwards staking out surveys, Valentine was in Logan County when Warren was established. The first Warren County court met and in so doing, appointed him land commissioner from McFaddins on Big Barren River to the head of same, now near Tompkinsville, quite a task for an old soldier/surveyor wanting to live a peaceful life in such a tranquil place as Buck Creek.

On 1 March 1831 Valentine wrote his will, and among other things gave his son Archabald the homeplace. This very much angered the eldest son, Joel who had married Letty Cole, daughter of the old Revolutionary War soldier John Cole, founder of Coles Bend, but before that one of Glasgow's early land owners and town trustees.

Upon closer search, Joel had well grounded fears. As if to complicate Vals matters more, "old Will Logan" Barren County clerk died in office and apparently becoming senile and lax prior to death left many unrecorded deeds, among those one deed from Valentine to Archabald for the very same land willed him! This so angered Joel and others that a settlement was contested for many years. Heirs were still cropping up late as 1875!

The deed to Archabald held and he kept his mother Martha (Patsy Stovall) Dickerson with him, she dying prior to 1850 census.

In the title search we find that title came as follows:

August 1799
First ownership of the land is recorded in Warren County Survey Book A-50, August 1799. Volluntine Dickerson enters 200 acres on Big Buck Creek via War. Co. Cert. #2027, joins Seth, Thurston. James Bunton and Joel Dickerson; chain carriers.

November 1835
Valentines will is submitted to Barren County court for entry, but his eldest son Joel objects to it and is cont.
The main reason is that younger sons John and Archabald
(also brothers-in-law with McGuire sisters for wives) have been given all of the valuable creek bottom land specifically laid out by Val, yet Joel merely is to share in some upland deemed worn out and worthless.

To further complicate and overshadow the accuracy of Val's will, old Will Logan dies in office of Barren Co. Clerk and the new clerk finds a deed from Vallentine to Archabald for the remainder of his home place, that which was already included in the will, merely lying around in some effects of Logan, the deed being recieved and authenticated, supposedly by Logan as County Clerk, but for some reason not recorded.

In this deed of 16 March 1832 Vallentine says "for $336 to my son Archabald 112 acres where I now live."

In due time this transfer of title held, probably more due to the widow of Val and mother of all his children; Patsy Stovall Dickerson living w/ Archabald in the Dickerson Brick house on top of the hill above the Sulphur Well.

July 1840

In July 1840, Archabald, wife Sally McGuire Dickerson and Val's widow Patsy Stovall Dickerson deed to Hudson Martin Jr. 14 3/4 acres, part of the Dickerson home track and here for the first time mention is made of the "the Sulphur Well" which is included w/ said 14 3/4 acres.

1841

For the year 1841, Dr. Hudson Martin Jr. is assessed value of $1000.00 on the 14 3/4 acres.

This is evidence that something else other than farming is involved!
Dr. Martin builds a home on the land, also constructs small cabins around and proceeds to establish a resort so to speak, mainly for the infirm to stay and receive medical care while making a recovery brought on by Dr. Martin's Sulphur water treatments.

The place becomes quite well known, as many people came there for cures of all sorts. Also to run the place, feed the people, etc required many hired hands, which in turn gave employment to several local area residents.

May 1853 $1200

But this local prosperous establishment was soon to change hands as evidenced by a deed 30 May 1853, Mildred Martin, the wife, while in a divorce proceeding, deeds to Joseph H. Holeman "that track containing 14 3/4 acres and is known by the name "Woodlawn".

A very spiteful and vengeful woman, Mildred Martin, along with some crooked lawyers try to clean old Dr. Martin up but without a doubt the "good doctor" had more friends and neighbors than the "high classed" lady Martin figured on as they all clamored and volunteered to swear witness to what a fine Dr. and person the Dr. was.

Not a one of them could find anything to prove that Lady Martin had been a bargain to the neighborhood, indeed they all told how she "high classed" around, sending all the way to Glasgow for miller supplies rather than use local grist mills. Some went so far as to tell how she thought she was better than the neighbors and also of the "poor Doctor" not being allowed to sleep in his own house!

