As To The Opening Of School

Ogden opens today.

As I walk up State street, I notice the attitude of the various boys that I see around me.

One group is gathered around a tall, muscular-built boy. As they slowly approach the corner, I can hear rather frequent mention of football. One wants to know about the coach, another about the number of letter men that are coming back.

Passing this group, I approach another. The chief figure of this crowd is asking forth on the prospects of an orchestra.

A tall youth, wearing spectacles, is holding the attention of a bunch around the gate with an account of how he 'got by' one of the professors last year.

Ogden opens today.

The bell rings, and they all troop in to chapel.

Again I am interested in the different reactions of the various boys. Some sit like dumb beasts awaiting the slaughter. Others are scattered around in groups of three or four each. These groups are, apparently, self-centered. But the largest of these is composed of Freshmen. Stepping over, I find the topic under consideration is that of the best method of organization. This must be done at once, if the very complex rights of the Freshmen are to be properly looked after. A good sized bunch is centered around an animated boy in grey. This group is discussing the all absorbing topic of football. Suddenly, a rather stout young man steps up and asks about the school paper. Then, in the midst of the ensuing storm of protest, in walks the President.

Ogden opens today.

The President says that he hopes the boys will get along well with the Faculty. That the prospects are good, and that the standard of work has been raised. Also the course has been stiffened by the addition of some new subjects.

Football Season Opens

The opening of the Ogden College likewise marked the opening of her football training season. At the first call for Varsity candidates, thirty-one students reported for practice. All of these men are working hard under the leadership of Mr. Allen Thornton, former University of Virginia star. Mr. Thornton has consented to give his time and valuable assistance toward the making of a successful "Grid" team at Ogden. He, with the aid of Mr. Lucas Squires and Mr. J. H. Thornton, are getting the candidates in shape for the coming season.

Wonderful spirit is being shown by the faculty and student body. Those who are unable to go out for the team are assisting in every possible way in order that little old Ogden may have a winning team.

Several old players have returned and are displaying the same ability that made last year's team famous. The old stars that are back are: Porter Lindsay, Smith, J. Vale, Pickles, McNally, Thomas, Hill, Williams, Fitch, Spellman, and Shelton. Among the new candidates that are showing up well are: Thornton, McGinley, Cole, Huffman, Eisenhart, Kinclow, Jackson, Brashear, Amos, Carmichael and Lashmit.

A Description

He is a rather small boy. In fact, he wears short trousers. These trousers are so short that they only come to his knees. He usually wears a blue slip-over sweater, tan trousers, tan shirt and a military hat. This hat is always worn at a "devil may care" angle. This youth has sandy hair. His feature are open, but rather cocky. As would be expected, he has a very large mouth. And, what is worse, he has a voice that is, if any difference, a size too large for that mouth. But to cap the climax, he thinks that he is the original "funny guy", so those in his presence must always hear his continual chatter.

Chapel "Sings"

Prove Popular

Prof. Hilary, the popular language instructor, has introduced a new feature into the Chapel program at Ogden. Twice a week he takes charge of the exercises and conducts a good old fashioned "sing." The students have given their hearty support and a movement is now on foot to secure suitable songbooks.

Alumni Notes

The graduates of '22 have found it not such a long jump from college days to the sterner side of life. However, they have all taken to the new order of things like a fish does to water and are making good. We have heard from the following since the opening of this session.

Foeman Rudd is now Professor of English and History in the Bowling Green High School. Besides his regular work, Mr. Rudd is teaching the High School football team.

William C. Lee, the honor graduate of last year's class, is now Professor of Natural Science in our own school.

As we all come in contact with Mr. Lee every day, there is no doubt but what his work is of the highest caliber.

Carroll James, our former Editor-in-Chief, is now attending the Bowling Green Business University.

Conrad Tienhoven (Old Sorrel Top) has settled down for good and is now in the retail shoe business.

John Adsit has accepted a position as Professor of Languages in the Jamestown High School at Jamestown, Louisiana.

Presley Perkins is continuing his studies at Vanderbilt.

Lively Holland can now be found at Davidson Bros, the local wholesale grocers.

Ward Sumpier is at the University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida. He is taking some advanced work in science and will have his B. S. next spring. Ward is also teaching a class and assisting in the University laboratory several hours a week.

Editorial

Well, here we are again. Just as strong as we ever were, and ready to do anything in our power to boost old Ogden. We intend to give the school a live, newsy paper and if it is possible to surpass the efforts of last year, we will try to do so.

Our finances are in splendid shape and as our little paper is published and financed by the student body, we should be proud of this fact. The subscriptions are coming in thick and fast. Faculty subscriptions have reached the one hundred per cent mark and the student body is very near that goal.

In order that we may have a better paper, we must have more articles turned in from the students. Here is a good opportunity for everyone of you to display that spark of journalism that you have fostered so long in secret. Here is a good chance for you to see your own work in print. And no outsider need ever know who wrote it. Just hand it to a member of the Staff, and, if it is suitable, it will be published without any undue notice.

As to our policy for the year—the Cardinal was published during the last session on the basis that it was a mirror of the happenings of the College, and it tried to portray them truthfully and colorfully with apologies to no one. This is the policy of the present Staff and we are hoping that we may carry it out to the letter.

DIRTY DOZEN ORGANIZES.

