VOLUME 42, NO. 20-2251 BOWLING GREEN, KENTUCKY WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3, 1963

This is the artist's conception of the reconstruction and enlargement of Western's Heating Plant. Work on the project is to begin immediately and be completed by next fall. The major part of the construction is the installation of an additional boiler which will increase the Plant's heating capacity by one-half, enabling it to handle the increasing load brought on by the building program now in progress at Western. Ward Engineering Co. of Louisville, was the low bidder on the project with a bid of $402,725. Bids were opened at Frankfort late Friday afternoon.

Super College Heating Plant To Be Ready In Fall

Dr. Kelly Thompson, Western president, has announced that work will start as soon as possible on the reconstruction and enlargement of the college's Heating Plant.

Apparent low bidder on the project is Ward Engineering Co. of Louisville, with a bid of $402,725. Bids were opened at Frankfort yesterday afternoon.

The job is to be completed in time for the heating apparatus to go into operation at the usual time next fall. Work will begin on the project at the earliest possible date.

"This is a move that goes hand in-hand with the building program now going on around the campus," explained L. T. Smith, Western's Physical Plant Administrator.

"The building of State Dormitory, opened last fall, and the scheduled opening next fall of an 11-story men's dormitory and the new Academic-Athletic Building make it necessary to expand our heating facilities to meet the increased need. Future construction, of course, is a new boiler designed to deliver 52,000 pounds of steam per hour."

The work to be done also includes the installation of a new stoker, a new coal-handling system, a new ash-handling system, fans, pumps and piping.

The exterior styling of the building will be designed to blend with that of nearby State Dormitory and a four-story women's residence hall slated for construction near the heating plant in the Russellville Road-Dogwood Drive area of the campus.

The reconstruction and enlargement of the Heating Plant will be the 12th major construction job on the Western campus since 1956. The $800,000, four-

Not Too Late....

Every year at the end of final exams, hundreds of students face the unpleasant reality of failing grades. With one-half the current semester gone, many students will no doubt be facing this same problem within a few short weeks. Although the semester should have been started with good study habits, it is still possible to begin now and try even harder to accomplish this goal.

In a recent article entitled "Taking Notes in School," by Dr. Philip D. Cristantiello, Assistant Director of Guidance at St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N. J., the author had this to say: "The most important study skill of all — note-taking — is the one that young men and women entering college today know the least about."

Dr. Cristantiello goes on to say that a good set of notes is the college student's "basic academic weapon." They bring back the important points of classroom contact and serve as the main guide for study and review. Whether or not they have been well-written often means the difference between success and failure in final exams.

The author points out that good note-taking doesn't come easily. "It's a skill which must be deliberately acquired if a student is intent on success in college. The note-taking habit should be established in high school. If a student comes prepared with note-taking know-how learned in high school, he's off to a good start."

But what if students have not acquired this note-taking know-how even after a year or more of college where should one begin to learn this art?

Of course, there is no one general answer to this question, but Dr. Cristantiello does list a few pointers that might help students improve their note-taking habits.

1. Don't be a copyist who races to get every single word down on paper. Listen to what is being said, judge its importance, and then write.

2. Include only enough detail to show the relationship between basic points. If elaboration is needed, add it later outside the classroom, where time is not at a premium.

3. Listen for and try to grasp the main ideas, then write them down. Exclude flowery phrases and side remarks.

4. Organize and set off main points in your notebook. Group related details so they can be seen to belong together.

5. Listen for cues in the form of introductory or summary sentences. A lecturer will often set up his points by such statements as, "The three causes..." or "The major results..." Listen for repetitions and inflections in voice which can tip you off to different emphases being put on the material.

6. Get a sneak preview of what will be covered in the classroom by careful skimming or by reading chapter summaries in the textbook. This shouldn't take you very long and will give you a general orientation to the highlights of the lecture.

7. If possible, put notes in permanent form the first time you record them. This will save time by not having to copy them the second time.

A good set of notes will reflect the main points of a lecture and will, in many cases, be adequate material to study for a test.

It's not too late to teach an old dog some new tricks.

"Inside Russia Today" Looks Behind Iron Curtain

By JAMES D. BENNETT
History Department

Inside Russia Today is neither a history of Russia nor a definitive study of Russian Communism, although both subjects are treated at some length. It is, more precisely, a survey, a picture of what is really going on in Russia today. John Gunther is primarily a reporter, and a good one, and long experience has taught him much in the utilization of time and sources. But observation remains the mark of a successful reporter, and Gunther's roving and critical eye seems to have missed little in his recent visit to the Soviet Union.

