Discount cards leave few happy

By KEVIN A. FRANCKE

The Associated Student Government discount cards, delivered nearly two months later than intended, haven't lived up to their potential, according to several of the 21 businesses listed on the card.

Those sponsors, which paid $275 to have their name and discount printed on the cards, are angry mostly at University Press, Inc.

The company printed the cards and said they would be distributed to students during fee payment and registration early last fall.

But "printing problems" delayed delivery until the first week in October.

The contract between University Press and the individual businesses didn't say the cards would be in registration packets or exactly when the cards would be delivered.

It did say the anticipated delivery date would be seven to nine weeks after the last order of each school group was written.

Because at least two businesses signed in August, and the cards arrived in October, the company was within its time limit for delivery. Representatives couldn't be reached for comment at offices in Houston, Atlanta and Lewisville, Texas.

Because the cards didn't arrive in time to be distributed at registration, ASG decided to distribute them. The task fell specifically on Laura Simms, public affairs vice president, and she and her committee began to distribute the cards as soon as they arrived.

Simms said she believes all on-campus students got their cards, which were placed in dorm mailboxes. Enough cards were also left at fraternity and sorority houses for each resident.

But the problem, Simms said, came with the off-campus students. A table was set up in the university center for a week to distribute the cards, Simms said, but that received little response. Only about 10 percent of the off-campus students picked up their cards, she said.

At least 5,000 cards remain in Simms' office. Students who have not received one may get one by presenting their student identification at the ASG office in the university center, third floor, Simms said. The cards are valid until Sept. 1.

Though ASG endorsed the cards, it paid no money and only lent its

Male call: 'Fast Freddy's' strippers reveal bare facts

"Fast Freddy" Byler and his playboys came to Runway Five Thursday night to give the "ladies only" audience a show that they perhaps had never seen before and would probably never forget.

"Fast Freddy and the Playboys" are a group of male strippers who travel from coast to coast doing their 1 1/2-hour show, which consists of singing, comedy and dance.

The show met with mixed reactions from female Western students who attended, but wanted to remain anonymous to avoid ridicule from friends.

"I talked to some of them before the show and thought they were intelligent with their clothes on, but once they took their clothes off, they became sex objects and that turns me off," one said.

Another said the men were excellent dancers, but the show was an experience she'd rather not repeat.

"I would come back and see them," still another said. "The dancing was professional, but they could've done the same with their clothes on."

"I didn't know what to expect. I came along for the ride and I suppose I got it!" another commented.

Accident victims improve

Puddle is 'constant problem'

By KEVIN A. FRANCKE

A Bowling Green Street Department official said the puddle of water which accumulates on State Street in front of Cravens Graduate Center — and which a driver was trying to avoid when he lost control of his car Tuesday — has been a "constant problem" for the past few years.

The police report on the accident stated that the driver, Louisville freshman Mark Baldauff, "swerved into the left lane in order to avoid a large puddle of water in the right lane."

When Baldauff "swerved back into the right lane (and into the middle of the puddle) to miss an oncoming truck," he lost control of his vehicle, according to the report.

The car then hit several students on the sidewalk. Two are still in the hospital.

Lance Yelvington, A Franklin, Tenn., sophomore, regained consciousness Sunday and is listed in serious condition at St. Thomas Hospital in Nashville, according to

Civil rights plan adopted

By CYNDI MITCHELL

The Board of Regents executive committee gave its approval — with reservations — to Kentucky's higher education desegregation plan in a special meeting Thursday.

That plan, according to President Donald Zacharias, needed the endorsement of the state universities before the U.S. Office of Civil Rights would approve it.

The civil rights office has since forwarded the plan to the Legal Defense Fund of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which started the action 10 years ago when it filed a suit with the office.

Zacharias and the executive committee gave the plan their go-ahead, but a few points didn't meet with full approval.

"It should in no way be acknowledged that we construe each letter to be true.

"...There are specific statements that pertain to the mission model (formula for funding) and similar statements about funding that I frankly can't accept," Zacharias told the committee.

