Streamlining may cost Western 30 programs

BY LESLIE FLYNN

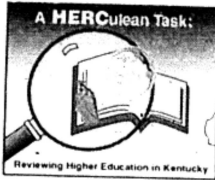

Western will eliminate 30 degree programs as part of a statewide effort to streamline higher education, if the proposal is approved by Gov. Brereton Jones.

All eight state universities and community colleges are making cuts in their programs to avoid duplication and ultimately save the state money.

Some of the programs Western plans to eliminate are Agricultural Power Machinery Operation, Home Economics Teacher Education and City/Urban/Community/Regional Planning.

The Governor's Higher Education Review Commission recommended a total of 203 programs, about 16 percent of all programs offered statewide, be eliminated. The targeted programs were chosen because they have few students in them or are duplicated at other schools. No new students will be admitted to these programs in the fall.

Students who are currently enrolled in the programs that may be cut will have three years to complete an associate degree, six years to complete a baccalaureate degree and four years to complete a master's degree.

If Jones approves the recommendations, Western will begin working to phase out the programs, said Robert Haynes, vice president for Academic Affairs.

President Thomas Meredith said he is breathing a sigh of relief that he won't have to make as many trips to Frankfort now that his part in a report to the governor is finished.

Meredith said he is positive all 14 recommendations in the Higher Education Review Commission's report will be approved by the Council on Higher Education Jan. 24 without need for legislative approval.

HERC, which was comprised of the eight university presidents, board of regents chairs and state government officials, was formed by Gov. Brereton Jones in August. HERC was an option over another budget cut to "remake higher education in Kentucky," the final draft of the HERC report says.

Jim Ramsey, vice president for Finance and Administration, said the most dramatic of the 14 recommendations are the formula funding, the elimination of 30 degree programs (203 statewide) and the core group of programs to

Barnes residents wash woes down drain

BY P. ALAN BERNARDY

Mark Robson, a freshman from Liverpool, England, returned to Bowling Green after a flight from his native country wanting a shower.

"At the time I was told that you couldn't use any of the showers, I was definitely inconvenienced," he said, "but there isn't much that could have been done about it."

The Barnes-Campbell Hall resident was not the only student inconvenienced Sunday by a clogged pipe in the dorm's main shower drain. Until late Sunday night, all of Barnes' showers were closed and residents were referred to Keen Hall.

Facilities Management fixed the showers early Monday afternoon.

All the plumbing for showers and sinks meet in one vertical pipe that runs below the first floor. Below ground, this pipe connects with a pipe for the commodes and urinals.

Just above the first floor, the stoppage caused water to back up and flow freely from a floor drain in the third-floor shower. Facilities Management Administrator Kemble Johnson said

"The problem occurred because of years of debris that backed up the shower drain, he said.

"The drain line that goes under the shower and the sink was stopped up," Johnson said. "We thought we would have to cut out a section of the line and replace it, but all it took was 35 to 40 feet of auger to push through the clogged drain and get the water draining again."

Fifth floor resident assistant Eric McCandless, a junior from Harmony, Pa., reported the problem. He noted water had come back through a bathroom floor drain and run under the door into the hallway and down the stairwell.

By the time the water stopped, the lobby was flooded as well. Darryl Bridges, Barnes-Campbell Hall director, said he knows the students were inconvenienced but there was no way to prepare for such an incident.

"We think Facilities Management did a good job in getting down here," Bridges said. "They were trying to meet the students' needs. We regret the inconvenience for everyone."

Laughter, prayers & upset stomachs

There were 34 smiles and upset stomachs under the bright lights of Van Meter Hall this weekend. Western was host to 34 high school seniors from across the state competing in the Kentucky Junior Miss Program. Judging began Friday night as the girls competed in presence/composure, fitness and creative/performing arts categories. Cash prizes were awarded to eight winners in each category during the three days of competition. Scholastic achievement and a judges' interview also were factors considered in the selection of finalists. On Sunday afternoon, Melanie Parrish of Frankfort became the new Kentucky Junior Miss. Parrish will compete in the America's Junior Miss Program in Mobile, Ala., in June. Bowling Green has hosted the Junior Miss Program since 1980. One of the best known winners is ABC newswoman Diane Sawyer of Louisville, the 1963 National Junior Miss.

Former student killed Saturday

A former Western student was killed last Saturday when a car rear ended the car in which she was riding, setting it ablaze.

Brandie Phegley, of Owensboro, was killed when the 1988 Ford Mustang she and two friends were in was rear-ended at about 3 a.m. while stalled at the Hartford Toll Plaza on the Green River Parkway, according to the Kentucky State Police.

Phegley attended Western for the 1991-92 year and then transferred to Owensboro Community College. Ronald Millay, also of Owensboro, was in the car when it stalled. He had gotten out to push the car with the help of the tollbooth operator when a Cadillac ran the tollbooth and hit the back of the Mustang, causing it to catch on fire.

Millay and the tollbooth operator jumped out of the way and weren't seriously injured in the accident.

The other two people in the car, Stacy Clouse and Ann Ashworth, were also killed. Both women were from Owensboro.

