FOURTH KENTUCKY.

The sun shines bright in the old Kentucky home,
'Tis summer, the darkies are gay;
The corn top's ripe and the meadows' in the bloom,
While the birds make music all the day.
The young folks roll on the little cabin floor
All merry, all happy and bright;
By'n by hard times comes a knockin' at the door:
Then, my old Kentucky home, good night.

CHORUS.

Weep no more, my lady,
Oh! weep no more to-day!
We will sing one song for the old Kentucky home,
For the old Kentucky home, far away.

They hunt no more for the 'possum and the 'coon
On the meadow, the hill and the shore;
They sing no more by the glimmer of the moon,
On the beach by the old cabin-door.
The day goes by, like a shadow o'er the heart,
With sorrow where all was delight.
The time has come when darkies have to part,
Then, my old Kentucky home, good night!

The head must bow and the back will bend,
Wherever the darkey may go;
A few more days, and the trouble all will end
In the field where the sugar-canes grow:
A few days for to tote the weary load,
No matter, 'twill never be light,
A few more days we'll totter on the road;
Then, my old Kentucky home, good night!

When the second call for volunteer troops was made by the United States government incidental to the Espanio-American war, there were none quicker to respond with patriotic impulses than the mountain boys of the State of Kentucky.
Enlistments had been made all over the mountain section of Kentucky several weeks prior to this formal demand embodied in the second call by the President. It was made strictly a mountain regiment by Gov. Bradley of Kentucky, for the reason that the First, Second and Third regiments which had already gone to the scene of final mobilization, Chicamanga Park, Ga., preparatory to going to the front, represented all other sections of Kentucky, and properly did it enter his mind that in the conflict the mountain chivalry should be tested. With this in view and that the already begun conflict between the two nations might be prolonged, on the night of the 25th of May, 1898, Hon David R. Murray, an eminent lawyer and an old warrior, and survivor of the war between the States, of Cloverport, Ky., was summoned by the Chief Executive of Kentucky to his office in Frankfort, to talk over the organization about to be made. Mr. Murray arrived in the presence of the governor on the morning of the 26th. At the same time Congressman David G. Colson, of the Eleventh District of Kentucky, was present and the three distinguished Kentuckians engaged in a joint session about the organization. In this connection we may say that from that session evolved the names of the commanding and the lieutenant commanding officers of the new organization in the persons of David G. Colson being made colonel and David R. Murray lieutenant colonel, showing in the governor rare wisdom as to who should thereafter man and steer the destinies of the "Mountain Boys;" in Col. Colson there being found good judgment of men in general, but more specifically of the men he was to command, also all the qualities of the executive ability expected of a man in such position; and in Lieut. Col. Murray being found the necessary experience in his new duties so well acquired in his connection as an officer in the late civil war. As a result of the meeting on that beautiful May day in that historical building of Kentucky's capitol in which had presided distinguished men as her Governors, Lieut. Col. Murray sent telegrams to the men in those parts of the State from which the regiment was to come, who were raising companies as captains to report immediately at Lexington, Ky., for mobilization. Then commenced a period of sight seeing for the citizens of Lexington, as on the 28th day of May began the appearance on the streets there of what the Lexington Herald afterwards denominated the "miserable push" which continued by companies from day to day for several days. Indeed, it no doubt did present a ludicrous sight to the citizens there, and no doubt they, in all kinds of apparel, conditions and circumstances, coming hundreds of miles on foot and in every other manner, subject to the sultry rays of old Sol and covered with dust, were not improperly dubbed the "miserable push." We can say, however, that in the breasts of those men of the "miserable push" there beat all the instincts of honesty and patriotism, and who, not long after proved to the people they a few weeks mixed with, the absolute truthfulness of our statement, and in a very short time after arrival there, with new uniforms, they would not have been believed to be only a short while previous the "miserable push" and in further substantiation of our statement, that though from humble homes unused to the modern rules of life, when they bid adieu to Lexington for a Southern camp, they carried away the highest esteem and encomiums of the Lexington populace, and that by their universal deportment and respect towards the thousands of the people they mixed with, and as a Regiment was said by all to be the best that was mobilized at and left Lexington. It being remembered here that the First Kentucky with its cracked and aged "Louisville Legion," headed by Col.

Castleman; the Second Kentucky, made up almost wholly of State Guards, headed by Col. Gaither and the Third Kentucky headed by Col. Smith, had been mobilized and remained there for some time. The compliment thus paid to the men of the mountains where people have been prejudiced to believe feuds and depredations reign supreme, was a significant and well deserved one.