In general, the author states, Inside Russia Today follows the pattern of the other "inside" books. His aim has been to give the reader a picture of Russia since Stalin's death, to present something of its essential quality and atmosphere. Further, he has attempted to describe current political situations and events, to explain the pyramidal structure of Soviet government and party, and to understand all this with enough background history to make the present situation understandable. In all this Gunther has been successful.

The author's style of writing, which in this instance has been aptly characterized as a "one hand, while on the other hand" method, has received some criticism. The result, however, which is a clear, concise, and eminently readable style, seems to offset this criticism. It has the further advantage of presenting, insofar as possible, all sides of a particular question and leaving the decision to the reader. This is flattering to the reader and might lead him to believe that the book was written for an audience possessing no small background of knowledge concerning Russia. This is not so. It was written primarily for the general reader, and Gunther has placed at the disposal of this reader more information, probably, than is to be found in any other half-dozen books dealing with the Soviet Union.

First of all, the book is filled throughout with figures and with facts, as accurate, and certainly as up to date, as are likely to be found at the present time. Soviet accomplishments are translated into their most meaningful terms, being compared, in almost all instances, with United States accomplishments in the same fields. Chapter Thirteen, "New Worlds in Science and Education," is a perfect example of this technique, and so is the chapter on literature, to a lesser extent. The chapter on de-Stalinization is well worth the cost of the book.

The bibliography is extensive, ranging from such traditional authorities as Sir Bernard Pares to recent magazine and newspaper publications of both Eastern and Western countries. Not only does this bibliography provide additional material for the interested reader, it represents a good job of documentation. The latter should help to remove the present book from the shadow under which previous "inside" books have existed; namely, that the Gunther method was at best superficial and at worst consisted of writing from material gained from a week's drunken visit to the country to be described.

Most readers will find the "Appendix on Personalities" particularly helpful in identifying the less well-known Communists, from whom may spring, at any time, the successor to Khrushchev. History has shown that since the time of Lenin almost all Russian leaders have been catapulted from comparative obscurity to bright center-stage.

So then, Inside Russia Today is a reference book, and one which every well-informed person needs on his shelves. It is also a travel book, graphically describing "sights, scenes, impressions" of Russia, urban and rural. In fact, almost no area of interest has been overlooked. It should appeal to the historian and the political scientist, the educator and the writer, the artist and the sociologist.

With only minor exceptions (the New Yorker wanted more subtlety) Inside Russia Today has been April was inaugurated in 1958 by the National Education Association as Teaching Career Month. The purpose of this proclamation is to focus public attention on the necessity for obtaining and keeping the best possible teachers for our nation's schools and colleges. This should be of primary interest to many students here at Western, as many of us will be assuming the roles of teachers in the near future.

If you happen to be a student interested in teaching as a career you may find Teaching Career Fact Book by the National Education Association a helpful book. It discusses the questions of who is suited to teach, and the supply of teachers in relation to the demand for teachers. Also included is the amount and type of preparation required to become a professional teacher, facts concerning certification, condition of work, salaries you may expect and the responsibilities involved as a teacher.

The Profession of Teaching by T. M. Stinnett gives a concise outline of the qualifications and procedures that a good teacher should possess and employ. The book gives a clear picture of what is required for teaching.

Trends and Issues in Secondary Education yields information on type curriculum, instructional material, facilities, guidance, extracurricular activities, school organization and administrative staffs in particular sections of the nation. Earl R. Douglas has presented some valuable "tips" in this book.

Merl E. Bonney and Richard S. Hambleman have edited Personal - Social Evaluation Techniques, which is an aid in evaluating one's teaching practices. It is a body of well organized information and data that will help teachers improve the design of daily planning guide and in reporting pupil progress. It also engages in process of curriculum development on a basis of research and scholarship rather than mere intuition and hunches.

The three preceding books are a part of The Library of Education, which is a series edited by 75 different authors, including some of America's most distinguished scholars, educators, school and college officials. The series is published by the Center for Applied Research in Education in Washington, D. C. Its categories of coverage include curriculum and teaching, administration, organization and finance, psychology, and educational institutions.

Another series of books is the Classics in Education. This series includes American Ideas about Adult Education 1716-1951, by C. Horthy Grattan. Gordon C. Lee's Crusade Against Ignorance, presents Thomas Jefferson's views on education. Acclaimed in The Republic and the School are Horace Mann's opinions on the education of free men. Lawrence A. Cremin edited this book.