Charges haven't been filed against Lynn Fredell and Robert McCravy, both of Beaver Dam, who were in the Cadillac. Each has claimed the other was driving.

A memorial service will be at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at James H. Davis Funeral Home, 3009 Fredrica St. Visitation is after noon on Wednesday.

♦ Students' films, videos sought

Student filmmakers, your time has come. The Living Arts and Science Center in Lexington is accepting submissions for its "Hot Shots" film festival, which is for students.

Films and videos must have been made by students who were 21 or younger when the piece was completed, which has to have been after Sept. 21, 1991. The creative content must have come from the student, but technical assistance from teachers is permitted.

Acceptable formats include: 16 mm film, three-fourths-inch, VHS, Super VHS, 8 mm and Hi-8 mm. A combination of slides and audio tape is also permitted. The length should be under 15 minutes.

Entry forms are available through the center, and a $4 entry fee per work is required.

Mail entries to: Heather Lyons, Living Arts and Science Center, 362 Martin Luther King Blvd., Lexington, Ky., 40508. For more information, call (606) 255-2284.

be offered at every university. Ramsey said the formula funding would change the way colleges are funded for the better because it would focus more attention on the quality of courses, rather than basing funding on enrollment and cost per credit hour. That was the former policy, which started in the early '80s. "What was adopted was more of a bureaucratic list, easier to measure things," Meredith said,

"but not necessarily all of the key quality items." Though cutting 30 degree programs, or almost 20 percent of the programs at Western, may seem severe, CHE Director of Communications Norm Snider said it is a necessary measure. "It's teaching us to be more responsible to the marketplace." "It's not effective or efficient to waste funds or facilities that could be used elsewhere," he said. Meredith said he does not believe cutting these programs will hurt Western or other Kentucky universities because the chosen programs were not producing many majors or graduates. Robert Haynes, vice president for Academic Affairs, said Western can reallocate the money saved and put it back into the remaining programs. But Snyder said it is too early to tell how much money the recommendation will save. "By cutting 14 percent of the courses doesn't mean you'll be cutting 14 percent of the costs," he said. Cecile Garmon, assistant vice president for Finance and Administration and HERC staff person, also said it will be hard to estimate how much money will be saved. "Eliminating a degree program is not the equivalent of eliminating the course work," she said. This is because the courses under the cut programs will not be eliminated since they are minors or supportive courses for other degrees, she said. "Since the streamlining task first began in August, HERC had to hustle to meet the Dec. 21 deadline for its final report to Jones. "Given the constraints involved, I think the commission did as well as it could do," Meredith said. "The work of the commission needed to be done," he said. "It was timely, but I'm glad it's over."

presidents, board of regents chairs and state government officials, was formed by Jones in August. Jones formed the commission Aug. 10 to look at ways the state universities and community colleges could become more efficient. Efficiency is needed since the state is experiencing a budget shortfall, and the higher education budget has suffered past budget cuts. Jones specifically asked the commission to focus on specialization, quality, performance, cooperation and controlling expenditures. In his charge to the commission, the governor asked that programs not be duplicated at more than four universities, except for core programs, such as foreign languages, biology, math and history.

State-funding changes

HERC also recommended changing the way universities are funded by the state. These recommendations would link state funding to university performance. Six performance funding measures were identified: persistence of students, student outcomes, quality of instructional programs, quality of research/service programs and campus management. Each of the six categories must be weighted 10 to 30 points for a combined total of 100 points. Each school proposed how much weight each of the measures would carry for its state funding. For example, Western allotted 10 of its 100 points on the performance funding scale to persistence of students. Persistence means how many students graduate or transfer in a set amount of time. Within each of the performance funding categories, each school set standards by which to be measured. Under the persistence of students category, Western allotted two of the 10 points to persistence of black first-time, full-time freshmen. Now that Western has decided how it wants its performance to be reviewed, it must set specific goals within these categories that it must meet to receive the full funding. The goals have not been developed yet, Haynes said. Nobody knows who will determine if each university meets its goals in order to receive full funding. "We haven't gone into that depth of detail," said Norm Snider, Council on Higher Education director of communications. The CHE, which oversees the state's higher education system, will probably review the universities' performances, he said.

♦ Our view/editorials

New year, new goals

Freedom of speech and hope of a better tomorrow. As aspiring journalists, we at the Herald adamantly believe in both. With each editorial, each cartoon and each story, our only goal is to do a little good. Along the way, however, it's easy for us and our readers to lose sight of why we're really here. For you to better understand our editorials, it is important to understand the editorial process. That's why we think you should know:

- ♦ Each editorial is written to stimulate thought and debate. We are not trying to tell people what to think, but merely trying to stimulate them to think.

- ♦ We are not trying to be liberal or conservative — just concerned students voicing our thoughts.

- ♦ Our editorial positions are determined by the 15 members of our editorial board. Neither "the university" nor anyone outside it has any say in what is written.

- ♦ Most importantly, the paper belongs to its readers. That's why space is allotted in the Editor's Hotline and Letters to the Editor for others to voice their opinions.

As the year progresses, we hope others will share our hopes that:

- ♦ There will be greater opportunities to further our educations, especially for those who have yet to come to college.