Probably hardly 100 men of the Regiment had ever had acquaintance with a gun as to drilling and the cadence of foot movements, while they knew to the fullest extent how to handle a Winchester, shotgun or pistol in the way of good marksmanship. But they were willing, ready and quick to fall under commands to learn. After all the companies had arrived at Lexington and pitched tents on the north side of the city at Camp H. C. Corbin (named for the Honorable Adjutant General of the United States Army) physical examinations were made at a rapid rate day after day with only a small percentage thrown out, denoting the hardiness of the mountain men. Recruiting went on, and during this period uniforming was also progressing from the old Olympic Theatre until within a few days the Regiment was made up and uniformed, as also the mustering in by companies went on.

On the 29th day of July, 1898, the final act of making these men regular United States volunteers took place by being mustered in as a complete Regiment by the United States mustering officer, Maj. John Green Ballance, followed by the presentation to the staff and line officers of commissions by Gov. W. O. Bradley in a happy speech. At the same time that venerable and distinguished jurist, Judge Thos. Z. Morrow, of Somerset, also made a happy speech, in the midst of which he made an impression on the men and reminded them of the little ones left behind, by holding in his arms his little granddaughter and daughter of Maj. Sam Morrow, of the Regiment, suggestive that she be made the granddaughter of the Regiment as a consistency with the fact that the Regiment already had a "daughter." These newly made soldiers of "Uncle Sam's" government as they were drawn up in line in front of Col. Colson's tent, presented a happy contrast to their appearance only a few days previous. A large crowd was present on this occasion and everybody was edified and went away well pleased with Kentucky's new Regiment. During all these days of recruiting and mustering in though, unknown to many of the Regiment, there were tender hands and sweet entreaties industriously at work throughout Central and Eastern Kentucky for funds for a State and National flag each. Imbued with the patriotism and chivalry she characteristically inherited from a long ancestry, this demure little lady of wonderful vivacity, emerged from the school room in the hills of Clay county, to enter a field of nobleness that she too might do something for her country's honor. She could not shoulder a rifle or march "right forward fours right," but through her good efforts she would afford the Regiment to carry on the battle field that insignia of universal freedom of a reunited and a grand country. As a result of her efforts this young woman, Miss Mattie Marion, on the 8th day of Aug., 1898, in the presence of a vast assemblage near Camp Corbin in Lexington, witnessed the presentation to the Regiment these beautiful flags by Gov. W. O. Bradley who made a touching address, admonishing the boys, and vouchsafed the protection of them in peace or on the field of battle.

Col. Murray responded, and in behalf of the Regiment accepted the colors with the assurance that they would be sacredly watched over and protected. The climax of that noted occasion was reached, and with the utmost propriety, and the appreciation of her untiring efforts when Co. L.

Colson bestowed upon Miss Marion the honor of to be henceforth the "Daughter of the Regiment." Well did she accept this token of recognition of her faithfulness and of her devotion to the waving stars and stripes which then entwined her, and it was universally appreciated by the Regiment that she was thus honored, and that it was a well merited prize she had received. Miss Marion's fund amounted to $275, the cost of the flags purchased through the house of W. T. Morris & Co., of Lexington. Miss Marion wore her honor gracefully, not pompously, but modestly, and by her kindness she so endeared herself to the Regiment that she was respected as a perfect lady whenever she entered the Camp and now enjoys the esteem of the Regiment. Miss Marion is a niece of Captain M. J. Treadway, of Co. G, having also some 5 or 6 other uncles and cousins in that Co., and is prominently connected in Owsley and Clay Counties, Ky. She made short daily visits to the Regiment while in Camp, deeply interested in its welfare, and also came in connection with several wives of commissioned officers, with the Regiment to its present quarters at Camp Shipp, where she stayed until a few weeks since when she was called to her Clay county home on account of sickness in her family. Miss Marion is quite a versatile writer and devotes much of her time to newspaper and magazine work. After the presentation of the flags nothing occurred in the Regiment of particular note until its removal at a subsequent time from its quarters. The men went right into drilling hard, each vieing with the other as to who could do more in his Company towards the upbuilding of his Regiment. With electric lights, bath houses and street car lines right at them, Camp Corbin presented an appearance more of a park than a military camp, and with fond recollections the men of the 4th Kentucky will always look back to Camp

(7)

