Housing intercepts football players' vandalism

BY STEPHANIE BROADBENT

The short side of Keen Hall is the "hot spot" of vandalism this semester, and the football team may be in the hot seat.

Work orders for vandalism-related repairs on the second, third and fourth floors of the dorm have become so common and expensive this semester that Facilities Management workers were told to stop fixing things.

"I am not interested in pouring money and effort into an area that is being intentionally vandalized," Housing Director Kit Tolbert said in a Nov. 24 memo to Wayne Mandeville, Facilities Management superintendent of mechanical services.

Keen Hall has a tall side, which has several floors, and a short side with four floors. The majority of the vandalism has occurred on the short side, said David Slaughter, a Facilities Management worker. The memo asked that any repairs of vandalism in that area be charged to the football team, which occupies all of the second floor and part of the third and fourth. No more vandalism-related problems should be repaired, it said, unless it is matter of safety or security.

◆ More than $2,000 in damage has been done, officials say

However, Tolbert said she talked to football Coach Jack Harbaugh and the football team and feels certain the problems will stop. The football team will not be charged, she said, and workers will be told to continue all repairs.

Tolbert said she thinks the problem will be solved by telling the residents that vandalism is unacceptable.

In the Nov. 24 memo, Tolbert said Keen Hall Director Pam Reno has "solicited assistance from the residents of the second and third floors, she has held disciplinary conferences and sanctioned several residents and despite these efforts, the problems still persist."

Harbaugh had no comment other than to say the problem has been handled.

Problem is 'outrageous'

David Slaughter, who provides maintenance to Keen Hall, said the problem of vandalism on the short side of the dorm is outrageous. Light bulbs in the hallways are taken out or destroyed daily, and the fixtures are beaten with a stick so that it is impossible to replace them, he said.

Mirrors are taken out of bathrooms, shower heads are ripped off and thrown away and doors are damaged — often beyond repair.

And trash is reportedly thrown out of windows, "creating an unsightly environment and creating a health hazard," Mandeville said in a memo to Tolbert dated

Western student and United Methodist minister Ruth Hand (center) offers a hug and an encouraging word to Trevor Jones, one of the youngsters who regularly attends a Sunday school gathering prior to her 11 a.m. worship service.

Ruth Hand preaches to her congregation at the Wesley Chapel. She also runs an after-school day care program twice each week.

Ruth Hand is a lady with many titles tucked neatly under her belt.

After her marriage 21 years ago, she took up drag racing until she was one week away from having her first child. In all that time, she lost only one of the many races she took part in.

She also used to train horses, sell real estate and own a craft and floral shop. Now, she is a mother of four, attending Western, and running a Methodist church on Clay Street. She also hosts an after-school program in the church.

Hand said she grew up in a denomination that treated women as second-class citizens. Her husband came from a denomination that was much more open to women.

After Sunday school class once in Medina, Ohio, Hand said the pastor made rude comments about women. She and her family walked out and was their routine, they headed to McDonald's for lunch.

"We got to the main intersection of town, and I was flooded with emotion and felt the necessity to go to a church," Hand said. "We saw a church at the corner. It was a United Methodist Church, and people were going in for a service."

"We went in and that morning, there was a guest speaker who was a female seminary student from Vanderbilt. That for me was an affirmation that women can be in the ministry."

After many years, Hand finally went into the ministry four years ago and received her first appointment in Bowling Green two years later. "I did not go into the ministry because I was discouraged by my

MONEY: Standards for school funding set

BY MATTHEW TUNGATE

Western is one step closer to knowing how the state will fund its future.

A committee of the Higher Education Review Commission came up with a general plan for performance-based funding at its meeting Friday. HERC is the governor-appointed group charged with streamlining and improving the quality of higher education in Kentucky.

Performance-based funding is based on questions that help assess Western's performance in the classroom and community.

While most administrators at Western have agreed with the concept of performance-based funding, some wondered how performance would be measured.

That question was decided at the HERC meeting Friday.

The finance and management committees set five performance standards, and universities have to come up with specific measures under each standard by Monday.

The standards on which Western's funding will be determined are:

- Assistance, which is the number of students that graduate, transfer, or are still enrolled after a set number of years.

- Student outcomes, which could include graduation rates, pass rates on licensure exams and employment rates.

- Quality of instruction, which could include the number of hours professors spend teaching and number of programs that are accredited.

- Campus management, which could include the number of classrooms in use and the ratio of administrators to faculty.

MONEY: Standards will decide future funding

Research and service, which could include the amount of money each faculty member receives for research and contributions to the Kentucky Education Reform Act

Meredith said James Ramsey, vice president for Finance and Administration, Robert Haynes, vice president for Academic Affairs and the academic deans will develop the specific measures under each standard for Western

President Thomas Meredith said he is open to suggestions

Faculty Regent Ray Mendel said the board should see the specific measures before HERRC does, and asked for a board meeting on the topic. A conference call for the regents is scheduled for Friday

"I don't think of a time in my 21 years that there has been a bigger policy issue," Mendel said

Meredith said the committee started with the five performance standards and then got input from the universities about the standards

The committee wouldn't change the standards, Meredith said, so University of Louisville President Donald Swain proposed waiting to decide on the standards, since performance based funding won't take effect until 1995

"The committee didn't want that either, he said, so a compromise was reached that the universities could fill in the specific measures under each standard, but they had to be done by Dec. 13, Meredith said

"This was the best compromise we could get," said Cecile Garmon, assistant vice president for Finance and Administration. Garmon and Ramsey attended the committee meeting Friday

Meredith said the committee will take all of the measures the universities turn in and compile a common list by which all universities will be funded

Ramsey said Western's funding will start at this year's level - about $50 million - in 1995

