Fraternity member brings firearm to float site

1

WKU Police received reports on Thursday night of a student taking out a firearm at the Delta Tau Delta and Chi Omega float site during Homecoming preparations. According to the reports, a student made Chi Omega sorority members nervous while they were working on their float for the parade by making comments concerning firearms. He then took out a firearm and laid it on a work table at the float location, according to the police report.

Actress inducted into Hall of Distinguished Alumni

2

When Becky Ann Baker graduated from WKU in 1975, she had high hopes of a successful career in show business. Now, 43 years later, Baker has been inducted into WKU's Hall of Distinguished Alumni for just that. Baker was one of three inducted along with Nettie Bayless Courts Depp and Richard C. Rink.

"So many graduates have gone on to have terrific careers in a variety of areas in the entertainment industry," Baker said. "So, my induction really points to how strong WKU's arts programs are working."

Hilltopper lineman Demetrius Cain cited for marijuana possession

3

Redshirt sophomore defensive lineman Demetrius Cain was cited for marijuana possession Sunday night, according to the WKU Police Department crime logs. The Princeton native was given the citation at the Kentucky Street Apartments shortly after 9 p.m. Sunday, according to the log.

"We are aware of the incident, and Dee Cain is currently suspended," the program told the Herald Monday. "Additional disciplinary measures have been handled internally."

Will voters 'make Warren County wet'? November ballot asks

4

After checking boxes next to their preferred candidates' names, Warren County voters will choose next Tuesday whether or not legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages across the county.

A 1960 election legalized alcohol sales in the city of Bowling Green, but the rest of the county remains dry after a 1957 vote made it so, according to Bowling Green Daily News archives.

Construction for 'first-year village' slated to begin shortly, parking transfer initiated

5

The Board of Regents reviewed a plan for a new first-year village for students that will eventually take the place of the current Bemis Lawrence and Barnes-Campbell residence halls in an effort to increase retention as part of WKU's strategic plan.