One page of Kentucky's plan, he said, states that the 1977 mission statements have had a positive impact on Kentucky's institutions. Those statements were used as the basis of the mission model budget formula, which, if used strictly, would give the majority of higher education money to the universities of Kentucky and Louisville and Northern.

"That's a council judgment. I certainly don't want to put my name on a document that says that," Zacharias said.

Members of the executive committee also had qualms about signing the plan if it would imply that Western approved the mission model budget formula as well.

University attorney Bill Bivin agreed that someone might try to assert that.

"But the purpose of the plan addresses itself to eliminating the vestiges of a dual system of higher education ...

"We're obligated (to sign the plan) insofar as that it's designed to achieve the elimination of the vestiges of segregation," Bivin said.

The council then decided to approve the plan "with objections."

"If it (the mission statements) had a positive effect, we (the state universities) wouldn't be in all this squabble," Regent Chairman Joe Bill Campbell said.

After the meeting, Campbell and Zacharias said Western's approval would contain a statement "that we have reservations and objections to committing to that portion (of the plan) that says mission statements have had a positive impact on higher education — they haven't," Campbell said.

Among the provisions of the plan affecting Western — most of it is concerned with upgrading Kentucky State — one calls for increased employment of black faculty and staff.

And the plan says a "faculty relocation" program should help. That means anyone — black or white — who loses his job because of changes made at Kentucky State, should get first consideration for job openings at the other state schools.

"If we hire somebody else," Zacharias said, "we have to document very clearly why we consider that individual is superior."

Western's other main role in the plan will be in retaining the percentage of black students enrolled at Western. Western's black enrollment — at 8.1 percent — is in keeping with the plan and will not have to be increased.

"But we do have a clear obligation to retain that percentage," Zacharias said.

The bulk of the plan addresses Kentucky State — the state's traditionally black university. Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. has agreed to give Kentucky State a one-time $400,000 state appropriation for upgrading its programs. However, the plan still says Kentucky State should receive no new money above its current $93 million annual budget until at least 1987.

The school has until April to apply to the state Council on Higher Education for any new programs.

audience, the women reached out to touch his chest and legs.

Byler had promised the audience that "when the hands go up, the pants go down," which caused them to applaud even louder when Ringo began taking off his white fringed shirt.

True to his promise, Ringo soon stripped down to a pink g-string. The g-string provided the women in the audience with a place to stuff dollars and prevented Ringo from being arrested for indecent exposure.

"A few of my playboys have been arrested ... for dropping a g-string," Byler said. "I haven't myself; I was always too fast!"

The next playboy to perform was "Big Al," also known as the "Midnight Cowboy."

He wore a black leather cowboy costume and danced with a boa constrictor around his neck. He was followed by "Teddy Bear," who danced to the Elvis song of the same name and wore a police uniform.

Byler performed the finale, wearing a red satin costume with white fringe, which he peeled off to reveal bikini briefs with stars and stripes on them and a red sequined g-string underneath.

Byler has appeared on such shows as ABC's 20-20, NBC's Today Show and the Phil Donahue show and has been featured in Playboy and Time magazine.

The program has been billed by the Associated Press and United Press International as the "number one act of its kind in the country," and it is also the highest paid show of its kind, Byler said.

Byler has been "in and out of entertainment" since he was 14 years old. He used to dance, and taught jazz, theatrical and disco dancing before becoming a professional pool player.

He decided to become a male stripper after frequenting bars and strip joints as a pool player for six years. He met several female strippers who encouraged him to become a stripper since he was such an exceptional dancer and enjoyed it so much.

"I've always loved to dance," he said. "Whenever I wasn't playing pool, I was dancing." Unfortunately, the only place he could perform as a male stripper at that time was in gay bars.

"I didn't want to do that, so I put together a show for ladies only," he said. "I decided to shock Americans."

"When I first started, I wondered what they (his friends and family) would think," he said. But "my whole town is behind what I do," including his family, he said.

