Behind the Curtain: These Shining Lives Photo Gallery

Members of the Department of Theatre and Dance painted on their brave faces last weekend to portray the bold women of "These Shining Lives," the department's latest performance. The play, set in the 1920s, follows the exploits of four women and those who supported them as they fought for their rights after learning that they were being exposed to fatal radiation poisoning at their jobs. It opened on Saturday, Sept. 23 and closed on Tuesday.
