Kentucky Museum Store closing next semester

BY TREY CRUMBIE

Those wanting to buy a stuffed white squirrel or Big Red hotdog cup rings from the Kentucky Museum Store will need to act fast. The store is closing next semester.

Brent Bjorkman, interim director of the Kentucky Museum, said since he started in 2009, the crew have ingested the plant and under the influence, cut out their own tongue. They thought they were crazy," Martin said. "Keep in mind, that in every plant: it’s not the poison; it’s the dose,” Martin said. Martin said the effects of Datura stramonium can last up to two weeks. "It’s nothing to be messed with," Martin said. Bowling Green senior Laramie Stone is a student worker onWKU’s garden crew. She said she has heard of cases where people have ingested the plant and under the influence, cut out their own tongue. WKU’s garden crew has been working to get rid of the plant.

Josh Twardowski, campus services manager, said since he started in 2009, the crew have seen many effects of the plant. Martin said Datura stramonium affects the nervous system and it can be lethal in large doses.

the difference between having a psychedelic trip and dying, the plant is, very thin." Laramie said the plants that the garden crew for a year and a half and she has seen around three by the Health Services building. Martin said Datura stramonium is in the nightshade family. He said this plant family includes tomatoes, egg- plant and potatoes. "The nightshade family, unless you know what you’re doing, you shouldn’t eat them," Martin said. "The difference between having a psychiatric trip and dying, depending on the plant, is a pittance." Martin said in Datura stramonium, the dosage of the poison varies from plant to plant. Martin said there are many cases every year where people misuse Datura stramonium thinking they will get high, but instead end up in the hospital. Martin said Jimson weed is an or- namental plant and couldn’t be brought to campus accidentally for decorative purposes. He, however, said there is the only poisonous plant on campus. "Many many plants are poisonous on the landscape on campus," he said. "The red beets could kill a student. Plants are sometimes poisonous, this plant isn’t, it is also ornamental." "The thing about the plant that the garden crew has found are around two feet tall. "They can get big," Laramie said. "They can get about six feet tall." Martin said the plant dies when the weather turns cold. However, he said the capsules on the plant can burst open and the seeds will sprawl out, causing the plant to come back when the weather is warm. He said the seeds can spread through wind or people manually planting the seeds. He said the plants are native to North America, but the plant has begun to spread all around the world. "We think it’s been here for a long time," Martin said. "It became more prominent with the help of humans." Laramie said it’s common to see the plant in pastures, but cattle seems to know not to eat the plant. Martin said Datura stramonium is one of many ornamental plants that contain hallucinogenic effects. He said the most dangerous aspect of Datura stramonium is there is no way to regu- late the dosage of poison when ingest- ing the plant. "The difference between having a trip for recreational or a trip to the hos- pital is very, very small," Martin said.
Sex in a Fishbowl forum sparks dialogue about sex

BY RACHEL PHELPS

Men and women had an open, lighthearted dialogue about sex and relationships on Tuesday night, but the talk became heated when the topic of harassment came up.

The room was divided, with men and women sitting on opposite sides of the room facing each other. As students spoke during the discussion, everyone was given a slip of paper to anonymously write down questions for the opposite sex to answer.

During the forum, slips were drawn from a fishbowl and read for students to answer. Questions ranged from "What's your definition of love?" to "Does size really matter?" and anywhere in between.

"There was no hold back, and we are able to talk about things the typical student isn't able to think about," one student said. "It's an open, lighthearted dialogue."

The discussion became more heated at times, especially when the topic of sex was brought up. A lot of people were "skating" to be touched if she was wearing revealing clothing.

"We people learn a little more about the opposite sex and have a good time," another student said.

"If we talk about sex, then we have a lot of things they want to share," Samad said. "They don't share it. We think we come to SGA or once we find out to know about the issue, the committee will really help them."

Church said one of the first issues the committee will tackle is "creating an on-campus pedestrian." "I feel like there was a lot of. Bob Weidner

The challenge, sponsored by Kentucky Organ Donor Affiliates, or KODA, came to WKU's campus to spread the word about organ donation.

"Firstly, I told students that over 123,000 people are on a waiting list to receive a transplant," Jones said. "By participating in this challenge, we can give back."

Wells feels it's his duty to stress the importance of making器官 transplant counters.

The voting precincts at W.R. McNeill Elementary school will be moved elsewhere due to construction.

The two precincts, C10A Big Red and C10A Blue, are located at 2413 Research and Development located at 2413 while others argued that a girl should be allowed to wear what she wants without worry.