After leaving Bowling Green, the group went back to Niles, Mich., for three days, where Byler planned to hire some new playboys for the first time in four years "to change and add to the show," he said.

"I'm going to keep my show," he said. "It's not a passing fancy. We're sold out months in advance." Within the next four years, he wants to do 800 one-night shows.

"After that, I'll sit down for a couple of months and decide if I want to keep doing it."

The sidewalk in front of Cravens Graduate Center on State Street becomes crowded between classes. Seven students were injured here last Tuesday when a car went out of control on the wet street. Two remain hospitalized.

Guardrail could lessen danger to students

It didn't have to happen.

A car and the weather combined last Tuesday to injure seven students.

Five students were hit. Two pedestrians are still in hospitals here and in Nashville, Tenn., and the passenger in the car was released from the medical center yesterday.

The site — on State Street in front of Cravens Graduate Center — is a familiar one. Because a storm drain is frequently clogged, runoff forms a large puddle at the bottom of the hill.

At least one car going toward the south end of campus has had trouble at that location before. Last semester a car hit a retaining wall by the steps to the graduate center, barely missing a line of students.

This time was different.

A car went out of control, hit a wall protecting a tree and ran over several pedestrians in the process.

Lance Yelvington lay in a coma for five days. John Lindholm now has a concussion and 20 stitches.

This tragedy could have been prevented.

The curve where State Street joins Normal Drive is a dangerous one. The extension of State Street can confuse a driver into thinking the main road is straight. When it rains, the problem becomes dangerous.

Cars familiar with the road whiz down the hill because it's convenient to do so. Some even playfully speed up when they reach the puddle, hoping to splash an unwary student.

The problem with the puddle can be easily fixed.

Rainwater sewers filled with leaves and branches can be cleaned by the street department, making it possible for the water to seep into the city's drainage system. According to Bobby Whittaker of Bowling Green Municipal Utilities, his company fixed a small water meter leak there Thursday. That will help a little.

But fixing the drain is not enough.

Since students rarely cross the street by the graduate center because no classroom buildings are on the other side, a guardrail could be installed.

A guardrail at the edge of the sidewalk wouldn't hamper pedestrian traffic, and it could be a necessary obstacle between car and student.

The rail would be the cheapest alternative to elevating or relocating the sidewalk out of the way of oncoming cars.

The money needs to be spent — quickly — before other students are injured on another rainy day.

In the buff: Baby pictures focus on stark reality

Something very embarrassing may be lurking in your past.

At first glance, it looks innocent enough — a dusty, battered old photo album, chocked-full of pictures from your parents' good old days. That's all well and good — until the part where you entered their lives.

And nine times out of 10, you'll find a nice picture of yourself — stark naked, grinning for all the world to see.

I'm one of the lucky ones. My mother had the presence of mind to restrain from such photos 21 years ago. A couple of my old hometown friends aren't so fortunate.

Over the weekend, my mom and I paid a visit to Marcia (not her real name) to see some pictures of her baby nephew, taken over the holidays. The usual assortment was there: Grandma holding baby, Grandpa holding baby, Aunt Marcia holding baby, Grandma holding baby while Grandpa and Aunt Marcia stare at camera, Papa keeping Bowser the dog from dragging baby to basement...

Among the umpteen dozen snapshots were a number of little Junior getting a bath in Grandma's kitchen sink. That's not so bad, except no one had seen fit to place some soapsuds in strategic places or to take the shot from a less revealing angle.

Marcia never winces, saying something about how she'd "seen it all before." She did giggle a lot, though.

And I always thought Marcia was a nice girl.

But I did wince, if for no other reason than I was the only male present, and I suddenly felt rather disrobed. I had the urge to grab a nearby towel.

Maybe it brought back a memory from my not-too-distant past — the time on a high school band trip when some flag girls of questionable virtue stuck a Playgirl magazine into my uniform bag.

It wouldn't have been quite as bad if my mom hadn't been a chaperone on my bus.

Marcia's picture parade continued, though the R-rated stuff had run out. But when everyone had seen that batch of snapshots, her mom pulled out another album — this one with baby pictures of Marcia and her big brother.