Corbin, and the circumstances and conditions surrounding them were at all times envied by visiting soldiers from other Regiments. At first the people of Lexington living under a delusion that it was a rough and ready Regiment because of being from the mountains, were timid about visiting the Camp but the more they learned of these big hearted men, the more they learned to admire them. The sojourn of the Regiment at Camp Corbin did not last long, as on the 6th day of September, one of the balmy days that autumn month ever furnished, the command resorted to a place further distant from Lexington known before them to the Regiment as "Camp Hamilton," named by General Sanger for an American hero who had fallen prey to a Spanish bullet. Some days before this day of removal, orders came to go to Jacksonville, Fla, and the boys shouted with joy in the thought that they were now to get out in the world to do a little campaigning and to play the part of sure enough soldiers, even were they to do no fighting, which seemed indicative by Spain going to her knees on August 12th. They were not displeased with Lexington nor their native state,—a Kentuckian always loves his state and he is proud to speak of his birth within her confines, no matter where he goes; they had all been well treated at Lexington, but they wanted to get out, hence their exultation over the news to go to the antiquated and historic Florida city; but before the Regiment could get off, countermanding orders came and disappointment perched itself upon the brow of every man. Some ten thousand troops had pitched tents at Camp Hamilton, coming from Chicamauga Park, Ga., and it was necessary for the Fourth Kentucky to move there in order to be properly brigaded, and on the day named 27 wagons, the regiment marching in front, out the beautiful pike landed us at Camp Hamilton.

(8)

As we left Camp Corbin, Prof. J. K. Patterson, of Lexington, to the writer pronounced it the best regiment that ever left Lexington; of course he meant as to demeanor and morally, because the men had not yet become efficient in drilling.

After reaching its new home the Regiment was not long in pitching tents and what was only a short time before a vacant spot, now presented the same grandeur of a camp as did the 21st Kansas, 9th Penn., 12th Penn., and 2nd Mo., which surrounded us. The first night spent at Camp Hamilton is a memorable one to the men, as from a hot sultry day came that night a cold, drizzling rain and with no straw or floors in the tents, the men suffered and looked back to Camp Corbin with a wish that they had never left it. Matters, however, were soon so adjusted that we all began to feel at home again.

The Second Missouri dress parades came to be very popular with the men of the Fourth Kentucky and they visited them in large attendance. A fraternal feeling, however existed between the Fourth Kentucky and the other Regiments surrounding us. Drilling was resumed and the days rolled away, till finally that day the happiest of all, Sunday, Sept. 11th, came to cheer the hearts of the men, and then they were made to begin to feel that that their sacrifices had not been made in vain; that their long days of penniless pockets and privations were being succeeded by a "brighter dawn;" that wives, children and mothers, left in their mountain homes, were to very soon appreciate that patriotism was not all to go to war and as the only panacea for their needful wants, but that which it took to relieve their privations as well as those of sons, fathers and brothers, had come into the possession of the soldiers of the Fourth Kentucky at the hands of the Government which, unlike other nations, never neglects its soldiers. That day was the long-wished for pay-day, the first for the Fourth Kentucky to enjoy, and right well, with appreciative hearts and watering eyes did each soldier handle the new crisp bills of a two month's salary. Some of those who handled them, however, were thoughtless and looked upon them as avenues to gayety, revelry and debauchery, and in these scenes on the clouded side of life, which proved to be the aftermath, they, post-haste, hied themselves to the city to busily engage until within a very short time with remorse they were ready for another pay-day, and as well prepared for it as they were just previous on that beautiful Sunday morning.

It took two days, September 11 and 12, to pay the Regiment off, and from our meagre information some $60,000 was distributed to the Fourth Kentucky.

At this point I will say that the Fourth Kentucky was brigaded with Gen. Compton as Brigade Commander, and Gen. Sanger as Division Commander

The life of the Fourth Kentucky at this point was fast ebbing away and becoming as if a brittle thread to be soon snapped asunder and landed in other climes. And on the announcement of this the men were the same happy set they were at Camp Corbin when going to Jacksonville so fast. It did not prove a hoax at this time, however. The Regiment realizing the uncertainty of orders from the war department and the certainty to cancel them if it saw fit, no time was lost in pulling stakes, boarding the three sections of the train on the Cincinnati Southern and getting away from Lexington as fast as possible,

Some, however, could not leave the apron string, and, content to go back to the illiteracy of the world deserted us; but such incidents did not mar the travel and the unalloyed pleasures of the Fourth Kentucky Regiment in its rapid movement to the South.

The order this time was for the regiment to proceed to Anniston, Ala., and on the night of September 14th it left Lexington passing through Chattanooga and some portion of Georgia, and arrived at Anniston on the night of the 15th. The trip was uneventful except all was a general hilarity and a merry-making time. The Regiment remained on the cars over night and the next morning proceeded to Camp Shipp on the north side of the city limits. And at this camp we are penning this narrative as we see it, of Kentucky's chivalric Fourth Volunteer Infantry.

