HEAD COACH ARNOLD WINKENHOFER

Arnold "Winky" Winkenhofer, who moved up to the head coachship this year after Gander Terry became a physical education instructor for the Army, was a star at Western prior to being graduated in 1928, playing both at end and in the backfield. He coached at Dawson Springs in 1928 and at Princeton High during the next four years. He took over coaching duties at Western's College High in 1934 and became an assistant to Terry in 1938. Last school year he traveled for the American Red Cross after being granted a leave of absence by President Paul L. Garrett.

Assisting him in coaching the Toppers are Tom Prothro, one of last year's Rose Bowl starters from Duke University, and Jimmy Salato, all-K. I. A. C. blocking back from Western's 1941 team. Prothro fills the place made vacant by Ed Stansbury, who is now in the United States Army.

TOM PROTHRO

Prothro is the son of Doc Prothro, former manager of the Philadelphia baseball team and now leader of the Memphis Chicks. Coach Wallace Wade of Duke praised him as "one of the finest ever to play for me." Salato, popular spark plug from last season, will enter the Army in January.

Winkenhofer, Prothro, and Salato have a squad of seventeen players above the first-year level and fourteen Freshmen. Of the seventeen upper classmen eleven of them made varsity letters on last year's squad, and six were awarded numerals.

Missing from last year's squad which won four games, lost five, and tied one are thirteen varsity players and nine freshmen. Seniors who completed play last season were Harold Hunter, Howard "Tip" Downing, Jimmy Salato, Dick Crouch, Pete Marcus, and Harry Bowling. Others who entered the armed forces or dropped out for some other reason were Casey Stephenson, George Cunningham, Joe Asbury, Gene Sparrow, Elmer Keffer, Joe Cullen, and freshmen Wilbur Cunningham, Andy Jones, Rudy Sills, Charles Metro, Charles Hoard, Charles Bailey, Earl Garr, George Maines, and Bob Currier.
Coach E. A. Diddle who is nationally famous for turning out superior basketball teams is serving as Western's Director of Athletics. Coach Diddle came to Western in 1922 and until 1928 was in charge of all Western sports. With the expansion of the college he relinquished the head coachship of football but has remained closely in contact with the sport in an advisory capacity.

THE T FORMATION
By EDDIE DOOLEY

ONE OF the most popular means of lining up this fall will be the alignment commonly called the T formation. It was popular when Admiral Dewey was the hero of the hour, and when Glenn Scobie Warner was a wavy-haired collegian at Cornell. It was used in the days of Jim Thorpe with as much effectiveness as it is today. And the chances are it will still be used twenty years from now.

Basically, the T formation is as simple as rolling off an army cot. It is the direct approach to the problem of gaining yardage; the pragmatic way of staging an attack. As everyone knows, it is called the T formation because the positions of the backs in relation to the line resemble a distorted block T.

Last year, two coaches, Clark Shaughnessy of Stanford, and Frank Leahy of Boston College (now head coach at Notre Dame) went through their campaigns like water through a funnel, chiefly because of the way they used the two oldest devices in the game, namely the spread formation and the T formation.

They knew what a lot of coaches evidently failed to realize, i.e. that the biggest changes in football in recent years have been in the defensive department. And every alteration in the defensive arrangement of a team made it more vulnerable to the T formation. For example, when a coach pulled a player out of his forward wall and thus strengthened his defense against aerials, he robbed his line of power it needed to stop the quick thrusts which are the very essence of T formation attack. And if he took two men out of his line, and played with five men on the forward wall, as many brave mentors did, he practically wrote his own death warrant if he was facing a T formation team.

In the T formation set-up, the two halfbacks are behind the tackles, about four and a half yards from the line of scrimmage. The fullback is directly behind the center, and the quarterback is right behind the center where he can take the ball on a hand-to-hand pass, or can pretend to take it and instead do some blocking or act as a decoy. Some teams employing the T formation use the direct pass, which permits the center to snap the ball to the fullback or halfback without the intervention of the quarterback.

All one has to do to appreciate why the T formation is successful against five and six man lines is to reflect a moment. For years coaches have been cluttering up football with a lot of non-essentials, hipper-dipper and bunk. Complicated spinners, hidden ball plays, triple reverses and the like make swell moving picture material, but as for sound football, they are almost absurd. Used occasionally they are fine, but to base a system on deception rather than speed and power is about as sound as hitching a spavined horse to a new automobile.

The T formation permits quick thrusts through the line, both inside and outside the tackles, without the encumbering handicap of interference. The man with the ball usually goes through the hole in the line alone, and what interference he is given is not done under his feet. Fast sweeps around the flanks, and quick passes to the flat zone, as well as down field, are all part and parcel of the T formation. Cross-bucks and reverses are possible, and there is as much fluidity and deception to this simple formation as to any of the others.

Against a five man line, the T formation can't be stopped. The halfback going inside tackle, for example, can hit through the opening before the defending linemen can stop him, as they are checked momentarily by the attacking forwards. Another lineman charges through for the defending fullback, and the carrier is in the clear. Against the six man line, gains come harder but even then the T formation is practical. And the same holds true, relatively, of the seven man line. The carrier is literally his own interference, and if he has much momentum he is sure of a four or five yard gain every time he carries the ball.

The best feature of the T formation lies in the fact it can be used in any system of football. It can be made a part of the Warner, Rockne, Jones, or Bierman systems of play, if they can be called systems. It can be used by a team that employs a backfield shift, or by one that doesn't. You'll see lots of T formation stuff in the games this fall, and so you don't forget how it looks, here it is:
