The rain didn’t stop students from filling up the wet seats of the Colonnade Tuesday, as National Pan-Hellenic Council Greek organizations gathered to participate in a Yard Show.

As the DJ continued to spin, sororities and fraternities practiced softly in their huddles.

The organizations gathered at 7 p.m. to showcase what each specific organization stands for and what services they offer, giving histories of their respective organizations in between their performances.

The Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority Epilation Zeta chapter aimed up the crowd by asking everyone how they felt before the first performance. Burton said. "But when the rain lightened up, and the AKAs (Alpha Kappa Alpha) didn't do their step show. I thought the organizations might not do their step show."

"We get a lot of students complaining about getting called a fag on the sidewalk and stuff like that and that really fosters a climate in which they don't feel safe," Salman said. "That leads to a lot of them transferring." Students not only have the choice of whether or not to report harassment, but also a choice in how to report it. Students have three options regarding what action to take following such an incident, WKU Police Department Captain Dominic Ossello said. "Whether it's a male, female, transgender — none of that plays into how comfortable and safe they want to feel."

"I imagine, as we progress, that would be something we would make more of a formal process," she said.

The housing application doesn't allow for students to indicate their gender identity, but if a student contacts the accommodation's needs, Tolbert said. The Student Identity Outreach on campus serves as a place for LGBT students to discuss campus issues and find resources. It also acts as a place for students to find a community. "We don't run with it unless the victim or complainant wants us to," Ossello said. "It really boils down to their comfort level and what they want to see happen." WKU was recently named as one of the bravest universities for LGBT students in the south by advocate.com. WKU and seven other universities were identified by the magazine for having a strong group of LGBT adults that stood up against the politics of bigotry and pushed forward, driving grassroots progress," according to the article. The article recognized an organization of students back in 2010 as one of the reasons WKU made the list. The group of 200 gathered during a visit by Sen. Mitch McConnell to work toward providing same-sex domestic partner benefits for WKU employees. Students were also named by the article as a driving force behind the campus completing the aforementioned Campus Pride index in June. In order for LGBT students to feel more comfortable and safe on campus, those issues need to be taken seriously, Salman said. "I think that in order for it to stop, people need to realize that it's a priority," she said. "In time, that will foster a more inclusive climate on campus. We have been making strides recently."

The Student Government Association’s first meeting of the semester begins in new student center, the Cultural Enhancement and Student Services building.

On Tuesday, several new SGA members were approved for the organization’s various committees, including Student Affairs, Public Relations and Campus Improvement.

To teach new SGA members how to appropriately debate a topic and identify the proper structure of a piece of legislation, Dr. Todd Ransdell, speaker of the senate, authored a fake resolution with errors, such as a nonexistent senator, to illustrate the importance of presentation to students for the winter of 1864.

The Administrative Budget director, Larry Richey, said the elimination of some positions from the budget, reported by President Tim Caboni at the last meeting.

Pocket Parker was shot off campus and around WKU’s campus.

The WKU Police Department will confiscate any weapon that isn’t authorized.

Fast fashion stores get high fashion prices

BY KAEL HOLLOWAY

Starting on Sept. 14, a mere 10 days after you read this little slice, the world of fast fashion stores will be shaken up again by the high fashion world.

This fall, three of fashion's biggest names are teaming up to bring their styles, normally reserved for those in the upper echelon of wealth and status, to the price ranges of middle America.

Joseph Altuzarra is loading the pack with his exclusive line for Target hitting the racks on Sept. 14, the aforementioned date of high fashion revolution.

Prices will start at roughly $17.99 and go as high as $89.99 and feature an array of dresses, tops and businesses-ready fl avors, along with a fabulous patent leather belt that's featured on the majority of the models for the collection.

Treading for the smallest of fashion divas, Karl Lagerfeld is getting into this fall fashion designer trend by partnering with Barbie to release a doll built and dressed in his likeness. Though not clothed one can wear on their back, he's still lending his signature style to the original fashion queen. This doll will hit toy stores and waiting lists everywhere on its own before hitting the racks on Sept. 14, the aforementioned date of high fashion revolution.

Prices will start at roughly $17.99 and go as high as $89.99 and feature an array of dresses, tops and business-ready fl avors, along with a fabulous patent leather belt that's featured on the majority of the models for the collection.

Not many details have been released about the much-anticipated collection. A picture of a key chain and another of a mysterious object embellished with Louis Vuitton-inspired AWs across its black fabric are all that Wang has teased since his original announcement date of high fashion revolution.

The pièce de résistance for many fashion fi ends is the fi nal line round-up, which arrives on Thanksgiving Day with these short thoughts:

• Happiness is fi nding a parking space.
• Happiness is fi nding a hand-hel bowling pin.
• Happiness is fi nding a new street you haven't walked down before.
• Happiness is fi nding a four or fi ve year journey of being a Hilltopper.
• Happiness is having a roommates with friends.
• Happiness is having a roommates with a record-breaking football team.

This column is a revival of Tod Porter's happiness column from the College Heights Herald circa 1965. "Pains and frustrations are hereby unknown," said Porter in his very first column.

So what is happiness anyway?

• Happiness is having a hand-held electric fan while walking to class in 90 degree heat.
• Happiness is fi nding a hand-held electric fan at the store for $2.
• Happiness is, as Porter noted half a century ago, fi nding a parking space anytime.

Find a daily reason to be happy. If this seems to be a monumental task, throw caution to the wind and look to this weekly column for an optimistic outlook.

We asked 20 random residents from each and every residence hall on campus to rate their hall from 1 to 10. Ten meant the dorm and loved spending a lot of their time there and 1 meant the opposite. The goal was to compare the cost of each hall to the satisfaction level of its residents. WKU's halls are broken into five separate price brackets. But what are the most expensive dorms the most loved? We found that the most expensive hall on campus is one of the two of middle America.

World maps line every wall of professor Scott Dobler's office. The large canvas in his office, a world map, is his pride and joy. Dobler is a geography professor at Western Kentucky University (WKU). He describes his office as a reflection of his passion for geography.

Dobler's interest in geography began at a young age. He grew up in Kentucky and West Virginia and scored poorly on geography tests as a child. He was fascinated by maps and globes and decided to pursue a career in geography. He attended Morehead State University and majored in geography with a minor in biology. Dobler took his degree to Lexington, where he worked as a meteorologist at local news stations. He describes this time as a wonderful experience, where he was able to express himself as a meteorologist.

While in the military, Dobler decided he wanted to become a geologist. He went on to study at Moorehead State University and majored in geography, with a minor in biology. Dobler took his degree to Lexington, where he continued to work as a meteorologist at local news stations. He describes this time as a wonderful experience, where he was able to express himself as a meteorologist.

Dobler's interest in geography continues to this day. He teaches geography courses at WKU and is actively involved in geography activities. Teachers could utilize his teaching passion for geography in their classrooms.

Dobler is a member of the National Geographic Society and is a founding member of the Kentucky Association of Geographers. He is also a member of the Kentucky Historical Society and the Kentucky Association of Geographers.

Dobler is committed to teaching his students about the importance of geography. He believes that geography is essential for understanding the world around us. He encourages his students to explore the world and to learn about the diverse cultures and landscapes that exist.

Dobler is also committed to the study of climate change. He is a member of the Kentucky Climate Change Council and is involved in research on climate change impacts in Kentucky.

Dobler is passionate about his teaching and is dedicated to enhancing students' learning experiences. He is committed to providing his students with a high-quality education and is dedicated to helping them achieve their full potential.

Dobler is a shining example of a geography professor who is passionate about his teaching and is dedicated to helping his students achieve their full potential.

Students, administrators take ice bucket challenge

BY STEPHANIE JESSIE
LIFE@WKUHERALD.COM

It’s the challenge that’s send- ing ripples across the nation. Thousands have participated and millions of dollars have been donated. But what is the ice bucket challenge? The rules are simple: once you accept the challenge, you have 24 hours to either pour a bucket of ice water on your head and donate $10, or bypass the ice bucket and donate $10 to the ALS Association.