The Dr. Hudson and Mildred Martin divorce was to prove just another case involving the Sulphur Well tract.

Joseph H. Holeman operated the place as a resort, not as an infirmary and the tax assessment bears this out as still being valuable property in the area.

March 1869

Then in March 1869, for the sum of $2000, Joseph H. Holeman sells the 14 3/4 acres including the Sulphur Well to Sidney W. Holeman and Jim C. Edmonds partnership.

The tax assessment gradually declines, pointing up the typical slow down and recession after the war, also some indication that maybe property owners far removed from the immediate surroundings possibly led to rather "sloppy" or disinterested management for on

February 1886

2 Feb 1886, Edmonds and Holeman sell to Frank H. Holeman the Buck Creek tract, including the Sulphur Well for $400.

It was in this owner, Frank Holeman that ownership of the Sulphur Well remained until its operation as an Infirmary, Resort, Spa, Weekend Retreat and place of fine dining was to end.

Probably the one thing more than anything that led to its death knell was the sheer independence from "big government" the neighbors around Buck Creek demanded and exercised through, many times "Shotgun", diplomacy and as a result the powers to be in Barren Co. Fiscal Court, not having the courage to face the people, took a more cowardly and Bureaucratically bungled course of isolating the area and refusing to maintain the road network criss-crossing the whole Buck Creek Valley and Rim.

This, in time led to abandonment of entire homesteads and farms.

One of the last farms to hold out, this writer grew up on the place just down the creek and many times I have seen pure, clear Sulphur water bubble up in the well, and as a boy, grew accustomed to the taste so much so that water elsewhere just wasn't as good as that fine Buck Creek Sulphur. "It does take some getting used to."

Some of Buck Creek independence examples, not trusting or indeed not needing the likes of Glasgow meddling was the case of the Wiltshire (Wilcher) (see Vol 14, Issue 1) women defending from the advances of Mr. Weaver, killing him, then the neighbors among themselves tried the case, determined the women should move out of state. They did and things returned to normal.

Also one of the more "believed constitutional rights" case was Aunt Nan (Nancy Lawrence) Bishop (see Vol 14 Issue 1) who being married to the old Civil War soldier Harmon Bishop, a brother to Miller (R.M.) Bishop who was the owner of a stillhouse at the head of a hollow, under the lip of a huge overhanging rock forming a cave and natural protection from the elements and all else that might try to invade the premises.

Miller Bishop and Richard Parker made the whiskey and sister-in-law "Aunt Nan" was the sales outlet.

She would be "raided" by hordes of posse, (no one person would dare enter Buck Creek @ the time as a revenuer) then carted off to Glasgow to jail. The powers to be in Glasgow would beg Aunt Nan to pay a fine but no, she firmly believed what she did was her right and that if a fine was ever paid, this would show her to be wrong and according to various lawyers and those who knew her, the late Mr. Richard "Dick" Garnett for one, said Aunt Nan never paid one cent, but would "lay" out the jail sentence.

Anyway, the bungling attitudes of "Big Brother" Glasgow politics isolated and destroyed, via arrogant ignorance, one place known far and wide to be an enjoyable place for people to gather, socialize and otherwise live as they desired.

The hotel and restaurant were still in use during the general time frame of World War I as my father spoke many times of weekend visits there when he was a young man. There are several people still living who visited many times but they are now in their late 80's or 90's. Soon no one will be left that remembers at present, two Holeman sons and one daughter survives who was raised in the old Hotel and house of Frank H. Holeman at the "Sulphur Well" on Buck Creek.

NOTICE FROM THE PROSPECTOR

On Today's show February 10, 1986, I learned that after the Civil War the President of Brazil came to the South and asked the farmers and plantation owners to go to Brazil to teach them how to farm and raise cotton etc.

Many went and stayed. They showed a large cemetery of American Southerners buried there.

So if you lost anestores after the Civil War 1860's, its possible they went south to Brazil and a new life.