The Fourth Wisconsin, Third Tennessee, Second Arkansas and Third Alabama, had already preceded the Kentucky troops and were encamped here; the First and Second U. S. Infantry Regiments coming afterwards, the First U. S. Infantry since leaving and going to Huntsville, Ala.

As the men approached the grounds of their Alabama Camp, through thickets, brush, bushes and over rocks, they quickly awoke to the situation that it was "garrison duty" right here without going to Cuba, but with pick and shovel as a substitute for the gun, if they were to have a presentable camp. The men were not unused to labor; they are of that brawn, born of the bone and sinew of the mountain forests that work had and has no fear in them. So they set out with their proverbial alacrity and good naturedness with axes and other armaments of such warfare and hotly waged it until within a short time every tree fell a victim to their muscle, and the heavens threw with splendor the radiant reflection from the burning brush-heaps, and beyond the guard lines could be found rock enough to build an average Kentucky turn pike. They made a beautiful and picturesque camp, and as one stands at

Col. Colson's tent at the apex of the hill above the camp, or at Adjutant Boldrick's door a short distance away "in Klondyke" or above it, and looks below at the "shacks" and their three tents each, the cleanliness of the company streets, the newly built dining halls of each company, horticultural in their appearance, and then over and beyond all this into the city of Anniston, the panorama is pretty, and excites one to behold the same with transfixed amazement.

The Regiment after being at Camp Shipp awhile, was and is brigaded with the Second U. S. Infantry, and the Third Alabama (negro regiment), Gen. Carpenter as Brigade Commander, and Gen. Frank as Division Commander. Col. Colson, of the Fourth Kentucky, has also temporarily filled the position of Brigadier-General in the absence of the regular commander, and did so with that grace and ease as if always accustomed to such a position. At first these Kentuckians did not enthusiastically take to the idea of their brigade comrades in the persons of the colored soldiers, and as they are raised, improperly would they be criticised for it, but after meditation with a second and sober judgment, realizing that all are under and for the same flag, and appreciating the daring bravery at San Juan Hill of the colored troops saving Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and what might be thought by many to be the turning point of the conflict, the Fourth Regiment saw that race prejudice must not enter our movements toward our common enemy, or any nation, and became reconciled to a heterogeneous sensibility; and, if necessary, they can and will march to the battle field against any nation that dare insult the stars and stripes, or molest in the plowing of the waters any of our navy.

On Sept., 29, 1898, the Fourth Kentucky, with the other Regiments of Camp Shipp, passed in review, in Anniston, Ala., before the Secretary of War, Hon. Russell A. Alger. The Regiment did well on this occasion and received many flattering compliments from the vast assemblage present. It was a sultry day, but few of the men gave down.

The second of those happy days to the men of the Fourth Kentucky, had again rolled around. Those who had money left from the preceding pay day at Camp Hamilton, were now in about as much need of a visitation by the pay-master as the extravagant ones at the setting sun on the day after the last pay day, and well did they welcome this first event in the State of "Fighting" Joe Wheeler.

On October 13 the men were paid off for September. Incidental to a pay-day in the Fourth Kentucky in one of my articles to the Lexington Leader, sometime since, I had this to say which I consider a well deserved compliment to it:

"The Fourth Kentucky has just been paid off, and the men received their pay with that pleasure that is incidental to such an event. Out of the same has not come that degree of drunkenness that our Kentucky friends would imagine, nor have the Kentucky boys been guilty of acts of depredations as has been the case with volunteers throughout the country. The new Kentucky regiment here are, in the main, a well behaved lot of men. They will drink, it is true, and will have their fun, but unlike the men of some other regiments, they are not guilty of holding up carriages and otherwise perpetrating acts of lawlessness toward their fellow-men."

In this connection we also reproduce tributes to two officers of neighboring Regiments which we think meritoriously bestowed:

"We have been engaged as stenographer in a general courtmartial for the past week at the Division Hospital Headquarters. We were in a very important case that required our attendance for about four days. The testimony we took made 134 type-written pages. In our experience with this court we sat beside Capt. Fremont, Judge Advocate, who is a son of the old "Pathfinder" and the first Republican candidate for President, John C. Fremont, and we found him to be an exceedingly clever and dignified gentleman. He belongs to the Second United States Infantry which camps near us. He knows all about the regulations of war, and, when Judge Advocate, no soldier need fear that when brought before his courtmartial he will be unjustly dealt with, because Capt. Fremont will just as carefully protect the accused as he would the Government.

