Junior mixes independence, family

By LAURA HOWARD

"What's for dinner, mom?" Laura Roberts asked.

"I never miss a home-cooked meal," said the Lewisport junior. "That's one of the main things I love about having her here."

After being on her own at Western for a year, Laura said she was happy when her mother decided to move into a Bowling Green apartment and join her.

Laura's 53-year-old mother, Liz, moved here from Lewisport in 1987 to go back to school and live near her youngest child.

"I guess you just couldn't stand to be away," Laura said to her mother.

Laura, who lives in Central Hall, said living by herself in a dorm gives her a feeling of independence. But Laura said she likes having her mother near because she always has someone to ask for advice, and she "never gets homesick."

"If something goes wrong in one of my classes, she's here," Laura said. "Lots of kids miss that, I think."

The women, both education majors, also work as office secretaries 12 hours a week in the department of teacher education. They are the only mother-daughter student-workers on campus.

Theresa Moore, who works with Liz in the department of education, said she thinks it's good that Liz and Laura enjoy living and working near each other.

Senate hopes raise request not as futile as it seems

By ANGELA GARRETT

When Faculty Senate members approved a recommendation Thursday asking the university for a larger pay raise, they realized President Thomas Meredith had already made up his mind on the matter.

"We just want to get him to change it," said Bart White, head of the faculty status and welfare committee.

Faculty Senate is asking the administration for a five-percent, across-the-board faculty pay hike.

Meredith has proposed a two-percent salary increase for all faculty, while remaining money would be distributed based on faculty members' performance.

"Meredith simply believes excellence should be rewarded," said Dr. Fred Murphy, senate chairman.

But "the faculty simply has not had a significant across-the-board pay increase in several years," said Murphy, a history professor.

"A two percent raise this year would be like two percent in two years," said Dr. Glenn Lohr, noting that some faculty lost last year's two percent raise to an insurance cost increase.

Besides the five-percent hike, the faculty's proposal also requests a three-percent performance reward for some faculty.

Meredith said he was waiting to see a copy of the senate proposal before commenting on it.

But he said "there is no money above five percent. Five percent is what was appropriated by the General Assembly. These are the salary guidelines in the new budget proposal."

Those guidelines will be voted on as part of the university budget by the Board of Regents in April.

Lohr, a health and safety professor, said that he doesn't know where the extra money for the Senate's plan would come from. But faculty salaries need to take priority over other areas, he said.

"They seem to come up with money for some things" such as athletic programs and student activities, Lohr said. "I'm not saying the money is extra. I don't know where they find it."

White, an associate professor of communication and broadcasting, said that Meredith's suggested increases are appreciated by the faculty, but they just aren't enough.

"We haven't complained in past years, but we need to feel we're being treated fairly."

Changing times for '70s fashion

By JILL DUFF and LYNN HOPPE

Dr. Raymond Cravens' uncle cultivated a 20-acre marijuana field during the 1940s—but not for recreational use.

"My uncle grew marijuana as part of the war effort," said Cravens, a government professor who has been at Western for 31 years. "We didn't call it marijuana, but actually, that's what it was."

Marijuana is derived from the hemp plant, Cannabis sativa. The plant fibers were used for making rope and a coarse fabric used by the military.

Because materials for rope from India were banned by the United States during World War II, the plants "were raised as a substitute," Cravens said.

"The federal government was promoting the production of hemp."

But what Cravens' uncle grew the plant for then isn't its primary use now.

Cravens, formerly vice president for Academic Affairs, said drug use became "fashionable" on campus in the early 1970s, after the Vietnam War. "It became the 'in' thing to do."

Although Jessica drank alcohol when she was in high school, she thought other drugs were "horrible."

In the summer of 1986 after her graduation, she began experimenting with harder drugs she avoided in high school.

Now she prefers using marijuana and LSD instead of alcohol to get high. But she shies away from drugs such as cocaine and heroin.