Western will have to set goals, and the closer it gets to those goals in each of the specific measures, the more state money it will receive. Garmon said the goals don't have to be set until August

Ramsey said the base would be the previous year's base plus the performance increase. It hasn't been decided who will decide how much each university will get for reaching its goals

Instructor who 'was willing to give so much for so little' dies at age 47

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Terry Jones, a journalism instructor, died from a heart attack Saturday at his home. He was 47

Jones, who was at Western since the spring of 1989, taught part-time. He was also in charge of the department's computer lab and helped with summer journalism workshops

"He was very much a part of this department," said journalism Department Head Jo Ann Albers. "One thing that astonished me, he was willing to give so much for so little"

He was also the chapter counselor for the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity

"He carried those fine men through some battles," said James Highland, journalism professor and Sig Ep faculty adviser

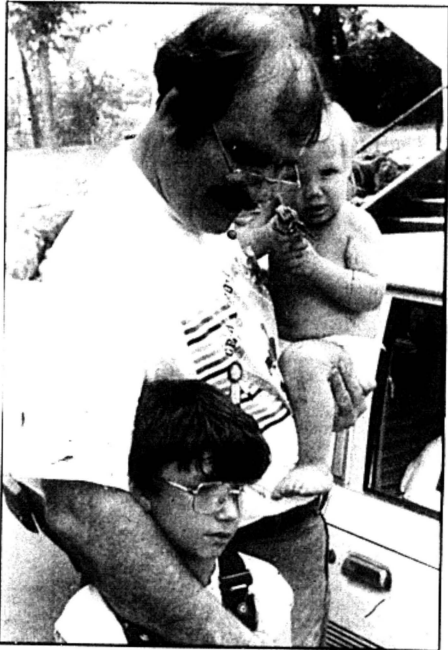

Jones earned a journalism degree from Western in 1978. He also received masters degrees in science education and communication and a bachelors degree in biology at Western

Jones taught at Hardin County schools and Owensboro city schools before coming to Western

"He really went out of his way to help - you weren't just a name or face, you were a person," said Bowling Green senior Laura Harris

Jones is survived by his mother, Lena Jones of Tompkinsville, his wife, Scottie, his daughter, Kim Williams of Scottsville and two grandsons

Visitation will be today at the Strode Funeral Home in Tompkinsville from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. The funeral will be 11 a.m. Wednesday at the Strode Funeral Home

Terry Jones came to Western as an undergraduate and returned to teach journalism classes in 1989. He died Saturday from a heart attack. He is pictured on top of the Hill with his two grand children, who visited one day this summer.

VANDALISM: Keen Hall the hot spot, official says

Nov. 17 "Vandalism charges are skyrocketing"

A set of double fire doors were intentionally pulled back hard enough to tear them off the hinges and rip them out of the concrete foundations, Slaughter said

Mandeville estimated it would cost more than $2,000 to replace the doors

Many room doors and bathroom doors were kicked in and had to be replaced. The cost of replacing each door is about $90, said Superintendent of Building Trades Bob Luckabaugh. That does not even count the costs of labor to paint and hang the doors, he said

Luckabaugh said the money and energy spent repairing vandalism could be better put to use in other areas

Vandalism repairs come from the maintenance fund, Mandeville said

"We only have six painters," he said "They can't paint a lobby somewhere if they are too busy painting doors"

Tolbert said there is always a problem of vandalism somewhere on campus. "Keen Hall seems to be the hot spot this semester," she said

Mandeville did not have any figures to compare the rate of vandalism in Keen Hall to other dorms

The Herald will not be published next week because of finals.

Students don't deserve hassle

Some students returned to their dorms after Thanksgiving to find their refrigerators unplugged and their food spoiled. Some said they had close to $100 worth of food damaged.

Dorm directors and resident assistants have admitted it was an honest mistake and said the students could be reimbursed for their losses.

That's where the problem lies.

Instead of trying to repay the students, dorm directors have encouraged them to file a claim against the state to get the money they spent on the food.

This will only result in a bunch of red tape and the students may never see any money from the state.

Residence Life should reimburse the students with money from its budget. The department should also fill out the forms themselves.

This mistake was not the students' fault, but they are the ones who are having to correct the problem. They will have to deal with the hassle of trying to get money from the state.

SGA has lost its priorities

Members of Student Government Association have been talking out of both sides of their mouths.

SGA has proposed resolutions that would require students to pay a $5 fee to fund an outdoor intramural facility and a $1 non-refundable fee if they get locked out of their dorm rooms.

They had their protest last month, saying how much they were against a tuition hike, but then they turn around and encourage making students pay in other ways.

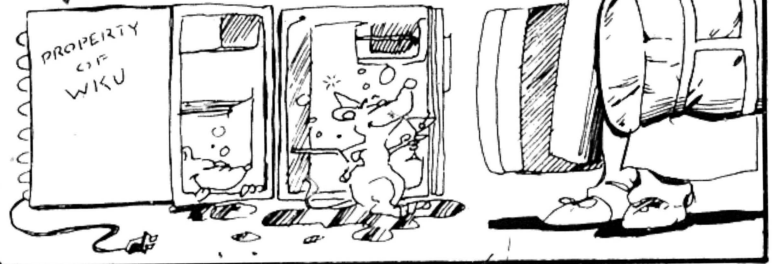

This is called a double standard and SGA should reconsider the resolutions.

Granted, it's only $6, but these two proposals are just more nickel and dime ways of making the students pay more than they should.

If SGA was completely committed to the students, it would try to avoid these extra fees, rather than making resolutions in favor of them.

◆ Your view/letters to the editor

Reporting was more like 'gunslinging'

Are you people crazy? Your article about Ray Mendel makes it appear so. Based on your report, Western needs to reduce the accounting department by 90 percent and the business department by 50 percent. One of the major purposes of both is to structure business so as to pay as little taxes as legal-permitted. Your report stated that Dr Mendel has researched what was legal and was informed that what he was doing was legal.