A simple proposition that "the amount of money state governments make available for general aid to public schools is determined politically," is a basis for The Economics and Politics of Public Education. This paperback series discusses a problem most of us should be concerned with as present and future teachers. Titles included are: National Politics and Federal Aid to Education, Cost and Quality of Public Education, State and Local Taxes for Public Education and Administering the National Defense Education Act. Astronaut Walter M. Schirra presents his views on Teaching as a Career on a 33 1/3 rpm record. This special message is six minutes long and is a challenge to all who teach and to those who plan to teach.

Roamin' Thoughts...

By Libbie Thompson

Spring has sprung, performing its usual face-lift on the campus.

Small pink and green buds decorate the trees. They were bent in the wind, and they dripped in the rain, but they are still there. The bright yellow jonquils and red tulips along the walk by Whitestone contrast with the green grass and the neutrality of the building. The tennis court has come alive with players from dawn to almost dark.

The students feel the metamorphosis, also. On the patio at McLean, girls are getting a head-start on a suntan. Students are shedding their all-weather coats and sweaters for cottons and bermudas. The more ambitious ones have started dreaming of Ft. Lauderdale. A general air of freedom and laziness pervades the campus.

Only the fact that with spring comes mid-terms is to be lamented.

The building was financed by funds raised in a crusade by the Louisville and Kentucky Conferences of the Methodist Church. Furnishings, acquired at a cost of approximately $8,000, were given through individual contributions.

The program of the center is planned to minister to the 850 Methodist students and those with a preference for the Methodist Church who attend Western and The Bowling Green College of Commerce. An emphasis is placed on Christian higher education.

Current Events Test Shows Students Do Not Always Keep Up With News

College students seeking a good education are, in most cases too rushed for time with their studies to keep up with national and international affairs as they should. Their use of newspapers, magazines and access to television and radio is limited. Therefore tests on world affairs and the names of important people in the news and geographical trouble spots are many times foreign to them. Therefore it is the consensus of opinion among faculty members that tests on these subjects are important when followed by a critique and general discussion in various classes. Such a test was given to a group of Western students which resulted in an increased interest in following these news media, much more carefully.

Mrs. Judy Ecker, of the English department, gave a current affairs identification quiz to her 67 second-semester freshmen a few weeks ago. The quiz was designed to test the students' knowledge of current affairs. The results of that test were sent to David Brinkley of NBC news, and subsequently were used by Frank Blair on the Today show as a feature article on his newscast. It also appeared in Cynthia Lowery's Associated Press television column which ran in newspapers throughout the nation.

The quiz consisted of 37 "well-known" personalities and three questions concerning population. David Brinkley was identified by 66 students, Charles de Gaulle by 65 and Cassius Clay by 64. Only six failed to identify Lyndon Johnson and Nelson Rockefeller, and more than half recognized Martin Luther King.

In the incorrect bracket one person identified Cotton Nash as president of the University of Kentucky, Senator Mike Mansfield as a movie star, and artist Pablo Picasso as a tennis player. One student listed the United States population as 600,000 and another said Kentucky had 50,000 residents. Television and sports personalities fared better on the test than did other professions although 14 students were unable to identify Richard Burton. Other VIPs to identify were John Steinbeck, David Ben-Gurion, Wilma Rudolph, Alan Shepard, James Hoffa, Earl Warren, Bert Combs, Stan Musial, and Elizabeth Rudel Smith.

The test idea originated with Dr. Robert Obojski in his English classes. He described the reaction of his students to a lecture on the aftermath of World War I in the 1920's. Because of the class' apparent ignorance of that period, Dr. Obojski gave a test of 28 items to see whether the students were any better informed about present day affairs. One student missed all questions. To change this state, the instructor made a continuing assignment of reading a daily newspaper and weekly news magazine. Mrs. Ecker followed his example and gave her test.

Three students in Mrs. Ecker's classes did exceptionally well on the quiz. James Thurmond, English major from Louisville, and Sue Tucker, political science major from Russellville, correctly identified 36 of the 40 items. Bob McCoy, from Ekron, identified 35 correctly.

Mrs. Ecker said she sent the test results to Mr. Brinkley because he was the "most known of the Well known," and would probably be interested. She was rather surprised at the publicity, for she expected only a reply from him. She noted in her letter to Brinkley that the 67 were typical of the "average or better" division of the 1600-member freshman class. She and Dr. Obojski now require them to read a daily newspaper and news magazine.