For many years the Dirty Dozen has been a source of terror to unruly Preps, and this organization has already held one of its mysterious meetings at their secret clubhouse and the following men were elected as members and officers:

Hill
Lashmit
Assistant Chief
Bray
First Lieutenant
Kinslow
Second Lieutenant
J. Smith
Scribe
Vale
Bar Tender
Williams
Designer
Huffman
Mascot
D. Smith
Waterboy
Gilliam
Chaffeur
Shelton
Social Entertainer
Chandler
Minister

About forty candidates were present at the meeting and everyone strove valiantly for one of the twelve seats around the table, but after the smoke cleared away, the gentlemen named above were found to be comfortably seated in the midst sought for places. However, the remaining candidates have not lost hope and if one of the twelve fails to keep his pledge, they will have another trial, providing they abide by the rules in the meantime.

The only business transacted was the adoption of the motto, "Where we light we Sting," which is derived from the favorite name of the organization, THE YELLOW JACKETS. As near as can be learned, the constitution runs as follows:

Preamble.

We, the members of the Dirty Dozen, believing that the rights of the College men are in danger, have banded ourselves together in order that those rights may be upheld. To better prepare ourselves for the task of suppressing Prepsim, we have agreed to abide by and enforce the following rules and regulations:

Section A (Personal.)

Rule 2. Each member shall grow a mustache and sideburns, in order that he may be distinguished from a common student.

Rule 2. He shall foster an air of dignity that will not wilt in the presence of non-members, seniors or other upper-classmen.

Rule 3. Each member must be present at each meeting or he will be treated as a Freshman.

Confessions of an Associate Editor

"Yes, I know that you can't write anything that is worth reading, but you have to write something or I'll fire you."

"But, just listen to a little reason. If I write anything for that old paper, I'll have to skip Football practice."

"I don't care if you have to skip your own wedding. You must have me an article ready by morning, or rhetoric won't meet tomorrow."

So with this dire threat, my erstwhile friend, Alvis Temple, slammed the door. He slammed the door to all the pleas that awaited the school boy. He did more. He willfully denied me all the pleasure of being pounded by my pals on the football field. And instead of this, he left me without a thought in my poor old head.

As I sat chewing the end off a perfectly good pencil, there came to me a daring thought. If I could only do it. The more I thought about the idea, the better it seemed to me. At last I had the whole thing fixed in my mind. And when I got through with that Alvis Temple, why his own mother would be ashamed to see him come home. So I grabbed the still melancholy remnant of my new pencil, and started to put down in black and white the wonderful scheme. It took both sides of three sheets of paper to expose to the public the innermost workings of the cruel Editor-in-Chief. But when I had finished, I had to admit that the thing was good. It was excellent. In fact it was so exactly critical that if I, the injured one, even crossed out the last and cruellest paragraph. So I laid it away and waited for the morning.

The next day, I presented the paper to Alvis, happy in the prospect of again teaching my Rhetoric class. Temple slowly read the paper. Then he turned his glassy eye on me. He gazed at me long and steadily, then, "You poor prune I only wanted a hundred and fifty words."

T. Thomas: "Didn't you see me downtown yesterday? I saw you twice."

"Where were you born?"

We know some boys who would rather blow their own horns than listen to Sousa's band.

Our Janitor Bill was brought into court the other day on a charge of vagrancy. After hearing the evidence the judge pondered for a moment before passing the sentence and said, "Bill, you are fined ten dollars."

Whereupon Bill said, "Boss that's a small skimpation. Ah got ten dollars right down in mah left-hand vest pocket."

"Well," continued the judge, "just dig right down in your right-hand vest pocket and say if you can find thirty days."

A negro philosopher, says the Courier-Journal living on a farm, drew the money end of a debate on this question: "Which is the most valuable, an education or money? The negro won the debate with this line of reasoning: "Just go to a butcher shop, say, Gimme an education's worth o' pork chops and see what you get."

As all crap shooters know, you must talk with the dice if you are to keep them trained to work for your bankroll. Here are some of the expressions found effective by that high rolling black Wildcat, Hugh Wiley's famous African golfer:

"Tiger dice, claw me! Turtle dice, off de log: Soup dice, get slick! Gun dice, pull de trigger; Snow babies, let the spot specks read seven! Rooster dice, crow de pay roll! Mule dice, kick dat boy into de rivah! Bam! an' I read five deuce."—Saturday Evening Post.

The meanest man on record is said to live in Shrewsbury, Mass. He sold his son-in-law one-half of a cow, and then refused to divide the milk, maintaining that he sold only the front half. The buyer was also required to feed the cow and carry water to her three times a day. Recently, the cow hooked the old man, and now he is suing his son-in-law for damages.

Shorty Harris: "No, does he?"
Masey: "It's true—he recited in class this morning."

Faculty Notes

All professors are delighted with the prospects in the various departments in the school. The enrollment in all classes is good and the students are all hard at work.

Dr. Edgerton has instituted a course in Pedagogy in his department. Any Ogden student may now secure the State's Teacher's Life Certificate upon graduation.

By changing some text books and adding a small library of his own to that of the College, Professor Palmer has increased the scope of the History and Social Science Department very much.

Professor Hilary, by the addition of Greek 1, now has a list of languages to offer that is not equaled in many larger institutions.

Prof. Ayres' mathematics classes are proceeding in the same systematic and efficient way that characterized his work last year.

Professor Lee, is a marvel when it comes to efficiency. We should be proud of the smoothness with which our Natural Science Department is run. This is the largest Department in the College and our laboratories are better equipped than ever before.