"In the case we were then engaged as stenographer was also Capt. Jerry South, of the Second Arkansas. He was counsel for the gentleman on trial. Capt. South is one of the most prominent men of Arkansas, and he reflects credit on Kentucky, because he is a Kentuckian by birth. He has a long line of kinspeople in Breathitt county, among the Cardwells there, ex-State Senator T. P. Cardwell; of Jackson, being his uncle, and Second Lieutenant T. P. Cardwell, of the Fourth Kentucky, being his cousin. He is also a nephew of Jerry South, who was for so long keeper of the penitentiary at Frankfort. Capt. South is at present President of the Senate of Arkansas, an eminent lawyer, and one of the most distinguished Democrats of his State, and in all probability will be the next Democratic nominee for Governor of Arkansas.

Kentucky will thus be honored again in the West. It will be remembered that Madison county (the birth place of the writer) furnished to Missouri Governors Francis and Stone, who by the way, were school mates in Madison. Ex-Governor John P. Eagle, of Arkansas, also married a daughter (Miss Oldham) of Madison. Capt. South has resigned his position in the Second Arkansas and returned to his State to preside over the coming session of the State Senate and he may be nominated and elected Governor of Arkansas. Such an event will also encourage the young man, as he is only about thirty-five years old."

We also modestly append other complimentary notices to two officers of our Regiment, the tone and pointedness of which cannot be mistook:

"Col. Colson could not have shown rarer wisdom than he demonstrated in promoting First Lieutenant H. J. Cochran, of Company B, to the Captaincy of Company L, to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Capt. Ben. Golden, and in promoting Sergt. Maj. Carroll, of the non-commissioned staff, to the First Lieutenantcy in Company B, vice Lieut. Cochran, promoted. As soon as these new officers receive their commissions from Gov. Bradley they will take their new posts. Capt-elect Cochran as Lieutenant, and oftentimes Acting Adjutant of the Regiment, has shown himself to be a fine military officer, and the efficiency that he has brought Company B up to its already standard bespoke for him this commendation, and Company L will have in him a commanding officer of whom they may justly feel proud. In thus speaking of Capt. Cochran's military merits, not a member of the Regiment can fail to also note the excellence of Lieutenant-elect Jimmy Carroll as a military officer in past capacity of Sergeant Major of the Regiment. He strictly knows how to form "guard mount," his native Irish wit and his cleverness, makes him a congenial and exceedingly popular gentleman with every man of the Regiment with whom he comes in contact, and Company B has cause to feel congratulated."

The following was said by us to a Wolfe County, Kentucky, paper of the boys from Wolfe County, which we think deservedly of mention at this point:

"I see the boys of Wolfe county, who are here, every day or so. Tom Stamper, Bent Little, Breck Amyx, Charley Byrd, and perhaps others I fail to recall to mind, are members of my company, and they demean themselves in a gentlemanly and soldierly manner. Sam Hurst, Curt Lykins, Newt Netherly, Tom Sherman, Taylor Tolson and John Cable are those of Wolfe County boys I now recall that belong to Company C, under Capt. Beatty, and you may guess that crew have their fun, in which I often join them, and as we have sat around the camp fires at night rehashing incidents of the past in Wolfe we resolve ourselves into a "committee of the whole" to become jollified, and you can imagine the experience meeting that follows.

"I see Elliott Tolson, of the Second Regulars here, and it is really amusing as well as interesting to hear him narrate his experiences at the battle of San Juan Hill. Elliott was right there in the midst of the thickest, and says if he didn't kill a Spaniard it was the fault of his Mauser and not his. He talks of soon paying a visit to his mother at Campton."

At this point we desire to pay our more elaborate respects to the Colonels of the Fourth Kentucky:

Col. David Grant Colson, commanding the Fourth Kentucky Volunteers is a distinguished member of Congress, and an eminent lawyer at Middlesboro where he was born in 1861. In 1882 he had a position in the Interior Department at Washington and in 1884 was appointed special examiner of the Pension Bureau, with headquarters at Knoxville, Tenn. In 1887 he was elected to the Lower House of the Kentucky Legislature. In 1889 was Republican nominee for State Treasurer. In 1893 he was elected Mayor of Middlesboro, and in 1895 was elected to Congress, and again re-elected, and is still a member. He says he has never signed a pay-roll since he has been in the army—patriotism alone being his inspiration, and his love for Kentucky's honor.

