WKU Kappa Sigma chapter suspended

BY ANDREW HENDERSON

The Theta-Theta chapter of Kappa Sigma was suspended on Nov. 2 by its international headquarters.

Chapter Pride, director of student activities and organizations, said Kappa Sigma international headquarters in Charlottesville, Virginia, is investigating the chapter.

Pride said the university is unaware of what the chapter’s investigation entails at this time. Pride is still in conversation with international headquarters about how the investigation will conclude. He also said Kappa Sigma has been advised by their international headquarters to not be involved with anything else, such as Homecoming events.

“They are not doing Homecoming activities with Phi Mu and their pair- ing, and that is the Kappa Sigma fraternity’s decision, not the university decision,” Pride said.

Nolan Devine, the Kappa Sigma president, said he had no comment on the subject of the chapter’s suspension. He also declined to comment on how the chapter is currently handling the investigation and the current morale of members.

“I have no comment on the subject,” Devine said. “If you have any further questions you can contact international headquarters … rather than that no comment on the subject.”

Lee Broome, the director of chapter services at Kappa Sigma fraternity, confirmed that the information provided by Pride concerning the ongoing investigation was correct.

However, he was unable to comment on the current status of the investigation, the nature of the investigation or if the chapter will be suspended.

The Herald reached out to Galen Perschbach, Kappa Sigma public relations chairman, but he did not respond before publication time.

Holocaust exhibit ends stay at Kentucky Museum

A collaborative mural exhibit showcasing Nazi Germany and the Holocaust ended this Thursday.

Middle and high school students created the exhibit “Never Again: Nazi Germany and the Holocaust.” The exhibit has been displayed at the Kentucky Museum in the Kentucky Building since Oct. 27.

“Never Again: Nazi Germany and the Holocaust” features 38 murals created by students in the Summer Program for Verbally and Mathematically Precocious Youth at WKU. VAMPY offers a class focusing on Nazi Germany and the Holocaust.

Each year, students in the program collaborate to create a mural. The murals were collected over the years to create the exhibit.

Brent Bjorkman, the director of the Kentucky Museum, said he thought the exhibit was important enough to show more than once.

“The first time we showed it was before the election of Trump,” Bjorkman said.

Matt Bevin elected as governor

Republican Jsaon Hampton is the lieutenant governor-elect. Democrat Alison Grimes was re-elected as Secretary of State, and Democrat Andy Beshear was elected as Attorney General. Republican Allison Ball was elected State Treasurer, Republican Mike Harmon was elected State Auditor and Republican Ryan Quist was elected as the Commissioner of Agriculture.

Those who attended the polls on election day made up an array of young, old, Republican and Democratic voters.

Kaylen Delph, 18, of Bowling Green, said this election was her first time voting and reasoned that if she voted, she would be able to complain later if the election didn’t turn out as she would have hoped.

“It was my first time voting, and I figured if I had a reason to complain later, I at least would be able to do it with good reason because I did have a voice,” she said.

Delph is affiliated with the Republican Party but said she didn’t vote Republican as she considers herself to be more of an independent.

She said she voted for Bevin. “I voted for Conway because he’s more hispanic and Black than Bevin, but I rather have somebody like Conway be- cause Bevin reminds me too much of Trump,” Delph said.

Cole McDowell, Bardstown senior, is a registered Democrat and said he voted for Conway because he believed Conway would do the best job of con-
"This is something the center has wanted to do for a while," Oldenburg said. "All 18 murals together are very impactful. They're large murals, and you step into the Holocaust." Donna Parker, exhibits curator at the Kentucky Museum, said there's more about hosting the exhibit in the spring, she said. "There are images and quotes from literature that leave a lasting impression." The quotes also caught Hayden's attention. "The quotes made me realize the deeper things," Hayden said. "There was one that really jumped out at me and reflective," he said. "I can't imagine what it must have been like for the students to create these pieces."

Kentucky Museum director Brent Bjorkman said. "Visitors have been very engaged with the exhibit. It's a social studies teacher there who also teaches the summer VAMPY class. Bjorkman said the exhibit captured the museum's interest right away. "This is something the center has done through WKU," Bjorkman said. "It showcases the VAMPY program that funded the exhibit, said Bjorkman. The quotes also caught Hayden's attention. "The quotes made me realize the deeper things," Hayden said. "There was one that really jumped out at me and reflective," he said. "I can't imagine what it must have been like for the students to create these pieces."

"I think that a lot of people over the course of history have given their lives for every citizen to have the right to vote, and I think that it's our duty to our fellow citizens and ancestors to exercise that right," he said.

McDowell said voting is a fundamental part of our civic duty and is also rooted in historical importance. "I think that a lot of people over the course of history have given their lives for every citizen to have the right to vote, and I think that it's our duty to our fellow citizens and ancestors to exercise that right," he said. According to the Kentucky Board of Elections, turnout for the Kentucky general election was at 30.08 percent. Joe Durbin, 84, of Bowling Green, Kentucky Museum director Brent Bjorkman said the exhibit captures the museum's interest right away. "This is something the center has done through WKU," Bjorkman said. "It showcases the VAMPY program that funded the exhibit, said Bjorkman. The quotes also caught Hayden's attention. "The quotes made me realize the deeper things," Hayden said. "There was one that really jumped out at me and reflective," he said. "I can't imagine what it must have been like for the students to create these pieces."