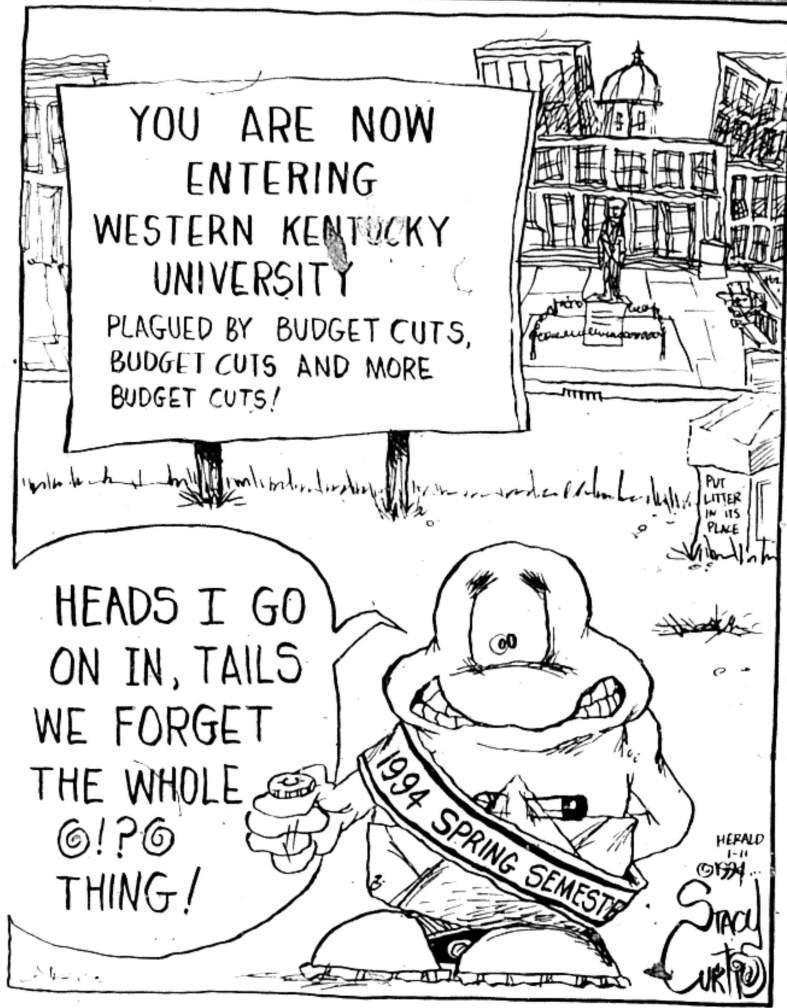

- ♦ Western's athletic department will continue to become more student oriented. The more convenient ticket lines in Downing University Center are a good start.

- ♦ Western will maintain the quality of education that brought us here. The university's strong programs should be strengthened and the weak ones should be phased out. Kentucky's universities must realize that each institution cannot be everything to everybody. More budget cuts from the state would only hurt.

- ♦ Students and administrators will learn to work together. Just talking to one another would be a big improvement. Let's not be afraid to voice our opinions.

- ♦ People will take more pride in the campus, whether it's by picking up a piece of trash or waving your red towels.

Let's show everyone the spirit does indeed make the master.

Philosophy

The Opinion page is for the expression of ideas, both yours and ours.

Ours take the form of editorials and columns.

Your opinions can be expressed in letters to the editor. Letters to the editor can be submitted to the Herald office at Garrett Conference Center, Room 109, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Writers are generally limited to two letters per semester. Letters must be typed or neatly written, with the writer's name, hometown, phone number and grade classification or job title. Letters submitted should be less than 250 words in length. The Herald reserves the right to edit letters for style and length.

Because of space limitations we can't promise every letter will appear. Timely letters and those submitted first will be given priority.

The deadline for letters is 4 p.m. Sunday for Tuesday's paper and 4 p.m. Tuesday for Thursday's paper.

Summer jobs for students available

I would like to take this opportunity to make the students of Western aware of the summer jobs available at the Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch in Gilbertsville.

The Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch is a summer youth camp for needy children throughout the state. We are a non-profit youth camp serving children between the ages of 8 and 11 from low-income families. There is no charge to the children attending and we are supported by an honorary membership program and voluntary contributions from the fine citizens across the state. The ranch is sponsored by the sheriffs in Kentucky and has been in operation since 1977.

We are looking for responsible young men and women to fill counselor positions for the 1994 summer camp session. Applicants from all backgrounds will be considered, however, those with majors or minors in social services, education and recreational fields are best suited for this work. Specialists in nature, arts and crafts and sports are needed as well as general counselors and lifeguards.

The camp operates 10 weeks (May 31-Aug. 5) which includes one week of training. Anyone interested in obtaining an application can call or write to the ranch at P.O. Box 57, Gilbertsville, Ky. 42044. The phone number is (502) 362-8660. Also, representatives of the ranch will be available during camp days or career days at various colleges and universities with detailed information pertaining to counselor positions and responsibilities.

A guest for Black History month and a list of tournaments are part of the University Center Board's agenda for this semester. UCB has scheduled Bobby Seale to speak at Downing University Center on Monday, Feb. 21 at 7 p.m.