Lt. Col. David R. Murray, Fourth Kentucky U. S. Volunteers.—"All my life I have wanted a whack at the Spaniards, and I wanted to go to Cuba, even if I knew that I had to be brought back in a box." Such were the words uttered by Lt. Col. David R. Murray, of the Fourth Kentucky Volunteers, at Camp Shipp, Anniston, Ala. Nearly fifty years ago, Col. Will Crittenden, half brother to Col. Murray, a daring young Kentuckian, who filibustered in Cuba in the Lopez expedition, was shot to death by the Spaniards with the other prisoners. Col. Murray well remembers seeing his brother Will's name cut on an old beechwood tree at the home place, when he was a little child. Here is a summary of the events of that romantic expedition. In 1848, Narciso Lopez, who had escaped from the Island of Cuba, formed the first society of Cuban refugees in the United States, and in the following year organized his first filibustering expedition, which was stopped by the United States government; but in 1850 he rendezvoused 600 men on an island off the coast of Yucatan, the filibusters effecting a landing at Cardenas, expecting recruits, where Lopez was disappointed; the result of which was that Lopez was compelled to retreat to Key West, where they disbanded and Lopez was arrested and discharged by the United States authorities and his steamer "Creole" was confiscated. In the year 1851 this daring Cuban gathered around him 450 men for another and last venture for Cuba Libre. He had forty-nine Cubans and the rest Americans, thirsting for adventure. By mistake they came near running into Havana harbor, but landed at Bahia Honda, about forty miles to the west, on the 11th of August. Lopez as he landed knelt and kissed the earth, saying, "Querida Cuba" (Beloved Cuba). Lopez pushed on to the mountains, leaving Col. Murray's brother and 150 men at Bahia Honda in charge of the baggage and ammunition, when a Spanish steamer sailed into the harbor and attacked them, and at this time Col. Crittenden and his men attempted to escape but were captured, taken to

Havana and shot. They had to leave their wounded behind, who had no mercy shown them. Those who escaped perished miserably by wandering through the forests or were captured and executed in Havana. Lopez met a felon's death by the garrote in the castle of La Punta. This information was gathered from "Our War With Spain," in the October number of Munsey's Magazine and partly from Col. Murray. Lt. Col. David R. Murray is a brother of ex-Gov. Murray of Utah, and a half brother of ex-Gov. Crittenden of Missouri. His home is at the beautiful old town of Cloverport, Ky., on the Ohio river. Aside from his high social connections, he was born in the lap of luxury and grew up in an atmosphere of culture and refinement. The Lieutenant Colonel of the Fourth Kentucky Volunteers was born in 1847, on the 13th day of March; his family one of the most intellectual in that State. He graduated in the law department at the University of Michigan, having read law with the Hon. M. C. Kerr, Speaker of the House of Representatives at Washington, at his home town, New Albany, Ind. Col. Murray was the gallant young adjutant of the Seventeenth Kentucky cavalry, and fought through the latter part of the War of the Rebellion in the Union army. He was detailed as acting assistant adjutant general in the Second Kentucky brigade commanded by Lt. Col. Campbell, holding this position when mustered out in October of 1865 at Louisville, Ky., after which, at the cessation of hostilities, he entered into active practice at Cloverport and Hawesville, Ky. In 1875-'76 he was assistant clerk of the House of Representatives of Kentucky. The Tenth district sent him to represent it in the State Senate in 1877 as a Democrat. He spent several years in Colorado and came back to Kentucky in 1883. The Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis Railway Co. appointed him attorney for same in 1876, which position he held at the time he enlisted. Col. Murray was a delegate to the national convention at Chicago which nominated the Colonel of the Third Nebraska Volunteers, for President of the United States, which officer chafes under his straps and longs to get back into the political arena. Col. Murray was the Democratic nominee for Congress from the Seventh Congressional district of Kentucky, and was the contending man in the famous 1,000-ballot convention at Elizabethtown, where he got the majority of votes three times (so said), but was not declared the nominee. The expression "gentle blood" applies to Col. Murray, and though he comes of gentle blood, he has a will of iron, and is one of the most astute lawyers in a state celebrated for her brainy men.

(17)

Soldiers of the Fourth Kentucky Volunteers, you can tell your people in eloquent words, how your Lieutenant Colonel loved his men—loved them like brothers—cared for them, sympathized with them; tell them what a true and faithful friend he was to you when you were far away from your "old Kentucky home." None of you have ever appealed to him in vain. Lt. Col. Murray walks through the camp, and you will hear somebody call out, "Come in Colonel, and have a seat." I will venture the assertion that there is not an officer wearing Uncle Sam's uniform that is as much loved as Lt. Col. Murray. Outside of all this he is a fine military officer, and his gentleness does not extend beyond the bounds of strict discipline.