What's the big deal? If you look forward to paying taxes, so be it. Some of us have a more selfish personality. Some want to pay what is legally required for personal purposes.

I do think that a (pardon me) gunslinger reporter looking for some dirt so that he or she is more employable is not a valid format to discuss tax structure.

Jones' friendship will be missed by many

Oh may I join the choir invisible Of those immortal dead who live again In minds made better by their presence.
—George Eliot (1819-1880)

A sad day has come to pass for all of us who knew Terry Jones as a teacher, a brother, a friend and a devoted family man.

Terry was all of these and more to the members of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. As an instructor in the journalism department, he earned as much respect as one can muster in the short time he was here.

As brother of Sigma Phi Epsilon and chapter counselor, Terry, along with journalism Professor Jim Highland, were paramount in rebuilding our fraternity to its success.

For those who never had the chance to meet this dedicated, passionate friend that Terry was to many, they've missed out on a man who was at best a teacher foremost and a good friend.

Terry's unfortunate and untimely death should serve as a reminder to all of us how fragile life truly is, especially in this holiday season.

Yet Terry is going on to a better place — we just wish it wasn't so soon.

Our heartfelt sympathy and heartfelt go out to Terry's wife and family.

Farewell brother, you will truly be missed.

State's brightest stars found in physics, astronomy classes

By Dawn Ang

The research never ends for Charles McGruder. But what the physics and astronomy department head found during his search has made it all worthwhile.

When McGruder arrived at Western this semester, he organized a committee to research the department and come up with facts that President Thomas Meredith could show Gov. Brereton Jones' Higher Education Review Commission.

The same group that will, in the end, decide which departments are important enough not to be cut at the state's universities.

Through the committee's research, McGruder found out that he had in his hands a department that had one of the highest ACT scores and grade-point averages at Western.

"Our majors have the highest composite ACT average of all departments in the university at 24.92," he said.

But the students knew that a long time ago.

Steve K. Boddeker, a Bowling Green graduate of the department, thinks the program prepares students well for graduate school. He describes it as "excellent."

So does George Vourvopoulos, an international, J-renewed professor in the department.

"On average, half of our graduates go directly into masters and doctorate programs, and 77 percent of these complete graduate degree programs," McGruder said. "In the last 25 years, at least 35 of our program graduates have gone on to earn doctorates."

An average of 10 students graduate from the department each year.

"Last year, 12 students graduated, and only three or four did not go to graduate school because they went into teaching or another field," said Boddeker, who will be attend

Vourvopoulos said.

"Students come fairly well prepared because of the rigorous training that they need to undergo," he said. "Our program is not geared to give remedial classes."

All combined, the committee's research makes McGruder a very happy man.

McGruder said, "We rank first among Kentucky institutions in the average number of physics majors graduated per year."

However, recombinant genetics majors in the biology department are also on top of the list of high ACT scores. "Our recombinant genetics majors' ACT scores average about 26," said Valgene Dunham, head of the biology department.

In the past six years, the biology department has graduated 33 recombinant genetics majors. Of these, 30 went on to graduate school. Currently 75 recombinant genetics majors are in the department.

The physics department also offers a dual degree program where students can obtain an engineering degree from another university that has an agreement with Western.

Auburn, the University of Kentucky, the University of Tennessee and Georgia Tech have formal agreements with the university.

With such a high rate of success in the physics and astronomy department, McGruder hopes that the department will not face any proposed cuts from HERC.

He said he's "not really worried about anymore budget cuts, unless he (Jones) does not keep his promise" not to cut the budget anymore.

"Students come fairly well prepared because of the rigorous training... Our program is not geared to give remedial classes."

—George Vourvopoulos physics professor

ing graduate school in Florida next year.

"The department also has a top notch faculty for astronomy and nuclear physics," Boddeker said. Overall, he likes the department because "all teachers talk individually to the students here. They can't do that in big schools."

But one of the biggest reasons for the department's success lies with the students.

The Carol of Lights

The Christmas season approaches: bells are ringing, lights are sparkling, traditional music is playing, and the world is reminded of the birth of Jesus Christ nearly 2,000 years ago. While we recognize that not everyone embraces His claims, we happily acknowledge our faith and the change He has made in our lives. We wish for you not only the joy of the season but also an opportunity of knowing the One whose birth we celebrate.

This greeting of the season is brought to you by the Christian Faculty & Staff Fellowship, an interdenominational Christian fellowship for faculty and staff at Western Kentucky University.

Following a Sunday service, Hand pauses to reflect in one of the pews at the Wesley Chapel United Methodist Church. With her many responsibilities as a minister, wife and mother, Hand has no regrets, "except that I should have entered the ministry 20 years ago."

Top, a frustrated Ruth Hand attempts to reason with a representative of the Bowling Green Electric Plant Board after the church's electricity had been turned off, leaving the children at the day care without lights and heat.

Above, Prior to class, Hand talks to Doug Gott, her constitutional law instructor about a recent class in which she surprised Gott with her passionate support of a case which dealt with the issue of the separation of church and state.

Right, an animated Hand engages youngsters at the day care program with a story during snack time.

original church." Hand pointed out. She is working toward obtaining full ordination after she completes her seminary. In the Methodist church, attending seminary means going to graduate school. Hand is now a senior at Western, majoring in religion and government. She graduates next semester and plans to attend graduate school in the fall.

"She participates significantly in class with her view of the role of women in religion," said Joseph Trafton, a religion and philosophy professor. "She sometimes receives flack from other students who don't understand about women in the ministry."

It has been hard on Hand, especially being a woman in a male dominated field.

"Less than half percent of all ministers in the United States are women," Hand said.