Seale was a founding member of the Black Panthers, a political organization established in California during the '60s. Seale will speak on the social and political reaction to the organization.

UCB has also scheduled the following tournaments to be held at 7 p.m. on the 4th floor of DUC: Jan. 12, poker; Jan. 18, eight ball billiards; Jan. 25, spades card game; Feb. 16, bowling; March 2, ping pong; April 6, eight ball billiards; and April 19, ping pong. Students who plan to partici-semester." UCB is also trying to schedule other events such as a Drivin'N-

Cryin' concert for February, but the plan is tentative, Beach said.

The group is trying to schedule a lecturer from the Jacques Cousteau Society and is working with the Student Health Center to try to bring the AIDS Quilt to Western, Beach said.

For late April, UCB may plan a Splash Bash, a traditional program held on DUC south lawn with a live band, games and food, Beach said.

These events are planned by four committees. Each committee writes a proposal to be approved by the executive UCB board, which is made up of students, faculty, and administrators, said Scott Taylor, director of student activities and organizations.

"UCB is a diverse group of folks who have an ear for what the student body would like to have," Beach said.

★ HARLEM GLOBETROTTERS ★

The world's reigning "Clown Princes" of the court dazzled the hometown Diddle crowd Friday night

In a display of dexterity and ball handling, Globetrotter Hollywood Brown took a break in the game to show off his dribbling skills.

After the Harlem Globetrotters defeated the Washington Generals, hundreds of young fans lined up to get basketballs and programs signed. Globetrotter Sterling Forbes was surrounded by kids requesting his autograph.

The world-renowned Harlem Globetrotters continued their winning streak over the Washington Generals in a game Friday night at Diddle Arena. For more than 60 years the Globetrotters have been thrilling audiences in 112 countries while serving as role models for children. Performing to the familiar tune of "Sweet Georgia Brown" the Globetrotters dribbled and spun the basketball to the delight of many children. Known for their slam dunks and their trademark ball-handling, the Globetrotters had no problem living up to their reputation as the "Magicians of Basketball."

Thrift stores have goodwill this season

By Don Edwards

This Christmas Bowling Green residents opened their homes to a cheerful giver Santa Claus* Well, almost.

Over the holiday, Virginia Atkins, a Bowling Green resident, recently found out what she could do with some unused furniture.

Rather than throwing the furniture away, she followed the advice of a friend and called Goodwill.

Atkins wasn't alone. Both of the thrift stores operated by Goodwill Industries of Kentucky reported increases in donations and patronage during the Christmas holiday.

Andy Miller, a production clerk at Goodwill, said that the increased donations were probably encouraged by the spirit of giving associated with the Christmas holiday.

Thrift stores operated by the Salvation Army, St. Vincent DePaul and H.O.T.E.L. INC., also reported increased donations and patronage over the holiday.

Solomon's Cellar, a clothing program of H.O.T.E.L. INC., operates differently than other Bowling Green thrift stores.

"We don't rely very much on clothing donations," said Mary Ann Barnes, store coordinator. Barnes said that in December the organization accepted monetary donations and patronage at its thrift store, but did not solicit sizable clothing donations.

"We are just very selective about the clothes we sell," she said.

All of the thrift stores in Bowling Green are operated by non-profit organizations to provide the community with clothing, housewares, and furniture at affordable prices.

Jenny Murtz, a senior from Chicago, has shopped in several of the thrift stores and said she likes the atmosphere.

"You aren't pressed to buy anything and the people there are very casual," she said.

Emily Roberts, a senior from Heidelberg, Germany, said that she likes the variety offered by the thrift stores.

"You can sometimes find coats that have only been worn once for a good price," she said.

Buddy Cazez, a production clerk at Goodwill, said the stores attracted more students and people from neighboring counties over the holidays.

"We've had people in here from as far out as Harlan county," Cazez said.

Collections Manager Joe Johnson, who oversees pick-ups for Goodwill, said that the holiday also brought more truck donations in Bowling Green. These donations included toys and houseware items.

"We're waiting right now on approval for a mobile phone in the truck," Johnson said.

Clarkson junior Buddy Cazez shoots for three at the Goodwill store on the By-Pass. Cazez is separating clothes that have been given to the center. This shoe was rejected because it was not good enough to sell.

By acquiring the phone, he said more frequent pick-ups could be arranged.

Johnson said that even campus pick-ups could be arranged if the donations are significant.

Lou-Anne Runner, a production clerk at Goodwill, said that thrift stores might see more donations around Christmas, but asks for donations year round. She said Goodwill relies as much on student donations as on other sources.

"It's the best recycling place in town," Runner said.

Resolutions may change some students' lives

By TAMMY L. HARRINS

From saving money to drinking less, students' 1994 New Year's resolutions haven't changed much from other years.

But this year some students said they made resolutions they will keep.

Taylor Cousens, a Nashville sophomore, has made several resolutions including to grow spiritually, to maintain her GPA, and to save enough money to buy a car.

"I've put my life into perspective and know where I'm going with my life," she said.

Cousens said a resolution is a change you make in your life that will last a lifetime.