With the challenge’s rise, many have been tasking to nominate others to take the challenge and make a difference. The ALS Association (ALSA), a nonprofit organization established in 1985, is dedicated to fighting Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis—ALS for a cure. ALS, more commonly known as Lou Gehrig’s disease, affects the nerve and brain cells of its victims, causing them to slowly give up control of their muscles. Eventually, part of East Africa will split from Africa. “East Africa is where the ear- liest hominins branched off,” Keeling said. “They are then tasked to nomi- nate others to take the challenge and make a difference.”

The Blue Nile is a major branch of the Nile River. It carries large amounts of water and feeds into the Red Sea. The Blue Nile is also a major source of irrigation in the area. The construction in the area is meant to improve the economy of the region by increasing agricultural productivity.

Another challenge she faces is writing. “I am in the process of expanding research opportu- nities globally,” Keeling said. “The grant supports that.”

The grant money will be spent in July of 2014 and will go un- til 2015, so it attracts a lot of people in- terested in the science, not just the American Chemical Society. The grant is very important for what I am doing. The grant is very competitive and is known nationally as a prestigious grant. It is an amazing opportunity to use to pay for the expensive equipment and supplies we need. The grant will also be used to pay for the expensive technology used to do the re- search. That technology and conference expenses will also be paid for by the grant.

For the Ph.D Delta Thetta fraternity, raising money for ALS research is not a new venture. The fraternity has been supporting the organization for 26 years, as part of their philanthropy.

The grant will also be used to pay for the expensive technology used to do the research. That technology and conference expenses will also be paid for by the grant.

As of Tuesday, Sept. 2, ALSA had received more than $106 mil- lion in donations in this year’s ice bucket challenge. Celebrity pheroes like John Legend, Tom Cruise, Katy Perry and former President George W. Bush, Leona- rdo DiCaprio and David Spade are among the notable celebrities who have taken the challenge. Local celebrities who have taken the challenge include President Gary Ransdell, Cheryl Stevens, director of the School of Fine Arts and Engineering; Howard Bailey, dean of the School of Computing, and Jeff Katz, dean of Gordon Ford College of Business. Ransdell was also supposed to get involved in the challenge. Ransdell was also supposed to get involved in the challenge.

As of Tuesday, Sept. 2, ALSA had received more than $106 mil- lion in donations in this year’s ice bucket challenge. Celebrity pheroes like John Legend, Tom Cruise, Katy Perry and former President George W. Bush, Leona- rdo DiCaprio and David Spade are among the notable celebrities who have taken the challenge. Local celebrities who have taken the challenge include President Gary Ransdell, Cheryl Stevens, director of the School of Fine Arts and Engineering; Howard Bailey, dean of the School of Computing, and Jeff Katz, dean of Gordon Ford College of Business.

The grant went into effect on July 6, 2014, so it attracts a lot of people interested in the science, not just the American Chemical Society. The grant is very important for what I am doing. The grant is very competitive and is known nationally as a prestigious grant. It is an amazing opportunity to use to pay for the expensive equipment and supplies we need. The grant will also be used to pay for the expensive technology used to do the research. That technology and conference expenses will also be paid for by the grant.

Lady Tops prepared for SEC challenge

The WKU Lady Topper soccer team will host the Tennessee Volunteers at 6 p.m. at the WKU Soccer Complex in a rematch of last year's 0-1 double overtime tie. The Lady Toppers managed a 90th minute equalizer against the Lady Vols despite a 36-10 shot attempt deficit. WKU managed to total a split of 11 shots on goal in the game, with 10 of those coming in the final 10 minutes. Tennessee head coach Chris Stone said the team is approaching its match with Tennessee the same way they prepare for every other contest. “It’s just like any other game,” Stone said. “We treat each game as its own separate entity. We’re not looking at any numbers, any recent scoring reports on Tennessee or Kentucky, we are still trying to figure our way into just a little bit as a team.” The Lady Volunteers are 1-2 on the season and coming off a 4-1 loss to Illinois this past weekend. Tennessee’s roster is loaded with experienced forwards. Earlier this week, Southern Conference opponents outscored the Fighting Illini 17-14 in their opening match. Never far from the national radar, they will be a good oppo- nent for the Lady Tops. The Lady Toppers are planning to operate on offense more smoothly in that win than in their smooth victory over the Fighting Illini last season. Wes Lunt
Redshirt sophomore quarterback Wes Lunt led Illinois on three touchdown drives in the fourth quarter to defeat Youngstown State. The Oklahoma State transfer was 24-of-38 for 285 yards and four touchdowns — the most for any Illini quarterback making their debut.

