COLLECTION NOTE

This collection contains information from folklorist Robert Gates about his grandmother's goetta-making tradition and recipe. Also within the collection is an instruction video of how to make goetta performed by Gates' grandmother. Goetta is a German-American breakfast food found primarily in the Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky area. It is primarily composed of ground pork, pin-head oats, and spices. It was originally a peasant dish, meant to stretch out servings of meat over several meals but has since become a staple in many German-American households. While Robert Gates' grandmother makes her goetta from scratch, the largest commercial producer of goetta in Glier's Goetta located in Cincinnati, Ohio.