She said some people make resolutions but are not able to keep them because the resolutions they make are unrealistic, and they have no plan to follow them through, she said.

Some students said they made resolutions this year concerning their safety.

Kerry Dougan, a freshman from Chrisney, Ind., said his resolution is to drink less alcohol.

Karen Jones, a cashier in the College Heights Bookstore, said she considered her family first when making her resolution.

She said she wants to make more money this year.

"When you have kids," she said, "that's kind of the top priority."

Although New Year's resolutions are a popular tradition, some students chose not to make any.

Tim Copas, a freshman from Indianapolis, Ind., said he didn't have anything he wanted to change this year. In fact, he said he never thinks about making New Year's resolutions because they almost always get broken.

Copas said people make resolutions to change their habits, but many people don't keep them for more than a few weeks because they lose their willpower.

Bowling Green sophomore Bryan Ayars didn't make any resolutions this year either. In past years he made resolutions concerning his weight, exercise programs, and study habits, but like many other people, he said he doesn't take them seriously and soon breaks them.

Some people said they start thinking about resolutions in early December, and others at Christmas, but according to Glasgow freshman Melissa Lahrs, some wait until New Year's Eve.

"Right before midnight," she said.

Ayars said those people are not serious about their resolutions.

"If they were," he said, "they would not wait until the first of the year to make them."

Christmas not a time of joy for everyone

◆ Some students and professors are glad to be back at school after the problems they had over the holiday

By Bill Kemp

Christmas is usually a time for family members to come together and share with one another. But some had holidays that didn't turn out quite as planned. Louisville freshman Jenna Myers said her dog usually drags everybody's shoes around and chews them up.

So this Christmas, she and her family thought that they had found a solution.

"We got him a pair of his own shoes for Christmas, but he won't touch them," she said.

But Myers was not the only person to have a rough Christmas.

Journalism Professor James

Highland said he ordinarily spends Christmas at his mother-in-law's house. This Christmas was supposed to be no different.

But the morning they were planning to go, his wife had a severe asthma attack and learned that she had pneumonia. Highland said it turned out to be very serious, and she spent the next several days in the hospital.

Highland said that after his wife was released from the hospital, he woke up with the flu.

"We came back to school to get better," he said. "We've never been so glad to come back to school."

Next year, they intend to make up for this Christmas by taking their family to Florida.

"I didn't die," he said, "so that was the high point of this Christmas."

Bowling Green senior Martina Gibson said she saw a holiday scheme backfire this Christmas.

She said her relatives visited for the holidays, and her husband, Phil, dressed up as Santa Claus for the children. Gibson said she and her husband asked the older children to play along because their nephew still believes in Santa, but Phil got an unintended response from the child.

"His nephew was terrified," Gibson and her husband had to let their nephew know who "Santa" really was.

Next Christmas, Gibson said she will be prepared

SGA book swap tops spring agenda

By Tonya Root

The new semester brings new projects and programs for the Student Government Association.

"We got everything accomplished that we wanted to last semester," said Scott Sively, SGA administrative vice president.

SGA will concentrate on improving Western for the fall semester with this semester's activities, Sively, a junior from Hendersonville, Tenn., said.

SGA president Donald Smith said one such program is the book exchange. Students will use a large bulletin board to exchange books between one another. The bulletin board will be placed in Downing University Center this semester.

Smith, an Elizabethtown senior, said this will help students cut some of the high prices they face at the bookstore.

Instead of the regular meeting today, SGA is planning an executive retreat to map out what they will do this semester in more detail, Smith said.

SGA will also be accepting applications for a non-tradition al representative, senior class president, senior class vice-president, three senior representatives, a junior representative, and a representative-at-large. Those applications are due Friday, Jan. 21.

Another program is the "President For A Day" program on Jan. 26. A student and President Thomas Meredith change places for a day.

A cultural diversity program in March will emphasize the diversity of campus and include a well-known speaker. The speaker hasn't been decided yet, Smith said.

Memorial trees will be placed around campus by SGA for students who have died since Aug. 1.

SGA will also set up a phone list for students who want advice in choosing which classes and teachers to take. For instance, students interested in a history class can call a history major for advice.

Smith also said a minority scholarships proposal, where at least four ethnic minority scholarships will be provided by Western, is still being considered by admissions.

Dropping by registrar adds up to headaches

By Tommy Bates

With hope of altering their schedules, students socialized and mingled around all three terminals on the second floor of Wetherby Administration Building. Lines were long yesterday for students wanting to drop or add classes.

Registrar Freida Eggleton said her office makes about 11,000 transactions during the six-day drop/add period.

"Eventually, 60 percent of the students will either drop or add a class," Eggleton said. "They

(the Registrar's office) took the drop cards free of charge through Dec. 15 of last year. It costs $2 to drop or add each class until Jan. 18.

Bowling Green senior Greg Harris said he thought the fee was "stupid."

"I believe the university gets enough money through tuition," he said. He also said students should be able to drop or add a class through their departments.

Dennis Minnis, a sophomore from Cox's Creek, agreed.

"I think there should be a quicker, easier way," he said.