Brandon Doughty
Brandon Doughty was named Conference USA Offensive Player of the Week after breaking three school records for completions (46), passing yards (569) and touchdowns (6) in the season-opening win over Bowling Green State. Doughty leads the NCAA in passes completed, passing yards and passing touchdowns.

WHAT'S AT STAKE?
The Hilltoppers look to open their season 2-0 for the first time since 2003 and win their road opener for the first time since 2000. WKU is also looking for its sixth consecutive win, dating back to last season, and will be searching for their fifth consecutive victory over a non-conference opponent.

WKU volleyball sweeps Belmont in season opener

BY JONATHAN PHILLIPS
SPORTSW@WKUHERALD.COM

The WKU volleyball team stands at 2-2 on the season after a dominant home-opening win against Belmont (1-3) on Tuesday night.

The Lady Toppers dealt out a straight-set sweep, sliding past the Bruins by scores of 25-23, 25-16 and 25-20. Despite only trailing for one rally prior to heading into the third set, WKU found itself down early, but managed to fight back for the victory.

"Today was no different than what we saw over the weekend," Head Coach Travis Hudson said. "It's like I said before the season started, we are going to have stretches where we look really good and we look really bad. We did both of those things tonight."

Freshman middle hitter Holden Langenkap took the ball for a point as Belmont's Arianna Person (10) and Scarlet Gable (9) try to block during WKU's 3-0 sweep over Belmont on Tuesday in Diddle Arena.

Junior middle hitter Noahie Langenkap (13) spikes the ball for a point as Belmont's Arianna Person (10) and Scarlet Gable (9) try to block during WKU's 3-0 sweep over Belmont on Tuesday in Diddle Arena.

"When I started 20 years ago, there was a community that cared about this sport. It's just something I'm really proud of."

The third set proved the most challenging for the Lady Toppers. Belmont struck back with a 3-0 advantage, WKU then claimed seven straight points and took an 11-6 lead into the first timeout.

Yet, Belmont would not surrender. It fought back to within two points of WKU at 22-20 before the Lady Toppers closed out the set.

They were definitely a good team," Freshman setter Jessica Lucas said. Their momentum kept going, so we had to make sure we stayed aggressive to keep our momentum."

Lucas managed six kills, a .286 hitting percentage and 29 of WKU's 38 assists in her first home contest as a Lady Topper. "We are just young," Hudson said. "To be honest with you, I think we were able to execute well on offense in the first game because of the element of surprise. I don't think Georgia knows exactly what we were going to do. Illinois does."

"They're going to try to take away what we do well," Brohm said. "To be honest with you, I think we were able to execute well on defense in the first game because of the element of surprise. I don't think Georgia knows exactly what we were going to do. Illinois does."

"The Hilltoppers' fast-paced offense ran 65 plays and produced 59 points on 497 total yards of offense against BGSU. WKU's primary weapon against the Falcons was the screen pass, which led to three touchdowns from 55, 14 and 18 yards out."

"They're going to try to take away all the quick throws that we completed this last game, we're going to have to find ways to adjust to that," Brohm said.

With their up-tempo game plan established, Brohm said WKU will look to make minor adjustments offensively heading into the Fighting Illini, such as taking shots upfield.

"We had a lead and let them back in it. It's just where we are right now. We will get better as time goes by."

The game marked Hudson's 20th home opener, and he said he loves the transformations the program has taken in that time. "When I started 20 years ago, there were 15 people in the stands and 13 of them were family," Hudson said. "It's just special to come out here and have the band playing the fight song and have the student section and community that care about this sport. It's just something I'm really proud of."