"I have a really addictive personality," said Jessica, who said she's not dependent on marijuana or LSD. "If I tried something like coke, I'd be an addict just like that."

Marijuana relaxes her and helps her be more social, she said. "LSD I do because it opens my perceptions. It helps me see things and know myself better."

A 1986 survey by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) said that about 92 percent of college students had used alcohol in the previous year. About 41 percent had used marijuana and about 17 percent had used cocaine.

Week long Greek events may become things of the past after yesterday's Panhellenic Council meeting.

The council voted seven to one to not participate in events that last longer than three days.

"Panhellenic will send out a letter saying that the sororities that voted yes to the proposal will not be participating in any events that last more than three days," said Natalie Bowldes, the council's advisor.

Talk concerning the proposal intensified last semester as sororities complained when extended fraternity events piled up.

"We are here to go to school," said Becky Funk, Psi Mu president. "It is hard to go to all the events that are from five days to two-weeks long and still go to classes."

The new proposal "applies only to fraternity and sorority individual events, not to the overall group events like Greek Week," Bowldes said. "There may be proposals in the fall that would include Greek Week, but this year it is already planned."

According to council president Minda McCandless, "Panhellenic can't make laws or absolutes. If a chapter voted against the proposal, they can do what they want to."

The only sorority that didn't vote for the new limit was Delta Sigma Theta.

"We voted no because we are a black organization, and we have a Greek Week at the end of March that lasts from a Sunday through Saturday," said Pam Kirkwood, Delta Sigma Theta president.

Alcohol is most-used drug

According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), about 41 percent of the nearly 1,200 college students surveyed in 1986 had used marijuana in the previous 12 month period. About 17 percent had used cocaine, and about 10 percent had used other stimulants.

The NIDA study, conducted by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, questioned students age 19 to 28 on their drug use. Research began in 135 high schools and followed students through college.

Alcohol was the most used legal drug among college students accounting for nearly 92 percent of those surveyed. Nicotine figures were not available.

Nancy Givens, campus coordinator of drug education, said alcohol is a more acceptable drug because it's legal for adults and is often used in social settings.

But Givens said that "people are taking a more critical look at alcohol as a drug of abuse."

Another drug of abuse is tobacco. Dr. Richard Wilson, professor of health and safety, said about 1,000 people die a day from tobacco use. That is compared to 350 people who die a day from alcohol use and to 50 people who die a day from the use of other drugs.

Dr. Tom Nicholson, assistant professor of health and safety, has taught drug abuse classes for the past year and a half.

He has conducted surveys about his students' drug use and attitudes toward drugs. For example, about 60 percent of the students he surveyed had tried marijuana at least once.

Drug awareness and concern are increasing in our society, Nicholson said, and there has been a slight decrease in overall drug use in the 1980s.

According to the NIDA, the percentage of college students using any illicit drug dropped from 56 percent to 45 percent from 1980 to 1984.

Since 1984, percentages of drug use have remained fairly stable, except for a slight increase in the use of LSD and tranquilizers between 1985 and 1986.

Despite the increased knowledge about drugs, Nicholson said "there's a tremendous amount of ignorance and misinformation."

One myth students have coming into his drug abuse class is that tobacco isn't harmful, he said. Another myth is that anyone who uses drugs is an abuser.

A third myth is that drug use will decrease by allocating more money to law enforcement programs, Nicholson said. Education and prevention programs are the ways to combat the drug problem.

But Nicholson and Wilson said the "Just Say No" to drugs campaign has been mostly ineffective.

"Many of the kids who take drugs don't want to just say no," Wilson said.

He said drug use at Western is lower than schools in larger cities on the West Coast and in the Northeast. Western's location in a rural Southern setting influences the level of drug use, he said.

According to 1985 NIDA statistics, the South has the lowest level of illicit drug use in the United States. About 31 percent of people in the region have ever used illicit drugs compared to about 44 percent in the West.