BRRR: Cold temps 'typical for mid-South' in January

By Jerry Daniels Jr.

Snow and ice covered some roadways leading to Bowling Green last weekend, making it difficult for drivers to see what side of the road they were on.

"I had to drive like 30 to 45 (miles per hour) tops," said Mitch Sims, a senior from Evansville, Ind., who drove down Green River Parkway on his way back to school.

Art McFadden, a senior from East Brunswick, N.J., worked with the Emergency Medical Services in his hometown.

He said from early last Thursday morning until Friday evening the entire town was declared in a state of emergency. East Brunswick and other parts of the Northeast received three to 10 inches of snow and also freezing rain.

This made the roads difficult to travel on as McFadden's crew went out on their missions. Instead of driving the usual 80 miles per hour, they drove about half that amount to every site, he said.

But such weather patterns aren't unusual this time of year, said Louis Trapasso, director of the College Heights Weather Station.

Trapasso said January is the coldest month of the year for Kentucky, which explains the state's recent weather patterns.

Last Friday night, after midnight, the temperature fell to a low of 11 degrees.

"That's rather cold and uncomfortable," Trapasso said, "typical for the mid-South."

Bowling Green Junior Larry Brown remembered almost having a car accident after skidding on Covington Avenue earlier that day.

"I did a couple of 360's," he said, twirling one index finger around and laughing about the experience.

When the temperature gets cold enough and a winter storm comes through the region, rain turns to ice, Trapasso said.

The average maximum temperature is 40 degrees with the minimum temperature 27 degrees.

Between today and tomorrow the temperature highs are expected to be in the mid 40s with the lows in the mid 30s.

These temperatures are a bit warmer than the last several days or so, Trapasso said.

Because of warmer temperatures the chance of rain will increase to 70 percent with the possibility of rain turning to snow later that day.

Thursday and Friday the temperature and humidity will drop bringing cold and dry weather conditions.

This week's weather patterns, Trapasso said, are similar to those which preceded the conditions last weekend. However, whether or not icy roads can be expected for beyond Friday is difficult to predict.

Dana Johnson/Herald

Judy Murrell laughs at her Subway co-worker, Lisa Webb, as they brush the snow and ice off their cars after work last Friday. "We shouldn't have to get off work and do this," Murrell said jokingly. The cold temperatures caused dangerous road conditions for drivers Friday.

KNOCK, KNOCK: It's Girl Scout cookie time

HERALD STAFF REPORT

This year, there's a new addition to the Girl Scout cookie family.

The new Juliettes are a combination of caramel and pecans covered with a chocolate fudge coating.

Along with popular favorites such as Thin Mints, Samoa's and four other varieties, Juliettes can be ordered from any Kentuckiana Girl Scout.

Girl Scouts will be knocking on doors Jan. 14-30 to take cookie orders. This year, Girl Scout cookies are $2.50 per box.

Cookie deliveries and booth sales will be March 4-20.

Cookie sales help the Girl Scouts in this area to develop responsibility, manage money and set goals.

Funds raised through the sales finance troop programs, trips and supplies.

For more information contact the Girl Scouts Kentuckiana Council at 781-1135.

Faculty Senate meets next week

◆ Chairman Robert Dietle said faculty will focus attention on campus problems rather than budget cuts

By Sherry I. Wilson

With the first Faculty Senate meeting scheduled for Jan. 20, Chairman Robert Dietle said more attention will be focused this semester on individual problems here at Western than on problems surrounding cutbacks in higher education in Frankfort.

Dietle said last semester the faculty senate focused much of its attention on the Higher Education Review Commission, a governor-appointed commission whose focus was on streamlining higher education.

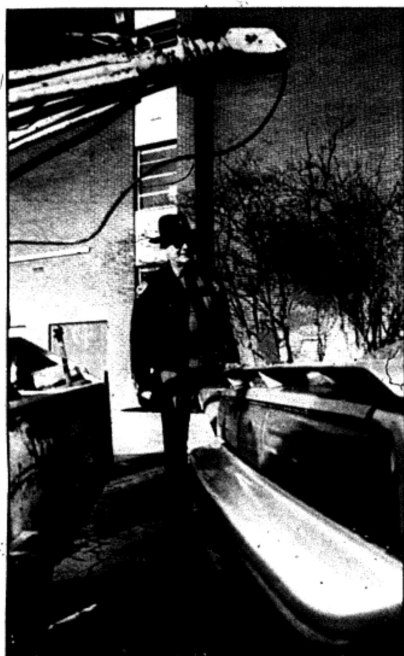

"There are a lot of important decisions that have been forced to the backburner because of HERC," Dietle said.

Dietle, a history professor, said now that HERC is in the hands of the state representatives, the Faculty Senate can look at problems at Western as an individual university.

At the upcoming senate meeting, members will discuss Western XXI, a plan for university improvement, and appointments to the Academic Disciplinary Committee, Dietle said.

"Now that the scramble over HERC is over, it's going to be back to the budget here at Western," Dietle said.

Take it away: Campus police Officer Larry Pearl watches as a student's car is towed Sunday. The car was in a 15-minute parking spot in McCormack lot for more than four hours. Pearl kept traffic moving in the lot as students moved into their dorms, gave tickets and called Basham's Wrecker Service only as a last resort. Pearl said that after students see a car being towed, "you'll be surprised how fast word will get through the dorms."

