7-13-2018

UA12/2/1 College Heights Herald

WKU Student Affairs

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.wku.edu/dlsc_ua_records

Part of the African American Studies Commons, Higher Education Administration Commons, Journalism Studies Commons, Mass Communication Commons, and the Sports Studies Commons

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.wku.edu/dlsc_ua_records/6189

This Newsletter is brought to you for free and open access by TopSCHOLAR®. It has been accepted for inclusion in WKU Archives Records by an authorized administrator of TopSCHOLAR®. For more information, please contact topscholar@wku.edu.
Richard Miller, 70, stepped down as vice provost for policies and personnel on June 30, 2018, after 12 years in the position. He will retire in December. Miller has worked for 43 total years in university administration. Before that, he was drafted into the San Francisco Giants minor league baseball team. Photo by Dalton Puckett/HERALD.

Imam Sedin Agic (right) shares his thoughts on the importance of remembering those killed in the Srebrenica Genocide. Agic was one of three Bosnian-American panelists at the Srebrenica Genocide Symposium that took place at the Kentucky Museum on Wednesday, July 11. Photo by Nicole Ziege/HERALD.

In this issue
- WKU alumna found strangled to death in her Owensboro home
- Vice provost Richard Miller reflects on his career of 43 years
- Panelists at symposium discuss legacy of Srebrenica Genocide
1. WKU alumna found strangled to death in her Owensboro home

Erica Owen, a 25-year-old WKU alumna from Owensboro, was allegedly strangled and pronounced dead at the scene when the police arrived at her home on July 3. The Daviess County coroner told WFIE that Owen died by asphyxia and strangulation.

2. Vice provost Richard Miller reflects on his career of 43 years

Richard Miller, 70, stepped down as WKU’s vice provost for policies and personnel on June 30, 2018. Miller worked at WKU for 12 years and will retire in December. He worked 43 total years in university administration. Before that, he was drafted into the San Francisco Giants minor league baseball team.

3. Panelists discuss legacy of Srebrenica Genocide at symposium

WKU faculty members and Bosnian-Americans discussed the future of Bosnia after the Srebrenica Genocide and the Bosnian War during Wednesday’s Srebrenica Genocide Symposium at the Kentucky Museum. This year marks the 23rd anniversary of the Srebrenica Genocide.

4. WKU alumna takes home 'Miss Kentucky' title

On Saturday, June 30, Katie Bouchard, 22, a recent WKU graduate from Owensboro, became Miss Kentucky 2018 and the pageant’s 83rd winner after her third time competing for the title. After winning Miss Kentucky, Bouchard plans to compete at the Miss America pageant this September.

5. Hennssy Auriault joins Hilltopper basketball staff

WKU basketball has added Hennssy Auriault to the staff as an assistant coach, head coach Rick Stansbury announced Tuesday. Auriault is a former Division I player himself, as the new Hilltopper assistant played at Wisconsin from 1995-99. He played in the NCAA Tournament twice, and was named to the Big Ten All-Academic Team twice.