Nicholson said the biggest myth his students believe is that drugs are destroying the country. While he acknowledges that drug abuse is a problem, he said the "American society is not being ripped apart by drugs."

Candy's sweeter from Valentine

By TANYA BRICKING

It's Valentine's Day, and everyone seems to be wanting a gift whether they have a sweetheart or not.

Shelley Payne, an Owensboro freshman, wants some roses. She also wants a boyfriend, but said she just might have to settle for candy from her parents.

But that's better than nothing, and "nothing" is what freshman Chris Adams from Scottsburg, Ind., said he usually gets.

"The best thing I could get would be a nice romantic evening or a special gift from a close friend," Adams said.

Melinda Lyons, a Tompkinsville sophomore, already got what she wanted before Christmas. She has an engagement ring. Now she's just hoping to see her boyfriend who lives in Illinois.

"I don't care what I get for Valentine's Day," Lyons said. "I just want to see him."

Nashville freshman Jennifer Ashmore wants "a dozen roses" from her boyfriend of four months who lives in Nashville. But her honey might have to pay steep prices to send her sweet-smelling blossoms.

"The rose is your number-one seller," said Joan Manley, a designer at Royal Barn Florist — where a dozen roses go for $50. "It doesn't seem to matter how much they cost. People still buy them."

"It seems like everyone is wanting roses," said Susan Hazlewood, a designer at Mr. McGregor's Garden Florist. There, roses can come with "little balloons, teddy bears and hearts that say 'I love you,'" she said.

There may be hope for students who rush to their mailboxes today praying for a card or package. Junior Melissa Humphrey, a resident assistant from Owensboro, said, "The mail really picks up around the holidays."

Humphrey said last year there were a lot of cards, flowers, balloons and packages from home on Valentine's Day.

Bob Ramsey, owner of Container World, said balloons are popular this year. Some of the biggest sellers are the "100 Kisses Bouquet," which comes with a base filled with 96 chocolate kisses, a stuffed bear holding one and three kiss balloons. Another is the "Oreo Cookie Bouquet," which comes with cookies instead of chocolate kisses.

Nick Wilkins, owner of The Balloon A-Gram Co. on Chestnut Street, said they offer six different balloon packages and deliver them in costume, "but we can't guarantee a particular costume for Valentine's Day."

Another traditional gift, for those lucky enough to get something, is candy. And Laura Brooks, a salesperson and candy maker at the Peanut Shack in Greenwood Mall said, "They're buying everything."

People are also buying lots of cookies. "We have the cookie cakes, and we're selling about a million of them," said Andrea Strunk, a salesperson at The Cookie Store in the mall.

Coach House Gifts, also in the mall, is stocked with boxes of chocolates, but hasn't "sold very much candy at all," said salesperson Caroline Wells. "We've sold mostly stuffed animals."

But people like Henderson senior Karla West might be a little harder to shop for. "I'd like a thoughtful gift — something different — something besides flowers and candy."

Change of guard didn't deter recruits

You had to wonder Here Western was, less than three weeks from national collegiate football signing date, without a coach

Without a coach who, in his short tenure on the Hill, managed to draw big-time talent to a smaltyme program.

Without a coach who had detected skillfull players such as Joe Arnold, Jeff Cesarone and Keith Paskett that larger schools had failed to recognize.

Without a coach who had been selected by Sports Illustrated three autumns before as one of the nation's top five recruiters at any level of college football.

So when Dave Roberts announced he was leaving for Northeast Louisiana on Jan. 20, Hilltopper fans had to wonder what kind of day Western's football program could hope to enjoy on Feb. 8.

Would players who were considering Western be detoured by the upheaval at the top here and decide to accept offers from a more tranquil Murray State or Eastern?

That may have occurred in some cases, but apparently not as many as was probably feared.

Western signed 16 recruits to national letters of intent last Wednesday, including one of Florida's top three running backs Plus, Western was able to fill a couple of its more gaping holes.