"I've yet to meet an American student who doesn't want to meet an international student, and that kind of thing and it can be a real issue," Madison said.

"I feel like there was a lot of confusion about the event and the registration process," Jones said. "If we find out that there's a lot of confusion about the event and the registration process, then we can give them more information."

What you should be drinking this Halloween

BY TANNER COLE

- Smokey Bourbon Potions
  You've heard of bourbon on ice, but how about bourbon on dry ice? Simply add a few ice cube-sized chunks of dry ice to a glass and pour your favorite bourbon on top. The result is a smoking potion. Let the smoke do a little halloween before sipping.

- Candy Corn Gelatin Shots
  These can be as complex to brew as you aren't already familiar with the art of making gelatin shots. For the veterans aren't already familiar with the art of making gelatin shots, you can try a few of our favorites...

  Candy Corn Gelatin Shots
  1. Make a base of sugar, gelatin, and water.
  2. Add artificial flavoring and color.
  3. Mix well and pour into small glass cups.
  4. Place in the freezer to set.

- Black Cat Margaritas
  Sometimes the scare is all in the presentation. Make yourself a batch of dark, blackberry margaritas and serve up with a creepy smile in a dimly lit room. Stroked black-berry with sugar and lime for a half hour, then strain out the juice to use as the base for your delicious, bloody treat.

- Hallowed Gin and Tonic
  If you're planning a black-light party this Halloween, be sure to make gin and tonic. You can use your known fact about tonic water is that it glows bright blue under a black light. Just add gin and suddenly you have ghastly blue lights floating around the dance floor.

- Vampire's Elixir
  Bloody Marys are an obvious choice for any creepy costume pairing. Match the color of your fake blood to the tone of your drink. Or, just splatter it all over your face every time you take a sip. Either way, this classic mix of vodka and tomato juice is a great choice.

- Spooky Scourishes
  If you can get your hands on some black vodka, these are sure to knock anyone off their feet. Black vodka isn't terribly common, but one can simply use food coloring to achieve a similar aesthetic. Mix it up with orange juice and go hard in the pumpkin!

Samurai's vibrant sushi isn't super savory by JOHN GREER

Among a crop of Japa-

flavor calamaris marked an auspicious bite with a mouthfeel. The flavor, however, was non-tasty deep-fried snack and gave the dish a mild goût troublant.

The "Tom and Jerry" roll was similarly simple. Spicy tuna, crab and avocado enveloped a roll filled with white rice and crab. The forma-

Lady ‘tops set to wrap up regular season tomorrow

Following a crucial postseason-clinching 2-0 win over Southern Miss on Sunday, WKU soccer will put a close to its regular season on Friday at North Texas at 6 p.m.

The Lady Toppers will have their hands full against a North Texas squad that currently sits atop the Conference USA rankings at 7-1-1 in league play and 13-4-1 overall on the season. The Mean Green only lost their four games by a combined five goals. Two of those losses were in double overtime.

North Texas fields an explosive offense that ranks second in the conference in points, goals and assists. The North Texas attack is led by junior forward Karla Pineda, who’s tied for the lead in goals and assists in league play on the season.

However, the WKU defense will be prepared for the challenge. They rank fourth in the conference in goals allowed, led by freshman goalie Allison Leone, who has seven shutouts to her name on the season. The defense has given up one goal in the past three games.

Though the Lady Toppers have already clinched a spot in the conference tournament, this match against North Texas is far from meaningless. A win against the best team in the conference, in regards to league record, will move WKU further up the rankings and provide confidence.

Conference tournament play is set to begin on Nov. 5 in Charlotte, North Carolina.

WKU’s offense, ranked fifth in the nation in rushing, forges ahead of season's first 105.4 rushing yards per game, in search of more out of its run game with Allen and sophomore Anthony Side Wales.

Allen, who was limited in recent weeks due to a knee injury, averaged 5.5 yards per carry and 32 carries against ODU. Helton said the plan moving forward is to continue to split the workload between Allen and Wales, despite the success the team has seen when he carried the load on Saturday.

I thought Leon got stronger as the game went on,” Helton said. “In the fourth quarter, that was probably his best pass of the game. I thought he did a good job of getting rid of the ball when he needs to, and he actually started to come on in the fourth quarter.

I think Ace has shown he can be a solid back for us. That’s why we’re still in the game. Transferring is something we were earlier in the season trying to do, but I think it’s a move that will be a little more needed than previously expected.