Marcia cringed. I snickered and did my best Groucho Marx leer.

As it turned out, Marcia had nothing to fear — the photos preceded her birth by several months. Instead, it was her brother who had the starring role, someone I've never had any desire to see in the nude.

I felt naked again. Marcia giggled a lot and did Groucho Marx leers of her own.

It seems Marcia's folks were particularly fascinated by her brother's then-completed potty training. And as a sort of end-of-lesson recital, I suppose, the poor kid was positioned on top of the wiggly potty to perform for all present.

I grimaced.

I failed to see why someone was compelled to record such bodily functions on film, but his mother thought it hilarious. "Why, it was so cute — he just sat down right there and —"

"Please — spare me the gory details," I said.

Apparently, such photography is not limited to Marcia's clan. On the way home, Mom told me about how an uncle once took a home movie of his grandson "watering the bushes."

"You never took any pictures of my doing stuff like that did you?" I asked my mother as we drove.

"No, Why?" she said.

"Well, we're still across town from home, and I'd hate for you to have to walk all that way."

Payne's appeal fails; regent election set

By KEVIN A. FRANCKE

As expected, Associated Student Government President David Payne's request for Kentucky residency status was denied by the university resident committee Friday after only a few minute's deliberation.

The committee's decision means that a university-wide election will have to be held to fill the student spot on the Board of Regents, since a Kentucky resident must be in that position.

The position has been vacant since Marcel Bush resigned as ASG president two weeks ago.

Payne felt that he had a "slim chance" when he brought his case before the committee, but said he "had nothing to lose."

In his statement to the committee during the closed hearing, Payne told of his "hard work for higher education in Kentucky," and of his intent to live in Kentucky after his graduation in May, he said.

He also mentioned in his statement that he had applied for an internship this summer with Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky, has a Kentucky driver's license and retained residency in Bowling Green during last summer's break.

The committee told Payne the major problem with his case was that he had not retained residency continuously for 12 months before enrolling at Western.

Payne said he was told that the committee "could not bend the rules" and give him residency status because it could "open up the door" for many other students with similar cases.

Students wishing to seek the position of Board of Regents student must be a full-time student enrolled at Western for two semesters, one of which had to be the preceding semester.

Other requirements are a minimum of 45 credit hours, a grade-point average of 2.5 or above, Kentucky residency and no record of disciplinary probation.

Alesia Canafax, ASG's rules and elections chairman, said anyone interested in running for the position should come to the student government office and fill out an application of candidacy between today and 4 p.m. Friday.

The election will be Feb. 9, according to Ron Beck, ASG adviser and assistant student affairs dean.

This is the third time since the state first began allowing a student on the Board of Regents of state colleges and universities in 1970 that such a special election has been held at Western.

Greg McKinney of Bowling Green was elected student regent for the 1974-75 academic year when that year's president, Jeff Consolo of Mansfield, Ohio, was ineligible.

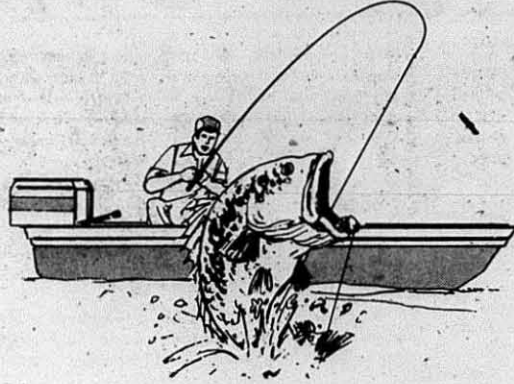

Mike Fiorella of Owensboro was elected student regent for 1972-73 when Ed Jordan from New Jersey was student body president.

Even though the student regent election will not take place until after the next regent meeting Saturday, that chair may not be vacant.

According to Joe Bill Campbell, regent chairman, an ASG vice president will be invited to the meeting as an observer.