Dr. Obojski expressed his opinion on the matter when he said, "I believe that we have taught one important lesson. It is just as important to read the daily newspaper as it is to read college textbooks. How can we teach them what happened in the world 50 and 100 years ago when we don't know what happened last week or even yesterday? However, as far as I'm concerned, Western students have taken the challenge—they're beginning to read newspapers and good periodicals intelligently. If the United States is to remain the Number One power in the world today, its citizenry must at least know how the world is put together."

NOW YOU CAN BE YOUNGER THAN SHE IS

It is a scientific fact that girls reach emotional maturity earlier than boys. For this reason freshman girls are reluctant to make romantic alliances with freshman boys, but instead choose men from the upper classes.

Thus the freshman boys are left dateless, and many is the night the entire freshman dorm sobs itself to sleep. An equally moist situation exists among upper-class girls. With upper-class men being snapped up by freshman girls, the poor ladies of the upper class are reduced to dreary, manless evenings of Monopoly and home permanents.

It pleases me to report there is a solution for this morbid situation—indeed, a very simple solution. Why don't the two great have-not groups—the freshman boys and the upper-class girls—find solace with each other?

True, there is something of an age differential, but that need not matter. Take, for example, the case of Albert Payson Sigafos and Eustacia Vye.

Albert Payson, a freshman in sand and gravel at Vanderbilt University, was walking across the campus one day, weeping softly in his loneliness. Blinded by tears, he stumbled upon the supine form of Eustacia Vye, a senior in wicker and raffia, who was collapsed in a wretched heap on the turf.

"Why don't you watch where you're going, you minor youth?" said Eustacia peevishly.

"I'm sorry, lady," said Albert Payson and started to move on. But suddenly he stopped, struck by an inspiration. "Lady," he said, tugging his forelock, "don't think me forward, but I know why you're miserable. It's because you can't get a date. Well, neither can I. So why don't we date each other?"

"Surely you jest!" cried Eustacia, looking with scorn upon his tiny head and body.

"Oh, I know I'm younger than you are," said Albert Payson, "but that doesn't mean we can't find lots of fun things to do together."

"Like what?" she asked.

"Well," said Albert Payson, "we could build a Snowman."

"Bah!" said Eustacia, grinding her teeth.

"All right then," said Albert Payson, "we could go down to the pond and catch some frogs."

"Ugh!" said Eustacia, shuddering her entire length.

"How about some Run-Sheep-Run?" suggested Albert Payson.

"You are callow, green, and immature," said Eustacia, "and I will thank you to remove your underaged presence from mine eyes."

Sighing, Albert Payson lighted a cigarette and started away.

"Stay!" cried Eustacia.

He stayed.

"Was that a Marlboro Cigarette you just lighted?" she asked.

"What else?" said Albert Payson.

"Then you are not immature!" she exclaimed, clasping him to her clavicle.

"For to smoke Marlboros is the very essence of wisdom, the height of American know-how, the incontrovertible proof that you can tell gold from dross, right from wrong, fine aged tobaccos from pale, pathetic substitutes. Albert Payson, if you will still have me, I am yours!"

"I will," he said, and did, and today they are married and run the second biggest wicker and raffia establishment in Duluth, Minnesota.

Debaters Hold Mock Trial

The Congress Debate club met Monday evening March 25, in the Garrett Student Center. President Pat Chamberlain presided over business. A short business meeting with an interesting program followed.

The program, developed by vice-president Richard Anderson, included a mock trial which was centered around the case of "Little Red Riding-hood".

A fairy-tale brought forth in the courtroom held the attention of every member throughout the program.

Sandra, a widely-known singer of gospel songs, is the senior member of the "Stuart Sisters," a trio that has appeared on many radio and television stations throughout the Mid-South and South. Sandra, along with her two younger sisters, Lana and Norah Lee, is professionally managed by her father, Mr. Noble Stuart.

The trio has appeared frequently in Bowling Green on Television Channel 13 and WKCT radio. The sisters have already made major appearances on WLWA-TV in Atlanta and on WBIR-TV in Knoxville. In addition they have made five E-P record albums through the Artists Recording Co. in Birmingham.

"Though I sing gospel songs primarily on a professional basis, commented Sandra, 'I enjoy popular music and particularly like such artists as Doris Day, Patti Page, Elvis Presley, and Frank Sinatra. On occasion, I also like to sing popular numbers.'"