Even her children get comments from schoolmates about their mother's being a minister.

Michael, 15, her youngest son, said, "A guy from school whose dad's a minister from another denomination came up to me one day and told me that I was going to hell because my mother is a minister."

But Hand has had her share of good comments as well.

"Dr. M. Darwin Quigley, a friend of mine, once told me that my being in the ministry is the most natural thing," Hand said. "He said that the ministry is the most nurturing part of life, and who better to nurture than a woman."

Quigley, who has known Hand for about six years, and attends Broadway United Methodist Church, said, "It is the women who nurture children in Sunday school. They're the teachers of the church."

At Wesley Chapel United Methodist Church where Hand preaches to a congregation of about 10 once a week, she also runs an after school program every Tuesday and Friday.

"It's a relatively new program and I hope to build it up so that we can have it everyday," she said.

But for now, she has to settle for whatever help she can get from volunteers for the program.

"I feel that this is a terrific challenge, but we need more help," she said. "My two biggest frustrations are that we need more help, and better funding."

A week ago, due to a mix-up in the bills, the Bowling Green Electric Plant Board turned the church's electricity off. The after school program was on that day, and Hand had to send the children home early because it was too cold in the church and she did not want them to catch a cold.

After some yelling on her part, the electricity was turned on, but not without the man telling Hand that she was not very "Jesus-like" to yell.

But Hand has learned not to pay attention to such things. With so many responsibilities, Hand maintains, "I have no regrets, except that I should have entered the ministry 20 years ago."

Sgt. Terry Moore made more DUI arrests in the past year than any other state university officer.

'Satisfied knowing I do a good job'

By TONYA ROOT

Once, when riding a bicycle, he arrested a man driving a car. That kind of persistence is just one characteristic that paid off for campus police Sgt. Terry Moore last week.

Moore received the Governor's Award for Outstanding Achievement in Apprehension of Impaired Drivers at a luncheon in Louisville last Wednesday.

He made more DUI arrests in the past year than any other university officer in the state.

Moore said he is not big on awards, though.

"I'm satisfied knowing I do a good job — I don't need that pat on the back," he said.

Moore, who has been with campus police since September 1991, made 29 DUI arrests from September 1992 to October 1993.

Campus police made 91 DUI arrests during that time period, which increased from last year's 63, Moore said.

"I think our officers are fine-tuned for watching for DUI drivers, and that is reflected in the statistics," said campus police Capt. Richard Kirby.

For Moore, mixed emotions have come from receiving the award. While being photographed with it, he didn't smile.

"I didn't feel it was appropriate to smile about receiving an award about taking people to jail," he said.

He said he tries to treat each person fairly.

"When performing a sobriety test on someone, we take into account each person is nervous because there is a person with a badge there doing the test," he said.

Sometimes there are problems during arrests. "They'll deny it until they blow on that machine down there and it says anything above .10 is drunk, and then they don't have a lot to say," Moore said.

Most of the people he arrests for DUI are under 21 and are coming from parties between midnight Wednesday and Saturday morning, he said.

"The ones that I deal with mainly here are young people that are away from home, like I was not so long ago, and they make a mistake," Moore said.

"The majority of them won't go out and do that again."

Being fair with everyone is important because if he was to let one go he would have to let everybody go, he said.

"If it was my brother, my mother or my wife I would hate it, but I would do it to go home and lay my head on the pillow and go to sleep at night and feel like I have been fair across the board," Moore said.

The responsibility of taking someone's freedom away when they are arrested is something taken lightly by some officers, Moore said.

"Especially in America where you have the right to be free, for me to take that freedom away for a short while is not what the forefathers had given you as a right," Moore said.

A CLEAN SLATE: Staff workers trade tools for textbooks

◆ A scholarship program is helping some Facilities Management workers earn their degrees

BY STEPHANIE BROADBENT

Kaye Smith is a full-time worker and a part-time student. West ern pays her to be both.

Smith has worked for Facilities Management for six years, and watching students rush back and forth from classes helped her decide to fulfill her lifelong dream.

After 25 years out of the classroom, she decided to get a college degree.

Now, not only does she go to school free, she gets paid to go to class. Western allows all full-time employees to take two undergraduate classes, which normally cost $67 an hour, or one graduate class, which would cost $98 an hour, free of charge each semester.

The Faculty/Staff Tuition Scholarship Program was created in 1966 to encourage faculty and staff to gain competence in their fields.

This semester, 17 Facilities Management workers are involved — housekeepers, groundskeepers and plumbers.

They can take one class during the day without having to clock out. The other can be taken at night.

Smith said going back to school has changed her life. "I've got a goal now," she said. "It gives you a whole new outlook."

Although it will take Smith, 45, twice as long to get her social work degree, she hopes to work in the school system or council children with alcoholic parents one day.

"I don't care if it takes me twice as long," she said. "I'm not losing anything — I'm gaining everything."

She said that goal helps her get through the rough times when she gets overloaded with work, school and family.

"The hardest thing is juggling the time," she said. "I spend a lot of my lunch hours studying."

Her two children are also in college. Her son is a freshman at Western. Both were supportive of her decision to go back to school, she said, although her son refuses to take classes with her.

Smith said she was afraid to go back to school at first. "It takes a lot of courage when you're just getting started."

Two things bothered her, she said. "I was so old and I was afraid I would fail." But she did not fail. Instead, she has kept a high grade-point average and gained a great amount of confidence as a result, she said.

Now she wants to encourage more workers to take advantage of the opportunity.

Lynn Goodman said he decided to take classes to advance himself. And, judging from his recent promotion, it seems to be working, he said. Goodman was recently promoted from plumber to hazardous materials technician.

He said he thinks it is because of his classes, which include safety and health.

Although his days are long and busy, he enjoys the challenge, he said.