Campbell said that though the board's next scheduled meeting after Saturday isn't till the last week of April—by then a new ASG president and student regent will be elected—special meetings may be held.

Group wants parity with '73 salaries

Faculty pay increase requested

By ERICA SMITH

The Congress of Senate Faculty Leaders has proposed a 15 percent salary increase for teachers at all state universities except the University of Kentucky and will try to get support for the plan in the General Assembly.

(UK was excluded from the plan because it does not belong to COSFL.)

Tom Jones, COSFL chairman and an associate professor of English here, said the group approved on Saturday a "parity plan" devised by Steve West, Murray faculty regent.

Jones said he wouldn't give any details until he distributes pamphlets at a press conference at 10 a.m. today.

The increase is to achieve purchasing power equal to 1973 when that power began to decline, Jones said.

"We have not received cost-of-living increases in recent memory. Even when we got 10 percent, inflation was 14 percent," Jones said. Western faculty salaries haven't included a cost-of-living increase for nine years, Jones said.

Jones said he's not sure about faculty reactions. "Till I talk to more of them, I just can't speculate."

Money, he said, is why 16 tenure-track faculty members left Western last year. And he said it's not a new issue. "It's just surfaced real hard now. That's what (Gov. John Y.) Brown and the others in Frankfort are so surprised about."

"Our hope is to get a bill prepared and get it introduced in either house of the legislature, and that way, we will have a specific thing to lobby for," Jones said.

"I'm quite aware that lobbyists ... are prepared to compromise," he said. "I don't want the faculty to think we're foolish" in asking for 15 percent more.

Jones said COSFL is "hesitant" to estimate how much the pay increases would cost, or even where the money would come from. "That's what the legislature would do."

Jones said he plans to lobby "off and on" in Frankfort as discussion on higher education comes up.

We were wrong

Because of an editing error in a story on life insurance in Thursday's paper, State Farm insurance agent Ray Thomas was incorrectly quoted as saying "Any type of permanent life insurance could be called an investment, but it compares poorly to other types of investment." The statement was made by Dr. Marvin Albin, associate professor of business-distributive education and office administration.

Distant Relationships

not misunderstanding*

By MONICA DIAS

Carla Wilcoxson and Sherry Pendley are separated from their husbands.

Their marriages aren't on the rocks; they are both finishing their education here while their husbands live and work in other cities.

Wilcoxson and Pendley live in dorms; but as soon as their Friday classes dismiss, they pack their bags and drive home for an extended weekend with their husbands, returning in time for class on Monday morning.

"People don't believe me when I tell them I'm married," Wilcoxson, a Greensburg senior, said. "When I tell them I'm married, they say I'm crazy. They can't believe I'm doing it." She said she and her husband, Mike, were "high school sweethearts" and were married in June 1981. And she said she doesn't regret marrying before her graduation in May.

"We really didn't see any reason to wait," she said. Her husband is an accountant in Nashville, Tenn., and "with one of us working, we thought it wouldn't be too bad with just one of us in school."

Wilcoxson doesn't get homesick, she said, because she has the long weekends with her husband to look forward to every week.

"I get lonely, but having my friends here helps a lot," she said. She calls her husband when she misses him, she said, "but I try to think about something else, or go shopping." One of her biggest problems is adjusting

*"I don't feel like I belong here anymore.
I can't go to parties —
there's not much reason to go."*

— Carla Wilcoxson Risen

to "being a student here and a wife at home," she said. And she feels alienated from other students because she is married.

"I don't feel like I belong here anymore. I can't go to parties — there's not much reason to go," she said, laughing. "It (school) just feels different. I feel like I belong at home in Nashville."

She uses her maiden name, Wilcoxson, at school because that is how all of her friends and teachers know her. Her married name is Carla Risen.

Sherry Pendley, a Greenville sophomore, said being married and living at school has some advantages.

"It helps me with school because I can study without distractions," she said. "I don't have to worry like other people do about where their next date is coming from. I have that secure."

She met her husband, Johnny, during the five days that she worked at a fast-food restaurant, Pendley said. He was a customer, and four months later they were married.