"In fact, everything in the line of music appeals to me, from rock and roll to classical," she added. Her interest in writing dates back to the days when she was editor of Warren County High's student newspaper. Sandra hopes someday to become a professional writer.

As Queen of the Kentucky State Numismatic Association's Spring Coin Show, Sandra will present trophies to exhibit winners at a special banquet.

Breckinridge Addresses Political Science Class

Kentucky's Attorney General, John Breckinridge, spoke to a political science class here Friday, March 22.

Dr. William Jenkins, head of Department of Business and Government, introduced Mr. Breckinridge, who lectured the class on the office of attorney general.

Mr. Breckinridge told of the powers of Attorney General and explained that it served largely as chief legal official of the Commonwealth. He told of the needs of the Attorney General's office and the needs for improvement.

He told the class of the inadequacies of the legislature in empowering the attorney general's office. Mr. Breckinridge cited the examples of the Carter County school problem and the Newport case as cases where much power had to be assumed because it was not specifically granted.

Although this was not a campaign speech, Mr. Breckinridge told the class he was an independent candidate for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket. He urged members of the class to take an active part in politics and to vote.

Mr. Breckinridge was available to shake hands and talk to members of the class. He was in Bowling Green for a political rally held Saturday, March 23.

Bobby Rascie Chosen For Game Trials

Bobby Rascie, former basketball star for Western in 1960, '61 and '62, was named by the National Amateur Athletic Union Basketball Selection Committee as one of the twelve-man squad for the Pan-American Game Trials in Kansas City, April 1-2.

Bobby's selection came after the Phillips Oilers won their second straight AAU championship by defeating Denver 100-70. Rascie has played guard position for the Oilers this past season.

In addition to his duties with the Oilers, Rascie was a member of the AAU All-Star team which played the Russian Olympic Men's Basketball team. As a member of the same AAU All-Star squad, he traveled to Manila, Philippines, where the American team won the World Championship.

Before entering Western, Bobby was a four-sport letterman for his complete career at Daviess County High School. He was named a Prep All-American after leading his high school basketball team to runner-up position in the State Basketball Tournament.

While at Western, Bobby set an all-time scoring record for a three year career. He was twice named to the All-Ohio Valley Conference first team. Probably the honor Bobby takes the most pride in, is being named the only sophomore to be selected as the Sugar Bowl Classic's "Most Valuable Player" (1960).

He received the WHAS award, given annually to the outstanding basketball player of the Kentucky and Indiana Colleges and Universities, his senior year. He received the trophy for Western's "Most Valuable Player" in 1962. Rascie was also named to several All-American teams.

Omar (Bud) Browning, coach of the Oilers, was designated to coach the Pan-American Games. Playing with Rascie in these games will be Jim Hagan, All-American at Tennessee Tech, and Larry Pursiful from University of Kentucky.

There couldn't have been a more deserving person to receive the outstanding senior award than Bobby Jackson. Presented by radio station WLBJ at the annual basketball banquet, the Valley Station senior has been a stand-out for the Hilltoppers the last three years. His varsity career total of 1,000 points was enough to rank him ninth among Western all-time scorers.

Several professional teams, St. Louis Hawks, New York Knicks, and Chicago Zephyrs, have shown interest toward Bobby. He indicated that he wanted to finish school and then go into the coaching profession.

Olivet College Comes South

Five Olivet (Michigan) College trackmen and their coach Stu Parsell got in their station wagon and decided to head south during their spring vacation. They got as far as Bowling Green and Beech Bend and decided this was the place. Bowling Green seemed like Palm Beach to them since snow had been on the ground since November and their track was covered with two feet of the stuff. They ran at Beech Bend during the morning and on Western's track in the afternoons.

Coach Parsell had this to say about Southern hospitality, "I've never run into such friendly people as here in Bowling Green and I hope we can make this an annual trip." We hope they can come back next year too.

Track Meet Today

The track team will open their home season this afternoon against Fort Campbell. This will be the first of only three home meets and I think you are going to be surprised at the improvement of this year's squad than those of the past.

Culler and Lindsey Injured

Carson Culler, one of the best slotbacks in the conference, broke his right ankle during the first red-white scrimmage two weeks ago. Dale Lindsey, a highly touted UK transfer, tore some tendons in his ankle. Both boys are expected to be ready by September.

