Administrative History:

In 1968 the Speech and Theatre department was created out of the English department. On January 1, 1977 the department of Mass Communication was divided. Part of the department was combined with Speech and Theatre to form the Department of Communication and Theatre and the rest formed the Department of Journalism.

On September 10, 1987 the Board of Regents approved the separation of Theatre and Communication, which was effective on July 1, 1999. The existing department is Communication. The broadcasting part combined with Journalism to become the School of Journalism and Broadcasting.