"I've always been the one to say 'I'll never get married until I'm 30 years old.' But I was sincere," she said. "When I told my friends and my family that I was getting married, I practically had to pick them up off the floor."

Pendley tried commuting to school, but it was inconvenient, she said. "It was just too much, and my grades suffered. Plus, I was spending about $150 a month on gas."

By living at school, she said, she can keep up with her classes and not spend so much time on the road.

"Not getting to talk about the little things" with her husband is one of the biggest disadvantages to their separation, she said. But the days she spends at school "go by so fast that I don't have time to miss him."

"I think he takes it harder than I do. Most of his friends are married, so he doesn't have that many people to talk to."

Although she only sees her husband for a few days, Pendley said she doesn't feel like she's missing out on experiencing day-to-day married life.

"(Living apart) makes us closer because it makes the time when we're together more valuable," she said.

Pendley said a college education is important to her future, so she doesn't regret having to live away from her husband for a few days each week.

"Anything's better than $3.35 an hour for the rest of your life."

She'll probably get a job in a big city because that's where most of the public relations jobs are, Pendley said. "You have to go where the jobs are. Johnny says wherever I go, he'll go."

Her husband is a test driller for coal with an engineering company in Central City.

Their husbands handle the housework while Pendley and Wilcoxson are at school. But Wilcoxson said her husband isn't too crazy about cooking.

Despite hurried packing on Friday afternoons, sad departures on Monday mornings and frequent loneliness during the week, Pendley said it has all been worth it.

"Everything I've always wanted is starting to fit into place," she said.

Wilson explodes in 65-57 win

By MARK HEATH

Tony Wilson returned to form in Diddle Arena last night with a sparkling performance that gave Western its sixth straight win—a 65-57 upset of Dayton.

The junior forward had averaged 10.4 points in Western's first 16 games, about four points a game fewer than he scored a year ago.

But last night he exploded for 25 points—including three key dunks—and grabbed seven rebounds.

"Coach told me to go play, just go out there and have fun," Wilson said. "I played loose. Things I thought about doing, I just did."

Western started sluggishly and trailed 32-28 at the half.

It was Wilson who took control with Western trailing 46-44 with about eight minutes left in the game.

He hit two shots from the 18-foot range and followed with a slam dunk that put the Toppers ahead 50-46.

After a fast break layup by Bobby Jones, Wilson followed with another slam dunk to give Western its longest lead of the night, 54-46.

And when Dayton cut Western's lead to 60-57 with 1:39 left, Wilson went to work again. He scored the last five points of the game on his third dunk and three free throws.

"At halftime (I) told (them) to look for Wilson," Western coach Clem Haskins said. "He (only) had two fouls and we wanted to take advantage of the size and mismatch... that was the key, we wanted Wilson to take the basketball, one or two dribbles, jump up and stick the ball in the hole."

"Also, our game plan is to go inside with the basketball every opportunity we can," Haskins said.

The non-conference win increased Western's overall record to 11-6. Dayton dropped to 12-4.

The Hilltoppers maintained a share of the Ohio Valley Conference lead after road wins over Youngstown and Akron.

Western and Murray are now 7-1 in league play.

On Saturday night, Western scored a 66-59 victory over Youngstown.

On Thursday night, Western defeated Akron 77-68. The three-way tie for the OVC lead was broken when co-leader Murray beat Middle Tennessee 59-58.

Canty expects close game against Dayton tonight

By NICK SHUTT

Western coach Eileen Canty expects a close game tonight when her team takes on the University of Dayton at 7:30 in Diddle Arena.

"We beat them on their home court last year," Canty said, "but it was a tough ballgame. We're coming back home tonight after playing two really good games. The main thing I don't want to do is overlook Dayton."

Dayton, 7-9 this season, is led in scoring and rebounding by center Donna Burks, who averages 16 points and 98 rebounds a game. Forward Debbie Wilson is second in both categories with 11 points and 8 rebounds.

