Administrative History: South Central Kentucky Area Health Education Center (WKU)
Beg. 10/1/1986

The Kentucky Area Health Education Center Program is a collaborative effort of the University of Louisville Health Sciences Center, the University of Kentucky Medical Center and six regional centers. The South Central AHEC is located in Bowling Green, Kentucky, on the campus of Western Kentucky University. The WKU Department of Health & Safety (Public Health) serves as the host institution in support of this AHEC, which supports 27 counties.

South Central Kentucky Health Education Training Center (WKU)

This program is designed to address specific health problems and critical manpower shortages identified by the South Central Kentucky Area Health Education Center in seven counties. The goal of the program is to improve rural health by enhancing health careers, continuing education, and health education programs in communities which experience persistent and severe health manpower shortages.