With returning lettermen Don Meyer, Danny Day and Jerold Moore, Coach Ted Hornback's tennis team will open their 16 game net card Friday against Kentucky Wesleyan at Owensboro.

Here I really feel I'm doing something for the cause of my country in these important times. How many jobs can you think of that start you off with this kind of responsibility? My wife's here, too, and she loves it. We get a chance to travel. We meet the people, learn new languages, customs. And there's a pretty active social life on post, too. But above all, I'm an officer with a job to do and with responsibilities to shoulder. I like it that way, and I have a hunch that my leadership training and experience will help me out whatever I do. Track Team To Open Home Season Today

The 1962 version of the Western Kentucky State College track team will open their home season this afternoon against a tough squad from Fort Campbell. This will be the first meet for the entire squad as they have been performing in various meets and relays since early February.

Fort Campbell, who provides the opposition this afternoon, is probably the toughest team the Toppers will meet all season. Even Murray the OVC track power has yet to beat the Army men.

The discus, javelin, and shot put will be held on the old baseball field behind West Hall and the rest of the field events and the track events are scheduled to get underway at 3:30 on the Stadium track.

Western's track team added two more firsts to their long list last weekend when they won two first place awards in the Olympic Development track meet at Nashville.

Paul Woodall captured first place in the pole vault with a vault of 13 feet, 6 inches. The Toppers two-mile relay team took first place with a time of 7:14.54, 54.1 seconds.

Denes Announces Signing Of Tackle Harold Smith

Head football coach Nick Denes has announced the signing of Harold Eugene Smith, 225-pound All-State tackle from Benton, Illinois, to an Ohio Valley Conference grant-in-aid.

"We're extremely happy to have a boy of Smith's caliber to come to Western," said Denes. "We know he'll do a good job for us."

The Hilltoppers landed Smith after he finished a brilliant career at Benton High School. He was a second-string selection on the Illinois All-State team his junior year and earned a first-string berth on the all-star squad his senior season. He also lettered in track and wrestling.

Jerome Beazley running the first leg of the relay sped the half mile in 1:57.6. He was followed by Johnny Noel's 2:02.6, Mike Oliver covered his 880-yards in 1:57.4, and anchor man Tom Garham finished up with a 1:56.7.

The relay team and Woodall were the only Western thirties who entered the meet.

Highlights of the meet were a 7 feet, 2 inches leap by John Thomas in the high jump and a broad jump of 26 feet, inches by Ralph Boston.

Grad Named Outstanding MHS Teacher

Miss Mary Hart Finley, AB '36, was recipient of the "Outstanding MHS Teacher for 1961" award at Madisonville High School, Tuesday, March 19, in an assembly program. The program, a feature of the National Teacher Appreciation Week, was presented by the MHS Key Club.

Guest speaker for the program was Harper Gattton, a member of the Kiwanis Club which sponsors the Key Club. His speech was entitled "Doing Common Things Uncommonly Well."

MHS Principal Charles Boozer presented Miss Finley, dean of girls at MHS, with the award. As she made her way to the stage she was given a standing ovation by the student body. She was presented an appropriately engraved plaque by Mr. Boozer.

The method used in selecting the outstanding teacher is as follows: Seniors and Key Club of officers - elect nominate eight members of the faculty for the award. The nominations are based on fairness, respect of students, confidence of students, popularity, stability, teaching ability, enthusiasm, and attainment of excellence, which covers what the teacher does for his or her department at school. Extra-curricular activities - such as church, school clubs, and the student dividends intellectually, morally, and spiritually - are also studied. Considering these areas, all class and club presidents vote to choose the outstanding teacher.

Women Students Take Weekend Hike To Franklin

There were more tired legs on campus, March 22, as three Western students walked to Franklin.

The three Western students were Sue Smiley, Charlotte Royal, and Ruth Moorman. Sue Smiley is a sophomore Spanish major from Vancouver; Charlotte, a junior Physical Education major from Owensboro; and Ruth, a sophomore Math major from Glen Dean.

The hikers started from Potter Hall at 4:50 a.m., and arrived in Franklin at 10:45. They stopped once to eat after walking twelve miles, but finished the twenty-one miles in five hours and thirty-five minutes.

The girls were willing to walk back, but were met by their friend Nancy Shrewsbury. They said they had several invitations to ride, along with 125 honks.

"It was excellent walking weather. We will never complain about walking down the Hill again," they said.

The girls are enthusiastic promoters of President Kennedy's Pace Corps. They proved to themselves that these hikes are for girls as well as boys.