He said to improve voter turnout, sending people to another country would make people wake up to the fact that it's their responsibility to vote. No reason for them not to.

"People actually die to vote in a lot of the third-world countries," Durbin said. "I don't know what's the matter; people need to be waking up to the fact that it's their responsibility to vote. No reason for them not to."

"Sometimes you forget about this sort of thing," she said. "This exhibit puts it into perspective. You don't let sorts of things happen." The Center for Gifted Studies presented the exhibit. Sam Oldenburg, coordinator of technology and communications for the center, said he can tell the exhibit is making an impact on students. He believes they now have a better understanding of the Holocaust.

Controversy surrounds ‘Dub the Pub’ competition

The next round of the “Dub the Pub” competition is now taking place, but the 12 names originally available for voting have now been reduced to 11.

The Student Government Association released a new survey of 12 names for students to choose from: The Tipsy Taps, Big Top Brewery, Red Stag, Spirit Masters, Hill-Tappers, Topped Off and Hill-Tappers. However, considering controversy, Spirit Masters has been removed from the naming options.

SGA President Tay Todd Richey said the original 12 names were sent out in response to 90 responses and 11 different names were the first round received.

From these 12 names, the SGA Executive Cabinet narrowed the options down to include those that had received the most suggestions, those that were the most appropriate and those the cabinet liked most.

After the 12 names were compiled, Richey said SGA sent an email to all students on Nov. 4 for the second survey, and the name selected from this survey would become the official name of the pub in Garrett Conference Center.

“However, there has been some controversy and questions over using Spirit Masters as one of the options,” Richey said.

He said this controversy came about for two main reasons: It was perceived as demeaning to the Spirit Masters, the university’s student ambassador group, and demeaning to WKU’s rich history.

“Neither one of those entities should be designated and be tied to something like a bar,” he said. Richey said that after taking the situation into consideration, the Executive Cabinet decided to remove Spirit Masters from consideration.

Sawyer Coffey, the SGA director of public relations, said SGA was contacted by some organization in a negative light.

“I believe that the university and the Spirit Masters are appropriate as well,” Richey said.

Rising tuition costs students' future

Assuming this trend continues — and there is little reason to think it won't — by 2030, student tuition will cover nearly 75 percent of the cost of running a university.

If this continues, this country's great universities will no longer be producing skilled laborers and better informed citizens; they instead will be churning out indentured servants. Since student debt is not erasable, there is no way to escape it.

The argument that people simply not perpetrating sexual assault, even one second that the behavior you are exhibiting is unwanted sexual contact. By simplifying the issue by teaching people that they can be receiving consent each time you engage in any sexual contact. If you doubt for an appropriate time to back off and not engage in that behavior again.

Although consent can prevent you from being a perpetrator, there are other ways to prevent harassment or unwanted sexual contact. By simply educating yourself on what sexual harassment, rape, and sexual assault are, you can be sure to steer clear from participating in any behavior that has the potential to make you the guilty party.

Ultimately, we are in charge of ourselves, we all make our own decisions. The red flag is, we may make the decision not to rape, but have no reason to but to teach ways to avoid it.

Members of Alpha Gamma Delta create pompons from tissue paper for their Homecoming float. An estimated 10,000 pieces of tissue paper will be formed into pompons for the parade floats.

According to Jennifer Tougas, the director of Student Services, the Topper Transit has been operating for more than 20 years, and over the past several weeks, on-campus transportation has been replaced with 12 heavy-duty school buses. "The buses are ADA approved, standard yellow school buses," she said. "They have been taking passengers away and envision it growing into the upgrading of the building site of a Homecoming float."

"Homecoming floats have been a part of WKU history since the 1930s," Charley Hill, the director of Student Activities and Organizations, said. "They are a good way to know how much to order," Hohlbein said. "Then you have to find a float site, which can be difficult because there are only so many people who are going to let 200 college kids have a party going on."

Inside, however, Greek fraternities and the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority sat in colorful tissue paper. The process of designing a Homecoming float lasts longer than the week of assembling it.

Cosby helps Hilltoppers past Lindsey Wilson

BY JOHN REECER

The WKU men’s basketball team defeated Lindsey Wilson College in a game of a home crowd in Diddle Arena on Monday night by a score of 87-71. The Hilltoppers shot an accurate 56 percent from the field in the exhibition game.

Thanks to a strong defense in the first half, WKU’s offense got going in transition as the Hilltoppers scored 16 of their 30 points in the first 15 minutes of the game. WKU outrebounded Lindsey Wilson 29-19 in the first half, and led 43-22 at the half.

In the first half, University of Illinois transfer and redshirt senior Aaron Cosby gave huge spark to the Hilltoppers. Cos-