In addition to being a husband, father and full-time worker, Goodman, 36, is also active in his church.

Finding time to do it all is not always easy, he said. "I can't wait for Christmas to have some time off."

State pays for education for students who lose jobs

BY MELISSA GAGLIARDI

When Wayne Hallett heard he was eligible for a government program which would pay for him to go to college, he decided to look into it.

He wanted to leave the job hunt, where he had to apply to three jobs each week to collect his unemployment check.

And now the Job Training Partnership Act, or JTPA, is paying for his computer disks, parking, books and even $5 a day for traveling expenses. Hallett's tuition is already covered by General Electric because he worked there for two and a half years and was laid off.

The act, formed in 1982, is sponsored by the state to educate people who lost their jobs by no fault of their own.

"Funding is not near what it used to be," said state employment and training specialist Mary Hutchins of the Cabinet for Human Resources. She said many rules have been tightened, and it is now more accountable than it was.

In October 1992, Hallett said he filled out a mountain of paperwork and didn't receive money for a long time. "I kept asking myself, 'Is this worth it?'"

He decided to go back to school after losing numerous factory jobs. "I was in the work force for 10 years and realized, 'Hey, this isn't working out the way I planned.'"

A year before he graduated JTPA stepped in to help.

But while receiving the financial help, Hallett must meet several requirements.

"They're very strict," he said. "I can't be in here just screwing off, taking a bunch of classes."

He must fill out a project report and have it signed to prove he is doing well and that the money is not being wasted. He has a 3.7 grade-point average and fears that if he receives a bad grade, it may be seen as a sign of future poor performance.

He can't take any classes that aren't required for his degree and he is not paid for repeated courses, lost books, or classes in which he gets less than a "C."

Everything he buys must be approved before he can be reimbursed.

He said many students are probably eligible for the program but just don't know about it. "It was kind of a surprise for me," he said.

Hutchins said about 30 students at Western receive money through the program.

Students who think they may be eligible can call the local Department for Employment Services at 843-5425.

Tutoring offered at TPH

By NAMONA PATTON

Having problems with classes? The Minority Retention Program is offering tutoring for those in need.

"This is a great opportunity for students to work on their strengths and weaknesses," graduate student Ross Riley said.

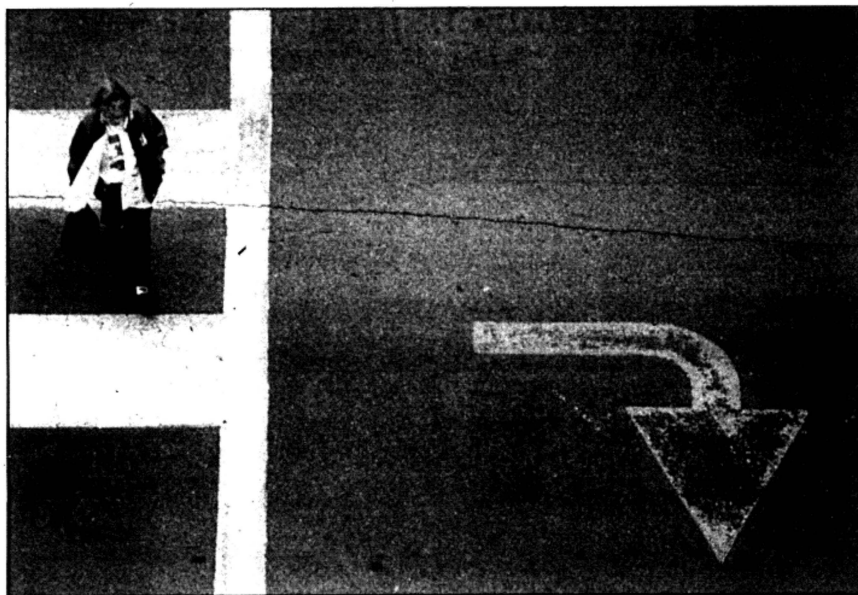

Graduate students in the education department at Tate Page Hall are offering tutoring in areas such as math, reading, science and social studies. These activities are available on the WIT computer system. The program has been available since the beginning of the semester, but few students have taken advantage of it, Riley said.

Students don't need appointments, and can get help from graduate students Quentin Hollis from Cincinnati, Beora Williams from Bowling Green, Rodney Cohen from Atlanta and Riley from Virginia Beach, Va.

As the students work on the computer base to help better their learning abilities, a print-out of the students' strengths and weaknesses are available. This database can also challenge some students to improve their skills in the area that needs work.

"Hopefully, during finals more students will take advantage of this program," Hollis said.

The center is open 8 a.m.-8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-6 p.m. on Fridays and 8:00 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturdays.

SHOPPING SPREE: Regents spend surplus on repairs

By Matthew Tunkate

The Board of Regents got to spend $900,000 of the state's money Friday, and most of it will replace steam pipes that are more than 30 years old.

Five steam line projects across campus will cost about $650,000. According to documents given to the board, some of the pipes leak and are pitted with rust, and therefore waste energy.

The main steam line, which supplies Bowling University Center with heat, will be replaced this summer. It will cost $150,000 to replace the main line.

Three steam lines — one to Garrett Conference Center, one to Diddle Dorm and Thompson Complex Central Wing, and one to McClean, Grise, South, North and West Halls — will also be repaired.

Another line will be extended to Thompson Complex North Wing in the summer of 1995.

An engineering consultant will be assigned from Frankfort in about three months and then bids will go out for a company to repair the lines, Johnson said.

"If we could do it, it'd be done in a month," President Thomas Meredith said.

The steam plant has the largest number of projects with 12, totaling almost $170,000. The projects range from buying new equipment to getting a new coat of paint.

The work includes installing an emergency generator, more efficient lighting and an alternate water main. These projects will be done this summer.

