COLLECTION NOTE

This collection contains material collected and produced for a film titled “On the Dixie Bee: The Quonset Auditorium Legacy,” which includes interviews with performers about their time at the Quonset Auditorium, 1946-1959, a recreational center and entertainment venue in Bowling Green, Kentucky. Bowling Green Municipal Utilities razed the building in December 2002. Collection includes taped video and/or audio interviews, transcriptions, and a few photos. Some of the video files were not transcribed. Ridington carefully noted at the end of each transcript section the section that was to follow. Interview transcripts with a single individual often include four or five sections, so some folders that list seven items may only reflect one interview transcribed in seven sections. Unless otherwise noted, the interviews were conducted in one day.

Folders 2 and 3 contain some consent forms from an earlier Ridington project at WKU (FA 200); these were turned in with FA 599. Some of the same people were interviewed for this project.
