COLLECTION NOTE

This collection contains information and documentation about the “My New Kentucky Home: The Immigrant Experience” exhibit that was on display at the Kentucky Historical Society in Frankfort, Kentucky from 20 April 2007 to 8 March 2008. The exhibit featured the shared stories of immigrants who have come to Kentucky to create a better life for themselves and their families. The gallery was divided into four main areas that represent four chronological time periods. Within each of these areas, there were two to three sub-areas. Each chronological area opened with an overview panel that included an introduction to the area, statistical information, immigration laws of the era, and a montage of images and artifacts that illustrate the diversity of immigration in Kentucky during that time period. One or two sub-areas focused on the largest one or two national groups from the era and addressed the four aspects of the immigration experience mentioned above. These sub-areas included environments, room settings, life-size murals, and family case studies.

All photos are in digital format.