Lighting to be Improved

Nineteen lights will be added on the walkway from Pearce-Ford Tower to DUC.

The money for all the construction projects was left over from a state-funded boiler project started in 1986.

Facilities Management Administrator Kemble Johnson said Western originally planned to install two coal burners to supply the campus with heat. But because of Environmental Protection Agency regulations, it changed its original plan.

Johnson said one of the coal burners was converted into a smaller, gas-burning boiler because it would have cost too much to meet EPA standards with two coal burners. Because the gas-burning boiler cost less, Western saved money.

Western may do more repair projects in the future. James Ramsey, vice president for Finance and Administration, told the board that Western is going through the accounts of construction projects started before last year looking for leftover money.

Because of a state law passed in 1992, Western must give back the money it doesn't use on projects started last year, Ramsey said. He also said the administration will come back to the board for spending approval whenever money is found.

The board also agreed to spend $49,000 to pay Western's share for an insurance premium increase. At the last board meeting, it set aside $80,000 for faculty insurance premium increases. Premiums went up $4.60 per person per month for individual faculty members. Ramsey said the rest of the money will roll into next year's budget as income

Resolution requires students to pay for intramural facility

BY LEBLIE FLYNN

Plans are being made for Western to have one of the top outdoor recreational facilities in the state, but funding seems to be a major problem.

Student Government Association President Donald Smith has written a resolution that could help solve the problem. It will be voted on by SGA members at 5 tonight.

The resolution asks students to pay a $5 fee to fund an outdoor intramural facility at Detrex field by the Detrex Corporation on Emmett Avenue.

Students currently pay a $5 health and activities fee, which is included in tuition, to fund the Preston Health and Activities Center, but that fund will no longer be needed after the spring semester.

According to the resolution, the money would be used to pay for the outdoor facility. The fee would be discontinued after the spring of 1998.

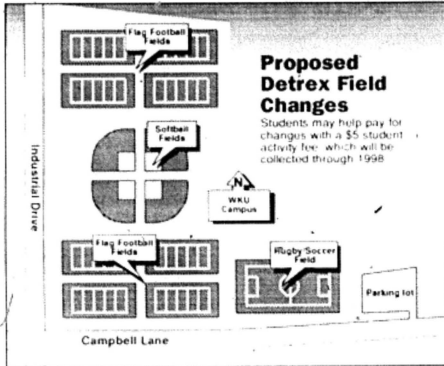

"I like the concept that's been proposed," President Thomas Meredith said.

If passed tonight, the resolution may have to be approved by the Board of Regents, since it is in charge of approving all student fees, Smith said.

The Board of Regents allotted $40,000 in October for the improvement of intramural facilities.

The $40,000 would be used for the first of four stages of the proposal, said Director of Intramurals Debby Cherwak.

- The stages are:
 - Moving parking to the other side of Campbell Lane. A new paved parking lot will hold more vehicles and alleviate problems with residents in the area who complain about the cars parked along the street, Cherwak said.
 - Constructing restroom facilities.
 - Constructing a complex that would include restrooms and a concession stand. In addition, four softball fields would be built.

Steve Perez/Herald

• Installing lights at the facility, which would include eight football fields, four softball fields and a rugby/soccer field.

If all goes as planned, the first stage will be completed by next fall, Cherwak said.

Neither a time frame nor the funding has been worked out yet, and it has not been determined how much the facility will cost, she said.

She said architects have not drawn up a specific proposal. The ground's soil and rock content must be tested first.

Cherwak said the facility is definitely needed. It's been needed for the 16 years she has been at Western, she said.

Smith said the proposal is a good one and needs to be done.

The current outdoor facility at Detrex Field is "just a mess," Smith said. He said it is just a big field that doesn't have any markings. He also said students are at risk of being injured because of the holes and ruts in the ground.

"We want to make it a college intramural field," he said.

Smith said his proposal is a fairly simple way to fund it, especially since students pay a $5 fee already. "If it was an additional cost we would be hesitant," he said.

Smith said other money will probably have to come from university funds because people won't want to donate money because it is an outdoor facility.

Cherwak also said the facility, in its completed stages, could bring revenue to Western by hosting community events, as well as bringing in profits from the concession stand.

She also said the new facility would help Western attract teams from other schools to play here and would create more club sports.

Western's Master Plan calls for moving the intramural facility to where Denes Field is now, and moving the baseball field to Detrex Field. But that's probably 20 to 25 years away, Smith said.

Federal grants reviewed for fraud

BY MEGHAN HOBBS

The Clinton administration's education department is beginning a major review of Pell grants and other federal student assistance.

The goal is not to cut the budget of funds, but to determine who receives Pell grants and why.

Western should not be affected, said Marilyn Clark, director of student financial assistance.

The review began when abuse of the federal funds by several proprietary schools in the Northeast was uncovered.

Such schools provide accelerated classes to students who want to receive a degree in short amount of time. They usually cost more than public and private schools, and their students require more financial aid, including Pell grants.

Clark said the review will have little effect on a public institution.

She said Western has not had any instances of financial assistance fraud, as far as she knows. She said she doesn't think fooling the federal aid system is an easy task anyway.

Once, she said, students could enroll in more than one school and get away with receiving federal money for each school applied to.

"That would be impossible now," Clark said, "because they cross match Social Security numbers when the Financial Aid Form is processed."

Now, students who receive Pell grants must demonstrate financial need.

The committee reviewing the grants is focusing on schools rather than students.

Clark said any changes in the financial aid system, however, will have an effect on students.

"I really feel financial aid has helped so many students get through school," she said, "the good is so much greater than any negatives you could weigh it with."

Police follow trail, catch burglar

Police followed a trail of fresh blood and broken glass to solve a burglary in the Environmental Science and Technology Building on Dec. 3.

