COLLECTION NOTE

This collection features information and documentation of interviews that were conducted as part of the “Latinos and Latinas in the South” project, a report of the Southern Arts Federation (SAF). The SAF serves nine southern states, including Kentucky, and is one of the six non-profit regional arts organizations funded by the National Endowment for the Arts.

The 2000 US Census reports that Hispanic populations are the fastest growing race/ethnic group in the United States. Among the most dramatic growth is that which occurs in the Southern part of the country. The SAF recognized the urgent need for building awareness of these groups vis-à-vis their artistic and cultural opportunities.

The SAF commissioned folklorist Dr. Norma Cantu to create a report that identifies artistic needs, obstacles, and resources of Latino communities in the south. To reach these objectives, Dr. Cantu organized public meetings in four major cities in the region. Although no cities in Kentucky were selected to participate in the project, the Kentucky Historical Society conducted their own smaller version of the SAF project in 2010.
