DeBeers map 1877

Before reading the names posted here, it is important to note that these names were taken first, from the D. G. Beers map, the 1870 & 1880 Census records and Warren County marriage records. As was true at that time, many could not read, write or spell and that there was a heavy "Southern drawl" that butchered spellings and pronunciation of names, which can be attributed to the various foreign accents of migrants. Census takers and other workers wrote down what was heard. This is evident in the findings here. It is a bit of a challenge to seek out, find and identify the names shown on the map. Therefore, there are likely a handful that may be not correct but, are shown as I.E. <Sam Smith>, indicating a probable person, as no other matched the particular given & surnames. Some surnames had multiple matching initials and were shown as James/John/Jacon/Jefferson, etc. In addition, a few of these people are found outside a city limit and worked in the city or village. Some, just the opposite, such as a farmer. This is proven by the census stating occupation as possibly a banker, butcher, teacher, etc.

One other thing that stands out in this research is that for some unknown reason, many of certain surnames are also found in the 1870 & 1880 census as heads of a household but not included on this map. These are found in a separate household and as head of house. This is further evident in other D.G. Beers maps. Some located within the city limits of each area are stated as farmers and those were living on a larger parcel of land or on the edge of the city.

A few that have no names attached may have worked for the railroad or on the riverboats and moved frequently.

While transcribing the many residents in Bowling Green, we found a great deal of whom were from Ireland. Most were tradesmen, such as masons, carpenters, bakers, blacksmiths, etc. The maiden names of the majority Irish women are unknown, as marriages occurred in Ireland.

Occupations of most residents identified in Bowling Green and districts such as Woodburn, Rockfield, and Smith's Grove, etc. that had a small village or township have been added.

Locations, schools, townships, cemeteries, etc. are listed as they are in the map listing.

This list contains African American names and are noted as African American. While indexing this, it was disappointing to see that so few were shown on the map, as found in the 1870 & 1880 census, as there were many African American families living as a household and not living with and working for another family, black or white. The lack of property ownership may have played a role.

Corrections here are most welcome. If a correction is proven, please do contact a librarian to have it altered.