Women's Basketball

"They're a small team," Canty said. "Their tallest player is only 6 foot, and hopefully we can use our height to an advantage."

Center Dianne Depp and forward Lillie Mason lead Western's scoring attack, averaging 17.4 and 16 points, respectively. Depp is also the team's leading rebounder averaging 7.8.

Hard work pays off for Depp

By MARK MATHIS

Dianne Depp is an example of the American work ethic in action.

And Coach Eileen Canty is convinced that her 6-foot-1-inch center continues to improve because of her attitude in practice and her willingness to work hard.

"Dianne has worked hard on fundamentals — that's what her so good," Canty said. "In practice she takes shots that she would take in a game. She is very consistent!"

The Jewensboro sophomore won high school letters in basketball, track, golf and cross country. She was an all-district and all-region performer in basketball and participated in several all-star games despite playing just two years of high school basketball.

As a high school senior she set the state record in the high jump at 5-8½, a mark that still stands.

Western, Murray, Eastern and the University of Kentucky were among the colleges competing for Depp's athletic talents.

Depp, aid her high school coach, Grant Talbott, knew Canty "and he sort of influenced me. Also, it was only an hour away from home, so my parents could come and see me play."

Depp's parents have missed seeing their daughter play only once this season, and that was when she scored a season-high 29 points against the University of Tennessee (Chattanooga). "When I see them up there in the stands it really psyches me up," she said.

The center didn't waste any time making her mark at Western. As a freshman she set a school record for field goal percentage when she hit 116 of 194 shots for 59.8 percent. She also hit 73 percent from the foul line and led the team in rebounding with an average of 8 a game.

This season Depp has picked up where she left off last season. She is again leading the team in scoring

Topper Notes

Track

The men's track team had some bad news and some good news Saturday at Murfreesboro, Tenn.

The Toppers finished a distant second to Middle Tennessee, but three Western competitors qualified for the National Collegiate Athletic Association indoor meet and two school records were set.

Steve Bridges qualified in the long jump with a leap of 25-feet 1-inch. Simon Cahill and Ashley Johnson both qualified in the mile with the identical time of 4:04.9.

Tony Smith's 737 seconds set a school record in the 60-yard high hurdles, and Ben McCloud set a school mark in the 300-yard dash with a 30.83.

Swimming

Western's swimming meet against Eastern Illinois Saturday was canceled because of an ice storm in Charleston, Ill.

"We were really up for the meet and it was a big letdown," Coach Bill Powell said.

Canty said that she is pleased with the play of her team at this point in the season. Western has a 5-8 record.

"I think we've been playing with more confidence in the last couple of weeks," she said. "We're cutting down on our turnovers, which is a sign of floor maturity. We're playing better together as a team, and we're also playing with more aggressiveness."

Western finished second to 20th-ranked Auburn in the Dial Classic last weekend at Auburn, Ala.

Mason scored 23 points and Depp added 20 as the Toppers posted an 80-77 first-round win over Valdosta State Saturday night.

In the 76-51 loss to Auburn in Sunday's championship game, the Toppers shot a cold 30 percent from the field.

"We had good shot selection," Canty said, "but a lot of our shots just didn't fall."

Western never led in the game as Auburn raced to a 39-20 halftime

Tony Ray has left team, Haskins says

Ironically, former Western guard Tony Ray was on the cover of last night's Western-Dayton game program.

But the 6-foot, 1-inch sophomore transfer from High Point, N.C., wasn't even in Diddle Arena — he returned to North Carolina last week following Western's 65-49 win over Middle Tennessee and, ac-lead.

Canty has confirmed a report that she is considering leaving Western after this year.

Earl Cox, sports columnist for The Courier-Journal, reported in Sunday morning's newspaper that cording to Coach Clem Haskins, is no longer on the team.

"Tony and I agreed that he should go somewhere where he could play," Haskins said. "He is a streak player who didn't fit into the kind of control basketball we play."

"When he first joined the team I thought he could adjust to fit in our

"All I can say at this point is that I have been contacted," Canty said yesterday. "I have a commitment to Western throughout this year."

program. But as time went on, he did not. It is unfortunate."