Assistant coaches such as Mike Cassity, who was snubbed for the head spot by the search committee, deserve praise for the job they did in trying to preserve continuity of talent — a difficult task considering that it included persuading recruits to come to a program whose future was so undefined.

From now on, the burden of dragging players to Bowling Green belongs to Jack Harbaugh, the new coach. Whether he can do so with the success of Roberts remains to be seen.

But for 19 important days — the period between Roberts' resignation and the signing date — that responsibility fell to not one person. And Western came out OK.

It surely put some minds at ease.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Backs Giovanni's

I am writing this letter in support of the new Italian restaurant called "Giovanni's" which you decided to criticize (Feb. 2) for its lack of authenticity. First of all, I should say that I have no monetary investment in the restaurant and am therefore writing this letter, because I would like to see an Italian restaurant finally succeed in Bowling Green.

While it's true that Giovanni's food is not authentically Italian, I really don't think you would like authentic Italian food. I know my memories of Italian food from visiting Italy in 1983 are not very grand. Furthermore, how can you tell if the quality of the Italian food is good when you ate steak and chicken? I suggest you try a pasta dish such as lasagna or ravioli, and then you might be a better judge of the Italian food's quality.

Also, who suggested to you that the owner of an Italian restaurant must be Italian. Are Mexican restaurant owners required to be Mexican? Surely you are not this narrow-minded after being brought up in the United States.

I have eaten at Giovanni's approximately a half-dozen times and had a good meal each time. I also took a friend with me, who had lived in Italy for three years, on one of these occasions. She had no complaints. In fact, she was very complimentary on the food's quality.

In conclusion, I suggest that if you want steak and chicken, then maybe go to Ponderosa, Western Sizzlin, Bonanza or Kentucky Fried Chicken. But if you want Italian food with the benefits of American quality products then try Giovanni's for yourself.

It's good that Mr. Woehler's article was complimentary because it's definitely not chock-full of facts. Until he can get his facts straight, I think Eric Woehler should stick it in his ear.

WDNS supported

When I read the "Diversions" section in Thursday's (Feb. 2) Herald, I was slightly amused until I read what Mr. Woehler had to say about WDNS. I'd like to know where he gets his information.

As far as I know, most of the students here (the ones I know, at least) listen to either Y-107 (Nashville) or WDNS. I know very few students who listen to the campus radio station. I'm not saying that WWHR is not a good station; it's not too bad, but it's not quite as popular as Mr. Woehler may think it is. Although I listen to WDNS, I would have to say Y-107 is more popular, but WDNS is certainly not out.

The comment that WDNS is a "headbanger's haven" isn't exactly true, either. I hardly think that one can thrash to "Rough Night in Jericho" by Dream So Real or "You Got It" by Roy Orbison. It's true that the station plays its fair share of heavy metal, but they play what the listeners call in and at the thought of their mothers being at school with them," she said. "They have an extremely close relationship. It's wonderful."

Laura and Liz said they enjoy their campus jobs because they give them valuable work experience and the opportunity to meet people.

"Both are very valued employees," said Dr. Curtis Englebright, head of the department of education. He also said he admires Liz for going back to school.

"She changed her life from something that was routine to something that will help her grow intellectually," he said. "She is a very conscientious student."

Although Liz said she has to work extra hard to carry her full class load, college life is not something that is completely alien to her.

In the early 1950s, she studied at Ursuline College in Louisville to become a teacher. Her marriage postponed further college education.

Although it's been difficult starting over, Liz said she decided to get her degree because she has always wanted to teach.

"The other students treat me really nice and sometimes ask me for advice," she said, "but it is hard to start fresh after being away for so long."

Liz was a substitute teacher in Hancock County for almost 20 years. During that time, she raised six children, owned a children's clothing store and worked in real estate.

Now, she wants to work in special education.

