Administrative History: Artificial collection created by WKU Archives to group band images together. The majority of the photos are from WKU sources, but some donated by individuals.

The first band at the WKTC was formed in 1925 as a student organization and was led by student director Joyce Felts. There were 20 members. By the next year, a faculty director, Franz J. Strahm, was employed, and the band had grown to 30 members. That same year the college spent $2,000 on band instruments. The band continued a steady growth over the next ten or so years, gradually expanding the number of services provided by the university. By 1939, the band had grown to 110 members and was a regular feature at WKTC football games. The most advanced concert-performing group through this period of the band's history was called the Concert Band. Several different conductors served as the band's director, including: John Vincent in 1939-1940 and 1943-1945; and Hugh Gunderson 1940-1943, 1946-1949, and 1952-1956. In 1956, Ed Knob assumed the position of director of bands which he held for nine years. Under his leadership the marching band had up to 100 members and a wind ensemble was formed. Dr. David Livingston assumed the directorship of the WKU bands in 1965, and served in that capacity until 1969. Dr. Livingston's tenure included the largest marching bands to that time (up to 116 members), large concert bands, and an all-female jazz band called Gemini 15. Roger McConnell became band director in 1969, a position in which he served for two years. Under the leadership of Kent Campbell, who held the directorship from 1972 to 1993, the longest tenure on record, the WKU band program enjoyed the largest participation in its history. His marching bands contained up to 170 members and the Concert Band, later called the Chamber Band, had a membership of up to 80 members.
