COLLECTION NOTE

This collection features information and oral histories gathered from residents of Jackson County, Kentucky. From this data, a project summary was compiled that included information about cultural resources within the county. Included in the summary was information related to folk arts and crafts, traditional music, foodways, farming traditions, folk architecture, moonshining, and old villages and ways in which to generate continued interest in these activities. Most of the research collected for this project was done by Amy Davis under the direction of Judy Sizemore, who acted as the Jackson County folklorist. She was assigned to the county as part of a Cultural Economic Initiative grant from the Kentucky Arts Council.