"You have to have a lot of patience," she said, "much more than you would have with the regular kids, but I like working with them. I think I can do it." "If there is one thing Mom has, it's patience," Laura said. "Raising six kids, you'd have to have a lot."

Laura has also gained experience by working in the principal's office at Hayesville Elementary School in Hancock County for three summers.

Laura and Liz both said they hope to get jobs teaching in Hancock County after they graduate, but would be willing to work in Indiana or a nearby county.

"We don't want to have to travel too far away to get jobs," Liz said. "I'd really love to get one at home, where I've already worked."

Laura said she plans to teach until she is 45 or 50, and after that she would like to travel. Liz said she hopes to teach for about 15 years, or "until they make me retire."

rial engineering and technology, said the requested increases are vital if Western wants to compete with other schools for faculty members.

"We have to keep up with salaries offered at other institutions."

Russell said the proposed two percent increase "causes most of the faculty to fall behind competitive rates at other universities."

Meredith's plan would give much of the faculty a five-percent pay increase as the Senate suggested, Russell admitted. But he said that figure should be assured and performance pay should be considered separately.

"We think he should give us five percent. Then, if he's really serious about merit pay, he should find the extra funds."

But White said a better system of evaluation needs to be adopted before performance awards are distributed.

"We would rather have the merit raise next year after we define merit more."

He said each department uses different standards to judge merit. And some departments, White said, have quotas that inhibit, instead of encourage, performance.

Smoking pot 'is just not worth it'

sociology. Kim James, a Bowling Green graduate student, is researching people who have tried LSD. The survey includes questions about frequency of use, bad trips associated with the drug and the setting in which the drug was used.

She sent out about 800 questionnaires last semester and had received about 70 responses as of last month.

A question in the 10-page survey asks respondents to list their five favorite drugs, including alcohol but excluding nicotine and caffeine. About 27 percent mentioned marijuana, about 26 percent named alcohol, about 19 percent listed LSD and about 13 percent included cocaine.

Kevin tried marijuana when he was in high school because "other people were doing it, and it looked like fun." He started using cocaine when he joined the Navy after graduating from high school. And he "drinks alcohol at parties."

But Kevin said his "drug of choice" is cocaine. It's "just so fun to use," he said. "I like pleasure a lot, so I do it."

Kevin said he thinks there are benefits in using drugs — including therapy and euphoria — and that he'll probably continue his drug use after college.

Brad, who quit school a couple of years ago because of marijuana use, said he "doesn't care to fool with" drugs. The side effects and cost of the drug forced him out of school.

The going rate for marijuana is $20 for three grams (dime bag), cocaine is $100 a gram, and LSD is $5 a unit or hit, according to Bruce Wilkerson, drug enforcement officer at the Bowling Green Police.

Brad doesn't smoke marijuana and drinks only occasionally now because his father is an alcoholic.

"I can tell that it messes you up," said Brad, who has returned to finish his bachelor's degree. "It's just not worth it. Instead of smoking pot, I work out now."

As a freshman in 1983, Brad hung around older students who "messed with pot" to make friends. "At one time I had a quarter pound of marijuana in my room," he said. "I was self-experimenting with it."

Brad spent about $10 a week on pot, "and it slowly caught up with me."

"My memory was screwing up. I was less social," he said. "I worked as a service station attendant and couldn't tell people directions."

Leslie, who has been using drugs about once a week since she was 15, said marijuana is her "favorite."

She has experimented with cocaine and LSD, but chooses to stay away from them. She gets most of her marijuana from friends at parties. "I've only bought pot maybe two times in my life," she said. "It's always around."

Leslie said she doesn't consider drugs to be morally wrong.

"Drugs help you perceive reality in a different light than you normally do," she said. "I like to explore. It helps you explore avenues of life."

Leslie, who doesn't drink alcohol or smoke cigarettes, said she doesn't depend on marijuana to get through the day.