Haskins said Ray will attempt to transfer to another college; Haskins said he is "doing everything I can to help find him someplace to play."

Ray had played in 10 of the Hilltoppers' first 13 games, scoring 30 points and shooting 53 percent from the field (14 of 26).

and rebounding with just more than 18 points and almost seven rebounds a game.

She is the second leading scorer in the conference and her 61 percent accuracy from the field is Ohio Valley Conference best. She ranks seventh in the nation in field goal percentage.

Her 80 percent free throw percentage is fourth best.

When Western has the ball, the team looks for Depp to score, but she doesn't seem to feel the pressure. "If I don't get the points, then we have other people who can score. Coach wants me to really hit the boards," Depp said.

Rebounding may be her strongest asset, Canty said. "She gets good position, and she always seems to know where the ball will come down."

Depp said getting in good position is critical. "I've played against some big girls, and they use their muscle," Depp said.

Depp, who earned a spot last year on the All-OVC freshman team and the All-OVC second team, said she would like to make the first team this year.

But she is more concerned about team goals than personal accomplishments. "I won't be terribly upset if I don't make the All-OVC squad," Depp said.

Many businesses aren't happy

By KEVIN A. FRANCKE

The manager of the Hair Loom Gallery on the 31-W By-Pass thinks she was "ripped off."

Barbara Corbett paid $275 to have a 10 percent discount on all haircuts and tanning booth use advertised on discount cards endorsed by the Associated Student Government.

She said only about five students had used the cards, and "that might be exaggerating."

Many students who come through her shop have never heard of the discount cards and don't know how to get one, she said. "I sure wouldn't do it again."

Of the 21 sponsors on the card, eight businesses said they wouldn't be a sponsor again; five said they would; another five weren't sure; two have gone out of business; and one isn't honoring the cards.

Sandy Lowe, manager of Quality Typing Service on State Street, said the cards would have been more effective had they been in the registration packets as they were supposed to have been. She blamed the cards' inefficiency of University Press Inc, the company that contacted the sponsors and printed the cards.

"I would not be interested (again) unless it was more quality-controlled, and I would never prepay the amount," she said.

B.G. Auto Parts, 95 State St, is not honoring the cards, which list a 25 percent to 50 percent discount on all auto parts at the store.

Manager E.L. Dugard said his prices are already as much as 50 percent lower than his competition and the card was only supposed to make students aware his prices were lower.

Some sponsors are more favorable toward the card.

Cheryl Buntin, advertising manager of Imperial Health Spa in Western Gateway Shopping Center, said the cards have been a good investment and that the spa receives about three cards a week.

The spa offered a free visit and a 10 percent discount with the card. Sydney Ward, manager of Famous Recipe Fried Chicken, said he receives several cards a week.

Famous Recipe offered a dollar off a three-piece chicken dinner and a medium drink with the card.

Five of the sponsors said, they aren't sure if they would sponsor the card again.

Gary Smith, manager of the Bouquet Shoppe on the by-pass, said, "I haven't got my money's worth yet, but I believe I will. At least, I hope so."

Smith said he had seen about 50 cards but he would have to see "many more" before he considered the sponsorship profitable.

Two of the businesses listed on the card have gone out of business since the cards were issued.

Discount cards satisfy few

name to them.

Simms said whether the company would ask the congress to endorse the cards next year was unknown, but she said she doubted it. "After the problems they have had with us, I doubt if they would consider it," she said.

Simms referred to the congress's contacting Better Business Bureau offices in Texas and Georgia after the cards were a month late. It was thought that UPI might have been a hoax, but just as Marcel Bush, then-president of ASG, began to file legal complaints against the company, it was announced that the cards would arrive soon.

Until two years ago, ASG printed discount cards at its own expense as a student service. Merchants were not charged to participate.

But the service was dropped because costs increased. Steve Fuller, ASG president last spring when many of the contracts were signed, said he contracted with UPI because he was interested in starting the service again.