Some staff members want representation on board

BY STEPHANIE BROADBENT

Western has not acted on efforts at Murray State University and Morehead State University to get a staff regent.

The Staff Congresses at Murray and Morehead are asking their legislators to put a staff member on all eight state universities' Board of Regents.

Although no action has been taken at Western to lobby for the additional regent, the Staff Advisory Council agreed at its Dec. 16 meeting to find out more about the proposal.

They have asked the participants at Murray and Morehead to send them information about the proposal and plan to follow the developments, members said at the meeting.

"It seems to be a good thing, but we need to know more about it," said council member Pat Widmann.

Legislation to create a staff regent position will be introduced into the state legislature by State Rep. Freed Curd of Murray and Sen. Walter Blevins of Morehead, Debbie Wagoner, a Murray staff congress member, said.

Currently Western has 12 regents, 10 of whom are appointed by the governor. The other two are elected — one is the Student Government Association president, and one is the faculty regent.

But because the staff at Western makes up over 40 percent of the employees, some staff members think it is only fair that they have a regent too.

"We need a voice," said Facilities Management worker Judy Craft, a member of the Staff Advisory Council.

"There's a faculty regent to represent the faculty and a student regent to represent students," she said. "It only stands to reason that we have a staff regent to be concerned with the staff."

Craft said staff workers should have more input about their pay increases and issues concerning their jobs. She thinks that could be accomplished by putting a staff member on the board.

"Many staff workers are upset that the faculty received much higher pay raises than the staff and think Faculty Regent Ray Mendel puts the faculty's concerns ahead of the staff's," she said.

"We're at the bottom of the barrel," Craft said. "Whatever is left over is what we get and if there's nothing left over that's what we get — nothing."

Craft thinks having a staff regent would help the morale of the workers and make them feel more like a part of the university.

She called her legislator and told him she wanted him to support the proposal to add a staff regent. She said she hopes other staff workers will do the same.

AT HOME: Some students say living with mom and dad isn't too bad

BY CATHY BRAUTIGAM

The typical college student is often portrayed as someone who lives on campus or in an apartment with several roommates.

But some students choose to live with their families for much of their college career.

Bowling Green freshman Angela Barnett lives at home with her parents and two younger brothers. Though she has lived on campus before, she moved back home because of money problems.

Barnett said she will miss her friends in the dorm but that living on campus didn't really provide her with any special opportunities.

"I didn't find any extracurricular activities for independent students who are not involved in the Greek system," she said.

Although it's less of a financial burden to live at home, Barnett has a job and plans to move out soon.

Financial problems are not the only reason students live at home.

Bowling Green freshman Jeff Hills said he can't live in the dorms because he is a part-time student. Since he can't afford to move out on his own, he stays at home with his parents.

Hills said sometimes he doesn't have a lot of privacy because his parents want to know where he is going and what he is doing.

He said he misses not living on or near campus because he can't be involved in campus-wide activities.

"I don't go to Preston as much as I would like to because it's a hassle to drive up there and try to find parking," he said.

But, Hills said living at home isn't all bad. It makes going to school easier not only financially, but parents encourage good study habits.

Although many students prefer to live with mom and dad, not all students who live at home do it by choice.

Bowling Green sophomore Jennifer Daniels said she moved in with her parents out of necessity. "I had to when I separated from my husband," she said. "I had nowhere else to go."

Daniels said she finds it more difficult to live at home and go to school.

"If I want to study in the library, use the computer lab, or spend time with my friends, I can't because I have to go home," Daniels said. "I would much rather live alone because when I live under their roof I have to live by their rules. It's like an extended high school period because my freedom is limited."

Daniels works part time, pays for food and babysitting for her son, and cleans her parents' house as a form of rent. She plans to move out when her sister starts college because they plan to room together.

Bowling Green junior Karla Richey said she doesn't mind living at home and she is in no hurry to move out. "I'm staying right here until I can afford to move out and live comfortably," she said.

Students don't gamble on lottery tickets

BY LISA TOLLIVER

Each year the Kentucky lottery brings out new games with jackpots soaring into the millions. But many Western students said they do not take advantage of this get-rich-quick scheme.

Shannon Brown, a Minit Mart employee, said that only a small amount of Western students buy lottery tickets.

"The largest percentage of lottery customers are 30 to 40 years old," she said.
But Laurie Brooks, a Jr. Food

Store employee, said 10 to 15 percent of her lottery customers are Western students.

Brooks said the scratch off, instant win tickets are the most popular, and other games like the Lotto Kentucky and Powerball, which required customers to pick their own numbers, are mostly bought when the jackpot is worth millions.

Elizabethtown senior Chris Brady said he isn't a regular lottery customer, but he did buy a ticket when the jackpot got up to $20 million.

Although some students try their luck at the big money games, Louisville sophomore Nicole Mills said she sticks to the scratch off tickets.

"It's just right there when you go to pay for your gas," she explained.

While some people spend hundreds of dollars on the lottery, hoping for quick millions, Mills said she would never do that.