Campus police Lt. Eugene Hooper noticed the front door of EST propped open and a trail of blood that led from the sidewalk to a broken window in Room 208 around 8:30 a.m., police said.

A trophy case near the room was broken and two plaques, valued at $60, were taken and later recovered outside the building, the police report said.

Clifton David Thomas, 312 Loop Ave., was arrested on third-degree burglary after he received medical treatment at the Medical Center at Bowling Green for lacerations to his arm. He was released from the Warren County Regional Jail on Dec. 6 on a $5,000 surety bond.

Best of the show

Western's equestrian team had its best show of the semester last weekend at Murray State. At top, Jackie Luttrell helps Casey Creek junior Jennifer Eastridge apply makeup, while assistant coach Susan Pfanstiel waits for the show to begin. At left, Bowling Green junior Dana Adams gets a congratulatory hug from Jennifer Reeves, a junior from Richmond, Ind., after winning her first blue ribbon this semester.

Both the hunt seat and stock seat teams won the high point award, which is given to the team with the most cumulative points. "We've had a strong stock seat team for a long time," said Coach Charles Anderson, "and today hunt seat really showed what they were made of." The team finished with four first places, six second places and seven third places. It hopes to be placed in regional competition. The decision for regionals is made in February, after Western hosts their show at the Expo Center.

Hill lifts Western to first road win

By DENNIS VARNEY

Senior forward Denise Hill finally played the way she is capable of playing, Lady Topper Coach Pau' Sanderford said.

Hill scored 16 points and grabbed eight rebounds as the Lady Toppers got their second win of the season last night, a 79-61 victory against Ohio University in Athens, Ohio.

After the win, Sanderford said the team is still struggling to play like he wants it to, but said it was a big win for the team after losing two straight.

Both losses came on the road - one against Southwest Missouri State and the other against UCLA. "We played well in spurts," Sanderford said. "We made the big plays when we had to."

After falling behind 5-4, the Lady Toppers jumped out to an 11-point lead on the Lady Bobcats. Western led 35-28 at the half.

Hill sparked the Lady Toppers at the start of the second half, scoring six of her 14 second-half points to give Western a 41-30 lead.

"Coach told us to get behind the defense and everybody did a good job getting the ball inside," she said.

Sophomore point guard Dawn Warner led Western with 17 points and three assists.

Good free throw shooting, including 8-8 from Warner.

BLOWOUT: Tops shell AAU foe, face North Florida tomorrow

By JEFF NATIONS

Diddle Arena hosted its own version of a Harlem Globetrotters game Sunday - plenty of thrills, chills and even a spill or two.

The Toppers, playing the Globetrotter role, scored 17 unanswered points to open the game en route to a 103-80 victory over the Lafayette Hustlers in an exhibition game that saw dunks, three-point bombs and a camera man sprawled on the court between free throws.

With the exhibition games behind them, the Toppers return to action tomorrow when they play North Florida in an 8 p.m. contest at Diddle.

The Ospreys, a Division II school in their second year of competition, improved their record to 4-0 this season after defeating Flagler College 104-80 on Saturday.

"Without question this is the biggest game we've ever played," said Rick Zvoisek, North Florida's coach. "But while we like the idea of playing Western Kentucky this year, it's more important down the road, because it could influence Jacksonville to play us."

Zvoisek said his team would "try a little of everything" to stop Western. "Our biggest fear is their athleticism," he said. "They're not that big, but they really go hard to the glass."

Against the Hustlers, Danyell Macklin supplied the majority of thrills. The freshman guard/forward scored a team-high 16 points for Western. He saved his most impressive basket, a soaring one-handed slam, for the end.

"He can jump so high, and we have so many other people who can, too," said junior center Derek Flowers. "I think the only person who can't is Coach Willard."

The Toppers amassed at least 10 dunks in the game, from ally oops to two-handed slams to one-handed stuffs.

"If there are other teams as athletic, I haven't seen them," Lafayette Coach Roger Blalock said.

The Hustlers, an AAU team from Indiana who turned in the Washington Generals-like performance, started the game with seven players dressed, with late arrivals filling up the bench by

Swimming

Missing the whistle didn't cost team win

By P. ALAN BERNARDY

Going into last weekend's first away meet, swim team Coach Bill Powell thought he had every thing in order.

During Friday's first day of competition of the University of Arkansas Little Rock's Christmas Invitational, Powell forgot one very important thing to have his swimmers at the starting platform for the 800-yard freestyle relay.

"I screwed us out of 40 points," Powell said of his mis take.

Fortunately, it didn't affect Western's chance for victory as they came away with a relatively easy win in the 10-team field with 803 points, 11 Western all-time top-10 finishes and one school record.

Normally there are two heats to any relay, with the faster teams swimming freestyle heat and the slower teams in the other.

Powell thought his team was to swim in the second heat, but he hadn't counted on two teams not entering, diminishing the field to eight and eliminating the need for more than one heat.

"I was at fault, no doubt about it," Powell said. "We would have easily won the relay, but other than losing 40 points, it didn't really affect our swimming."

"Coach has been here for 25 years," said freshman Sean O'Shea. "He's bound to make a

Lewis Mills replaced Gary West in October as director of the Hilltopper Athletic Foundation.

Foundation banks on its new director

BY KAREN D. BROWN

Lewis Mills, a Virginia native turned Kentuckian, is ready to wave the Red Towel as the new director of Development for University Athletics.

"Used to be an enemy, and it wasn't real fun coming here," Mills said. "I like being on this side."

The new position takes the place of Hilltopper Athletic Foundation Director and gives Western more control over the HAF.

Although Mills, who was hired in October, is new on campus, he is no stranger to Western's sports. As the athletic director for Virginia Commonwealth University, he came along with the teams to Western.