On November 5th the Regiment with the others stationed at Anniston marched in review before General Joseph Wheeler, the commander of the corps of which the Fourth Kentucky is a member, being in First Brigade, Second Division of the Fourth Army Corps. The old warrior of two wars was very much edified at the appearance of all the troops, but he did not forget to especially pay his kind respects to the Fourth Kentucky.

"Time and tide wait for no man," until again another pay-day is ushered upon the Fourth, being the third since being in the service, and the second in the state of Alabama. This time it came on November 18th, 1898, and "chuck-a-luck," "crap shooting" and such like, were the orders of the day for awhile, orders for drill being summarily laid aside for the time being, though yet the thoughtful remembered mothers, sisters and wives at home. Nothing of an unusual occurrence marred the equilibrium of camp life subsequent and incidental to this date.

Time rolled along with ceaseless velocity until the dawn of another pay-day, and the fourth in sight. This perhaps was to be the happiest yet experienced, except per chance the first which, no doubt, outclasses it in interest, coming to the men for the first time who had only moneyless pockets of bottomless depths. The fourth payday meant joy, for Christmas festivities, presents to send home, and furloughs to many to be with their people in person to enjoy the yule tide. The day came slow, however, and the men grew impatient and gloomy forebodings of despair that they were to be put off till after the holidays was believed to be their portion. The paymasters knew better, however, for the boy's interest than they could build, they desiring to pay them so close to Christmas that when that time came they would not have disposed of their earnings, and thus for lack of funds unable to enjoy the furloughs and the holidays in manners appropriate to the occasions. Finally the happy time came and on December 22d, just in the "nick of time," they were drawn up with gleeful hearts to again pocket "Uncle Sam's" filthy lucre which they had become so adept at handling. Twenty men of ten days each from each company were given furloughs and to all parts of Kentucky they hastily speeded to spend, to them, such a short time. They all returned at the proper times happy in praises of their trips. Those who did not go and remained in camp enjoyed the holidays to the fullest, but behaved themselves as gentlemen and as soldiers should.

Drills in camp were dispensed with until January 2d of the new year, and at that time were resumed with alacrity and interest. During the few weeks previous to this the Fourth Kentucky lived in expectancy of an early "mustering out;" notice from the War Department that peace with Spain had been made, and the treaty signed after weeks of negotiations between commissioners of both nations at Paris, France, and had been presented to the President. But at the winding up of our narrative no intimation can be chronicled as to the movements of the Regiment; yet the signs point to either an early service somewhere or a dismissal from the service.

On the 4th day of January, 1899, Gov. Joseph F. Johnston and staff, of Alabama, came to Anniston to inspect the Alabama troops, and out of respect to the Chief Executive, and an old warrior himself, the Division Commander, Gen. Royal T. Frank ordered out the two Brigades of the six Regiments here to pass in review before the Governor and party, as well as Gen. Frank and Staff in front of Division Headquarters in the city of Anniston. This is what we had to say of that occasion in our correspondence to the Lexington Leader, which had been all the time the organ for the Regiment for the boys in the ranks and the men in commissions: "Today the two Brigades of six Regiments here passed in review before Gov. Johnston and Staff of this State, and Gen. Frank and Staff. The Brigades are composed, 2d of the Fourth Wisconsin, Third Tennessee and Second Arkansas, 1st, Second U. S. Infantry, Fourth Kentucky and Third Alabama; the Second under command of Gen. Colby, and the First under command of Gen. Carpenter. All the Regiments did well, but I am partial to the Fourth Kentucky which brought up the rear in splendid shape; and as it passed in review behind that stately soldier, Col. Murray, and staff to the tune by the band of "My Old Kentucky Home," nothing could have been more inspiring, and the applause it elicited from the vast multitude was deafening, significant of how Kentuckians are regarded abroad, the waving of handkerchiefs to the steady tread of the "mountain boys," was picturesque, as I looked on as a spectator. The applause for them and the chivalry and bravery that crowd knew that throbbed through their veins was greater than that given for any other scene during the review. A good sized applause, however, was given for the "stars and stripes" in possession of the Second U. S. Infantry which had seen the battle field of Santiago, at San Juan Hill.