"I feel good about myself. I do it just for something different," she said. "Right now, I could live without pot and be completely happy."

Pressure defense, Green kill Eagles

By DOUG TATUM

Western used a tried-and-true recipe to beat Morehead State 85-64 last night in Diddle Arena.

The ingredients for Western's eighth straight win, one part pressure defense and one part Tandra Green.

The Lady Toppers (16-7) went to their "mad dog" full court press with 16 minutes left in the game. The press forced several Lady Eagle turnovers and allowed Western to go on a 12-2 run and increase its lead to 55-35.

"In the second half we tried to set the tone defensively," Coach Paul Sanderford said. "The mad dog hurt them."

"I was disappointed with our handling of their pressure defense," Morehead coach Loretta Marlow said. "I felt it took us out of our offense."

Western's offense was in sync as Green scored a game-high 27 points on 12 of 21 shooting. It was the fourth straight game that the 6-0 junior scored more than 20 points. Green also grabbed a game-high 13 rebounds and blocked four shots.

"She's a great player who always seems to play well against us," said Marlow, who's team dropped to 15-7. "She's a great leaper, a good defender... she does it all. I can't say enough about her."

Green got her third foul in the first half, but didn't get her fourth until about the seven-minute mark in the game.

"She was composed out there and trying to manage herself on the court," Sanderford said. "She did a very good job of not showing emotion."

"I try to keep my cool," Green said. "They (opponents) want me to lose my temper."

While Green was staying cool, her teammates were heating up. In the second half the Lady Toppers hit 55 percent. Senior Susie Stariks hit four of nine for 18 points and freshman Kim Pehlke scored 10 points, eight in the second half.

"I just wanted to keep the

Charlotte uses 18-2 spurt to dump Toppers 70-61

By ANDY DENNIS

Western fell to preseason favorite North Carolina-Charlotte 70-61 last night, leaving little doubt that the Toppers' role in the conference race will be that of spoiler.

"We're deciding the top of the league in a lot of ways," Coach Murray Arnold said after his team settled in seventh place with a 3-7 record. "We'd like to be a factor, if not a force in the league

the rest of the way."

To be a factor or a force, Western would have to upset Old Dominion, South Alabama and/or UNCC at home.

Judging by last night's performance, beating Charlotte may be tough.

The 49ers used an 18-2 spurt to bury the Toppers early in the second half, busting from a 34-25 halftime lead to move into a 45-27 advantage.

Frank Persley, a native of Scott County, scored 20 points to lead the 49ers, who improved to 13-10, 6-4 in the Sun Belt.

Arnold employed a triangle-and-two defense that used three players as a zone defense while the other two played man-to-man.

The defense worked against high scoring senior guard Byron Dinkins and freshman guard sensation Henry Williams.

Williams, who averaged 17 points coming into the game, was held to two points in the first half. He finished with 10 and Dinkins managed just 11.

It was Persley who exploited the plan late in the first half when he began hitting jumpshots from the wings.

And then Jeff West buried two three-pointers just before halftime to propel the 49ers to their nine-point lead at the intermission.

After Persley scored on an offensive rebound to open the second half, Williams hit a long three-pointer and the 49ers never let up. When the 18-2 run ended, Charlotte was comfortably in command.

Arnold said Western played good defense in the game. "I think our defense gave us a chance to

Harbaugh might lose 2 coaches

Herald staff report

Two assistant football coaches have been offered jobs at Northeast Louisiana University.

One of the spots was already open, Roberts said last night, and the other position opened up because a coach is moving to an administration position at Northeast Louisiana.

"I've been offered a position and will tell (Western's) coach (Jack) Harbaugh my decision tomorrow," Cassidy said yesterday.

Holland also said he will decide soon out of fairness to Harbaugh.

"Right now I am a football coach at Western Kentucky University," Holland said. "But it's only right to tell the coach my decision as soon as possible."

Harbaugh was not available for comment last night.

