LOCAL STUDENT TO INTERN AT LOUISVILLE COURIER-JOURNAL

Bowling Green, Ky. -- This summer promises to be an educational and enjoyable experience for two students at Western Kentucky University who are the only students selected for summer photography internships at the Louisville "Courier-Journal."

Picked from 20 applicants from colleges and universities in Kentucky and southern Indiana, George Wedding, a junior from Ocala, Fla., and Scott Applewhite, a senior from Louisville, will be working during the summer under Al Allen, executive director of photography for the "Courier-Journal."

Both George and Scott have received photography experience at Western as both have been chief photographer for the "College Heights Herald," the award-winning campus newspaper. George has also been photo editor for the paper and the campus yearbook and will be managing editor of the paper during the next school year.

Freelancing for the campus yearbook and the "Courier-Journal" the past three years and serving as a summer intern for the "Palladium--Item," Richmond, Ind., has provided valuable photography experience for George and helped him to win 3rd place and $300 in the nationwide Nikon/Nutshe1l Student Photo Contest this semester. More than 2,000 photographs relating to a "college experience" theme were submitted in this contest.

A graduate of Connersville, Ind. Senior High where he developed his photography interest, George is the son of Mrs. Weda Wedding, 802 Beech St., and George Wedding, Ocala, Fla.

A relative newcomer to the photography field, Scott says that it "was George who got me interested in photography two years ago and encouraged me to pursue my interest."

Scott, who will be graduating from Western this month with a major in mass communications, would like to follow a career as a news photographer because "someone needs to capture the world in pictures. People move too fast to notice as things happen around them."

Scott is the son of Mrs. Juanita Applewhite, 3210 Allison Way, and James R. Applewhite, 1938 Roanoke St., both of Louisville. Scott is married to the former Robin Singlust, 3108 Kipling Way, Louisville.