Mills chaired the expansion committee for the Sun Belt Conference when Western came into the conference. Mills said, "I know the campus, the athletic department and the people involved in the university."

But he is relying on the people on the inside to help him get acquainted with the HAF.

He depends on his executive secretaries Jo Rogers and Chris Lagerman to give him information. He also looks to Interim Athletic Director Jim Richards for help and the HAF executive board, Mills said.

But he doesn't see being new as a handicap. "I can open new doors and get to know new members," Mills said. "I need to get out and meet people and be visible, but not pushy in any way."

Richards added that Mills' newness could get more funding from previous donors.

Mills believes Western athletics can have a better future, and plans are underway to help build the foundation's fund raising.

"First we need to look at where we've come from and get

Richards wants students at games

HERALD STAFF REPORT

Western's ticket office announced that tickets for Friday's women's basketball game and Saturday's men's game will be available in the Downing University Center lobby.

Students with a valid ID card may pick up tickets for the Lady Topper's game against the University of Kentucky from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday. Western takes on the Lady Kats, one of its biggest traditional rivals, at 7 p.m. Friday at Diddle Arena.

Tickets for Saturday's men's matchup with Ball State will also be available at that time. The men's game, which will be televised nationally on ESPN, is at 4 p.m. Saturday at Diddle. Tickets may still be picked up immediately before the games.

Interim Athletics Director Jim Richards said he hopes to see a large turnout for both games.

The Toppers next game televised on ESPN will be in February when the men host New Orleans.

ESPN will also televise the Lady Topps game when they host Louisiana Tech on Feb. 25.

game's end. Those who were there for the beginning found out early how intense Western's defense plays.

The Hustler's Tim McRoberts attempted a layup for his team's first shot of the game, but senior forward Cyphus Buntun swatted the ball into the backboard. That play seemed to set the tone for the Toppers, who held the visitors shotless for nearly five minutes after the play.

"We were hyped coming into the game, but that play really got everybody excited," Flowers said. "I know I picked it up defensively after that."

The Toppers threw a wet blanket on the Hustler offense throughout the half, holding them to a chilly 36 percent from the field and causing 20 turnovers.

Bhalock said his team, which has played and lost to Purdue, DePaul, and UCLA, hasn't played against a better defense than the Toppers. "If they played the entire game like they did in the first half, they probably would have scored 150, and we might have had 50."

Fortunately for Bhalock, the Toppers didn't play with the same intensity in the second half, as the Hustlers outscored them 47-41 in the final 20 minutes.

Coach Ralph Willard said the Toppers played a good 20 minutes but then "let our concentration go when we got the big lead."

Freshman guard Brad Cirino, one of five Toppers who scored in double figures, said the let down was inevitable.

"We came out on fire," he said. "I guess they kind of thought it was over. It's hard to stay focused when you have a big lead."

SWIM: O'Shea breaks school record in the backstroke at meet

O'Shea, freshman Scott Cummins, senior Chan Ferguson, and sophomore John Dissinger were the swimmers for the mixed event. Powell said they were disappointed and blamed the organizers of the meet first.

"We were really disappointed," O'Shea said. "The 800 is Scott and I's favorite relay, something we really look forward to. We haven't had the chance to swim it at all this year. We knew we could have won it."

O'Shea also broke a school record this weekend in the 200-yard backstroke with a time of 1:54.39.

"The record was a goal going in," O'Shea said, "but I was just planning on going to the meet, swimming as fast as I could, and if the record was there, it was there."

Although Powell contends that there is just as much of home-away advantage as in other sports and that some pools are faster depending on wave actions, O'Shea doesn't think his record was the result of a faster pool.

"I like to think I could have broken the record at any pool," O'Shea said.

Powell is calling this year's team one of his best, and with five consecutive wins and a tournament victory under their belt, he has great hope for his team's chances at the Eastern Intercollegiate Tournament in March.

"This team ranks way up there with the best I've ever had," he said. "If we can keep our intensity consistent we could be really good."

During Friday's preliminaries, Powell said his team was really intense and hard-working. He said it carried into that night's finals, but on the following day, that intensity faltered.

"We can't be as good as we can be if our intensity level is there only 75 percent of the time," Powell said.

First place finishers for Western were Scott Cummins in the 500-yard freestyle, 200-yard butterfly, and 1,650-yard freestyle; senior Ben Graves in the 50-yard freestyle; Chan Ferguson in the 100-yard breast-stroke and Sean O'Shea in the 200-yard freestyle.

Graves, Ferguson, junior Joseph Keillor, and sophomore Joel Wiehrink won the 200-yard freestyle relay.

helped the Lady Toppers jump out to a 13-point lead, but Ohio University cut the lead to five with about seven minutes to go.

"You've got to give them credit," Sanderford said. "They came out ready to play and they gave us a run."

The Lady Toppers closed the door at the end with an eight-point run, securing the 18-point victory.

"It was a good win for us," Sanderford said. "Anytime you win on the road, you're happy. It will be good to get back to Bowling Green and Diddle Arena."

The team will take today off before preparing for its next game, which will be against Kentucky in Diddle Arena in the Bowling Green Bank Classic on Friday at 7 p.m.

"It always seems that we get Kentucky at the right time of the year," Sanderford said. "When they're playing well and we're not."

Kentucky has beaten the Lady Toppers on last second shots the last two years.

"We're excited already so we know it's going to be a good game," Hill said.

Former baseball player pitching again for Western

Former Hilltopper baseball player Wayne Orscheln has been named the director of marketing and promotions for athletics. He fills the vacancy created when Jimmy Clark left to take a similar position at the University of Mississippi. Orscheln graduated from Western in 1988 with a degree in business. He also holds a master's degree in sports management from Georgia Southern. Orscheln previously worked as the director of marketing and promotions at the University of North Florida for three years.