Roberts was in Bowling Green last night visiting his family. "I have been down there recruiting," he said. "I have been on the go and been getting home every two weeks."

Cassidy and Holland traveled to Northeast Louisiana's campus in Monroe, La., last weekend to visit.

"I was very much impressed with the program and the facilities," Cassidy said.

"They never applied," Roberts said. "I asked them if they wanted the jobs down here."

Roberts made the offer to them last week.

"I hope they accept my offer," he said. "I have been with Coach Cassidy for the last five years, and I hope Coach Holland comes too."

Runner wins 800 meter to make championships

By KATIE WARD

While most students were celebrating during the holidays, Victor Ngubeni was doing his hardest training.

It paid off.

On Saturday he qualified for the Division I NCAA Track and Field Championships in Indianapolis on March 12.

"Once you've been there you want to go back and correct the mistakes you made before,"

TRACK

Ngubeni said. "(You) look forward to an equal performance and hopefully a better one."

Ngubeni, a senior from South Africa, has been to the NCAA Championships twice. He qualified for the 1000-meter, an event the NCAA has replaced with the 800 meter. He placed tempo up to utilize our bench strength," sophomore Kelly Smith said. "We wanted to run all 90 feet.

"Defensive pressure was our way of getting the tempo up. It was a key to the game."

Western's defense was sparked by Green's blocks and two steals and senior Brigette Combs' four steals.

"I like to try to block shots to get the team fired up," Green said.

In the first half the Lady Toppers jumped out to a 22-6 lead mainly on the play of Starks, who scored nine of the 22 points.

But the Lady Eagles fought back to narrow the score to 34-24 at the half.

"We had five turnovers in the last four minutes," Sanderford said.

Even though Morehead lost by 21, Sanderford said score didn't indicate the Lady Eagles' talent.

Rob McCracken/Herald

Sophomore forward Mary Taylor grabs for the ball during Thursday's 92-64 win over South Alabama. The win raised the Lady Toppers record to 5-1 in the Sun Belt, guaranteeing them at least a tie for first.

"Morehead State is a very good basketball team," he said. "They played hard."

Last Thursday the Lady Toppers guaranteed themselves at least a tie for the Sun Belt crown when they shocked league-leading South Alabama 92-64. Starks and Green paced Western with 25 points apiece.

South Alabama (4-1) and Old Dominion (3-1) still have a chance to tie Western for first. South Alabama has one conference game left and Old Dominion has two Sun Belt games left.

Western's next game is Thursday at 5 p.m. against Eastern Kentucky in the first game of a doubleheader.

Men lacked 'firepower to score'

win it."

But the offense sputtered. "If we could have done more offensively," he said, "I think we could have won it. We just didn't have enough firepower to score on the opportunities we had."

Western was led in scoring by senior Brett McNeal and juniors Anthony Smith and Roland Shelton, all with 15 points.

The Toppers must regroup after their third loss in a row because league-leading South Alabama invades Diddle Arena Thursday.

This is the second time this season that Western has faced the top team in the conference after three straight losses.

"We're in the same situation as we were (going into the game with Virginia Commonwealth Jan. 21)," Smith said. "We're looking forward to (South Alabama)."

The Toppers beat VCU 91-87.

The second loss in the current skid was a crucial home-court loss to the Alabama-Birmingham Thursday.

Behind sophomore guard Jack Kramer's emotional play, the Blazers roared from an 10-point deficit with 14:34 in the second half to defeat the Toppers 80-70.

Kramer, who led the Blazers with 20 points, sank a three-point basket with 1:28 to play in the first half, cutting Western's lead to 31-28.

On his way down the floor, Kramer shouted obscenities at McNeal, who had been guarding him.

The crowd screamed Kramer's name everytime he touched the ball after the incident.

But the jeers from the crowd may have been the inspiration for Kramer as he hit another three-pointer at the buzzer, ending the first half.