(20)

We cannot hastily pass to a conclusion without recognizing and paying reverential respect to the spiritual work that has gone right along in the Fourth Kentucky. It is not an uncommon event that men, especially of the young class, who have been used to the home and its sacred teaching and the precepts of mother and father, that when they get out in the world they become profligate, and negligent of their past vows. Especially is this true in the army life where they have gone far beyond these influences, and in their mixing and mingling with the evil in large bodies of men, many of whom never had any teachings, and would not have, they are prone to become entirely oblivious of the past. Young men who were exemplars in civil life become adherents to and participants in the rapid retrogression, unless arrested by moral suasion, and opportunities constantly placed before them for religious influences. To the Chaplain and Captain Jno. T. Stamper is due much credit for his indefatigable efforts in bringing about good influences in the Regiment and dissipating from the mind of many a young man that might otherwise have been disastrous to him for a successful and useful future life. His work has been coincident with the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the regiment, and to the latter beneficent organization for its many noble works is also due great credit, and to it the Regiment is indebted for a place in which religious services have all along been held both by the organization and by the Chaplain. Capt. Stamper's work has been one of zealousness and fervency; having also informally appealed to the men in a manner that they knew he felt personally interested in them, and by his earnestness from the pulpit many, no doubt, have been checked and which will launch them on another life with determinations unchanged.

The history of the Fourth Kentucky Regiment as we have tried to give it in a crude and humble way as we see it is exhausted here. The rest is to be made, and in whatever capacity, it will distinguish itself as in the past with all the various ingredients of good manhood. In personally alluding to our association with the Regiment, if we may be pardoned, we laid aside the gun at Camp Corbin, Lexington, Ky., to act as Regimental Stenographer at the headquarters, in which capacity we have tried to do our part Sometime, previous to and at this date, however we have been and are now detailed at the Division Headquarters of the Fourth Army Corps as stenographer for the various courts martial that sit here, which is pleasant work being in our line, and making ourself thoroughly efficient for the duties of reporting when we are mustered out of the service. We have had our vicissitudes and shortcomings, like many others, but perhaps not to as great extent. However, it is simply passing events of a life time soon to be forgotten, remembering the adage "never cry over spilled milk," to forget the past and think of the present and future, and that the future be profited by experiences of the past and, like Robt. Burns, exclaim "a man's a man for a' that a' that, a' that."

Of the officers of the Fourth Kentucky who have sat on various courts-martials in this Division are the following: Lt-Col. D. R. Murray, Maj. S. S. Morrow, Maj. W. H. Collier, Capt. Frisby, Co. A; Capt. Treadway, Co. G; Capt. Patrick, Co. D; Capt. Corum, Co. B; Capt. Cochran, Co. L; Capt. Dixon, Co. M, and Lieut. Simpson, Co. I.

We now give staff officers &c, and then each company by Battallions in as complete a manner as we could gather, and which in years to come in civil life may, if preserved, be of interest and value, in noting who and their homes composed the Fourth Kentucky; and as you look upon the names and recall to mind their familiar faces and the many happy moments mixed with the bitter side of experiences that you have spent with them in camp life, a degree of pride may swell and course through your soul that you too was a member of the Fourth Kentucky; and though never seeing service, but with patriotism and zeal offered with your comrades yourself to bare your breast, if need be, to the bullets of the common enemy. I leave it with you, dear reader and comrade, for your criticism, but for indulgence with whatever ignorance we may have shown throughout the preceding pages.

"LIUT. COL. MURRAY,
 "Commanding 4th Ky. Vols.

"DEAR SIR:—I desire to express to yourself and the Fourth Kentucky my regrets at parting with you consequent upon your approaching disbandment. Both yourself, so much of the time in command, and Col. Colson, have labored so hard, and shown such soldierly aptitudes in bringing your regiment to its present excellent state of training and discipline, that I feel that an expression of this is due yourself and your officers.

"I think it a pity, since your men and officers have now arrived at this stage of good soldierly utility, by the laborious road of constant drill, instruction and subordination, that the Government now finds itself not in further need of you. This is in some measure compensated for, from the fact that strict military schooling and experience has made a fine regiment for Kentucky and the nation, should the call again sound.

"I hardly need say that, from observation, the City of Anniston much regrets your departure as do I.

"Very truly yours,
 "G. S. CARPENTER
 "Brig. Gen'l of Vols.
 "Lieut. Col. 7th U. S. Infy."

"HEADQUARTERS FIRST SEPARATE BRIG., 2D CORPS,
 "CAMP SHIPP, ANNISTON, ALA.,
 "Jan. 22, 1899.

"LIUT.-COL. DAVID R. MURRAY,
 "4th Ky. Vol. Infantry.

"DEAR COLONEL:—As the order to muster out the Fourth Kentucky will soon terminate our official relations, I take pleasure in bearing testimony to your merits as an officer and to your efforts to improve the discipline and efficiency of the regiment, especially at times when you have been in command of it. The muster out of the regiment is a matter of regret to me.

"Very truly yours
 "ROYAL T. FRANK,
 "Brig-Gen'l U. S. Vols., Commanding."
