MOUNTAIN PEOPLE'S WORKSHOP HELD

The photojournalism program held its annual Mountain People's Workshop in Liberty, Kentucky. It consisted of the most prestigious faculty ever. The faculty was made up of: Jack Corn of the Chicago Tribune, Tom Hardin of the Louisville Courier Journal, Bradley Clift, this year's National Newspaper Photographer of the Year from the Hartford Current, and Joanna Pinneo, third place Magazine Photographer of the Year and photojournalist for the Southern Baptist "Commission" magazine. There were 26 shooters in all at the Mountain People's Workshop.

PRO-AM DAY SUCCESS

The public relations professional amateur day was held Nov. 18, in Louisville, Ky. The program used a professional in the public relations field by matching him/her with an amateur for the day. The professional went through the routines of the day and the student tried to learn something about the practitioners trade.

The day ended with a meeting in the clubhouse of Churchill Downs for both the Kentucky Bluegrass Chapter of PRSA and the respective students and amateurs.

CONSULTANTS CONTINUE

Leaving for personal reasons, Brian Douglas, the former director of Kentucky Consultants, has turned the organization over to Mark Gibson, Steve Perry and Tammy Owens.

The agency started in the spring of 1986 with the publication of the Navigator, and has since grown into a four-publication agency with the recent addition of Navistar's Financial Quarterly Times.

The agency will continue to grow as it enters its second year of operation.

"The students need to realize the great opportunity Kentucky Consultants is providing. It offers some of the best hands-on experience at Western," said Tammy Owens, the agency's copy coordinator. "You can see a part of the real world in the agency--it's the short step before professionalism," said Steve Perry, the creative director of the agency.

Kentucky Consultants Advisor Dr. Robert Blann has taken a more active role since Douglas' exit. With the help of Dr. Blann and the dedicated Consultants staff, the agency intends to explore new avenues in designing and publishing for their respective clients.