Kramer then raised his arms to the Western crowd in a motion to evoke applause.

Kramer received boos from the stands, but his antics may have given the Blazers the emotional lift they needed.

"I thought Kramer did a nice job for them," Arnold said. "He certainly played with emotion tonight."

"Kramer has a way of making friends everywhere he goes," UAB coach Gene Bartow said.

Victor Ngubeni finishes the 800-meter Saturday. He won the race and qualified for the NCAA national championships in March.

13th his freshman year and fourth overall. His sophomore year.

He qualified Saturday by winning the 800-meter race with a time of 1:50.1 at Middle Tennessee State.

He had to obtain a time of 1:50.4 or better to qualify in the 800 meter.

Ngubeni said he ran well because assistant coach Phillip Ryan ran with him and pushed him through the race.

"It was a fast race, but he was relaxed and it all came together for him," Coach Curtiss Long said. "We were anticipating him to qualify later in the season, but we are extremely happy he did (now)."

Ngubeni is only the third person to qualify for the 800-meter race so far. He is joined by two others, including Paul Ereng from Virginia. Ereng won the gold medal at the Olympics in Seoul, South Korea last summer.

Ngubeni said the NCAA meet is tough because all the top runners are there, and the standards are high.

The 19-year-old says he will now focus on qualifying for the mile and the 3000m. To qualify for those events he must finish with times of 4:03.48 for the mile, and 8:03.98 for the 3000m.

The men's team finished first at MTSU, outscoring Murray State and the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Steve Gibbons, a sophomore from Cork, Ireland, won the mile and the 3000m with personal best times of 4:12.7 and 8:26.53.

Ronny Shepard, a junior from Houston, won the 55-meter dash, and Tom Wright, a junior from Ft. Madison, Iowa, won the 400 meter.

The women's team finished fourth out of six teams. Mairead Looney, a freshman from Whittier, Calif., finished first in the mile with a time of 5:00.05.

Men faced tough bouts at Eastern

By PAULA D. RUSH.

While many of Western's students were out and about in the chilly air this weekend, the men's tennis team was in the heat of competition.

MEN'S TENNIS

The Toppers competed against nine teams at the invitational at Eastern, including Murray State, and Middle Tennessee. A team title was awarded at the tournament, only individual awards were given.

"I wish True said he thought that if team scores had been kept, Western would have been 15th or sixth."

True, who said before leaving for Richmond, that he expected to assist in Murray and Middle Tennessee to provide the strongest competition was 12th in target.

Mike Husick, a freshman from Eastern, said "There were a lot of tough teams like Murray, U of L, and Middle Tennessee. I think we did pretty good considering the competition."

True said the highlights of the weekend were singles play at the No. 1 and 5 positions.

Senior Andy Lee, Western's No. 1 player from Mysore, India, lost 1-2, 2-1 to Louisville's Andy Schickel.

True finished the semifinals at Eastern in the No. 2 position, but lost 2-1, 1-0 to Middle Tennessee's Jeff Haslam.

No. 1 player Kurt Freestinger, a senior from Jasper, Ind., made it to the finals but was defeated.

True said the team's biggest disappointment was in its doubles play. Western lost every match.

"We have got a lot of work to do," True said. "We didn't do as well as I had hoped."

He said he intends to change the doubles line-up for competition later this week.

On Thursday, the men play at noon against Campbellsville College, and on Friday they play David Lipscomb at 1:50. Both matches will be at Tennessean on Three Springs Road.

True said he thinks David Lipscomb will be the stronger of the two teams.

Baseball team swept on coast

Herald staff report

Western's baseball team opened the spring with two losses to Coastal Carolina Saturday and Sunday in Conway, S.C.

Heath Haynes was charged with the loss in the season opener, going up six runs in less than two innings pitched. Coastal pounded the Hilltoppers, 10-3.

Daren Kizziah went just three innings Sunday before being pulled. Western lost, 16-7.