"I'll buy one and hope I win enough to pay for my gas but that's all," she said.

But unlike Mills, there are some who will keep buying tickets until they lose.

"I always go too far and wind up losing money," said Dixon senior Morgan McKinley.

While McKinley said he has his own method for playing, Owensboro senior Heather Beach said she puts her psychology major to use to rationalize playing the lottery.

"I only buy tickets when my luck is really bad," she said. "I figure since my luck is so bad I have to win. The last time I did that I actually won $5."

But winning isn't what Tamika McMillian, a Nashville sophomore, said she thinks will happen to her.

"My luck just isn't that good and I think it's just a waste of money," she said.

McMillian said the people who do play the lottery a lot must have a reason.

"If you feel lucky about something, I say go for it," she said.

AU NATUREL: Cruelty-free body care products gaining popularity

BY TRACY GRIMES

Fur coats, polyesters and bee-hive hairdos are out. So, what is in? Natural products may be the topic of the '90s.

"Natural products are products that are produced without the use of artificial preservatives and/or products without synthetic ingredients but are naturally derived," said Ilene Hertzfeld, owner of Whole Earth Grocery, 930 Broadway.

"A good indicator of whether a product is natural is the coloring," she said. "Bright, hot colors are fairly good indicators that a product contains synthetic ingredients."

Hertzfeld said there is some confusion about natural products and cruelty-free products, not tested on animals. "Cruelty-free" does not mean that the product does not contain ingredients from animal derivatives.

"One reason people choose to use natural body care products is because the skin is the largest eliminative organ of the body."

"What you put on the skin goes into the body."

— Ilene Hertzfeld

Owner, Whole Earth Grocery

Hertzfeld said. "What you put on the skin goes into the body."

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals operates under the principle that animals are not ours to eat, wear, experiment on, or use for entertainment. PETA launched a campaign to urge people to boycott L'Oreal products. PETA claims that L'Oreal does unnecessary testing on animals. Although ethical reasons play a large role in some students' decisions to use natural products, others use them for different reasons.

"I use natural body lotion because my skin is sensitive and I don't have an allergic reaction to it," Murray graduate student Mistyanna Holcomb said.

Angelia Harper, owner of Soft-Touch Center for Clinical Electrolysis, 1725 Ashley Circle, has her own line of natural body care products.

Harper's products avoid unnatural products such as mineral oil or petrolatum, synthetic dyes and fragrances.

Some students reading the labels on these products decide to test them, though they don't know if they're worth the extra cash.

"I try to use natural products because they are supposed to be better for you," Portland, Tenn. senior Renee Shaw said, "but I don't know if they measure up to their claims."

Domino's drops 30-minute delivery policy after lawsuit

BY SHERRI OSBORNE

On Dec. 21, Domino's Pizza, Inc. President Thomas Monaghan announced his decision to stop the company's 30-minute delivery guarantee as a result of a $78 million law suit.

A St. Louis woman who suffered head and spine injuries was awarded the money in mid-December after a Domino's delivery driver ran a red light and hit her car. Domino's plans to appeal the jury's decision.

Vine Grove sophomore Pam Cleveland said she thinks ending the 30-minute guarantee is a good idea.

"If it prevents an accident, I don't care to wait," she said.

Joseph Seagle, owner of 20 Domino's chains, including the three in Bowling Green, was unavailable for comment.

"Business is better than ever," said Chad Day, Seagle's Marketing Director. "It hasn't affected us in any way."

Lisa Garrett, assistant manager of Domino's at 1383 Center St.

said all Domino's delivery drivers have been instructed not to state their opinions to avoid contradiction. She had no other comment.

Domino's focus has now turned to customer satisfaction, said Day. "The Product Satisfaction Guarantee," Domino's new policy, states, "If for any reason you are dissatisfied with your Domino's Pizza dining experience, we will re-make your pizza or refund your money."

However, Day said Domino's stores in this area won't refund your money, but they will remake the pizza.

White Mills Junior Steven Moore said he thinks the new policy is better.

"It probably will prevent a lot of accidents," he said. "If the product is good, the wait will be worth it."

Morgantown freshman Randy Sublett said he agrees.

"I think it's a good idea," he said. "They drive too fast. There's too many accidents involved."

Cousins clash as Toppers win, 83-78

BY JASON FRANKS

What at first looked like a Hilltopper rout turned into the story of two cousins in last night's game against Arkansas-Little Rock.

After taking a 26-7 lead in the game's first 12 minutes, the Toppers (6-5 overall and 3-1 in the Sun Belt Conference) held on for an 83-78 win in Diddle Arena, despite the efforts of the Trojans' Derrick Hall, first cousin of Western's junior center Darius Hall.

Held scoreless in the first half, Derrick Hall nailed three three-pointers in the game's final eight minutes, the last of which brought the Trojans (6-3, 1-2) within 74-68 with 2:23 remaining in the game.

But the late run was not enough for the Trojans as the Toppers won the game at the free throw line, scoring 17 of their last 27 points from the charity stripe.

"He's a great player," Darius said about his cousin. "We had to shut him down the whole game, and we couldn't in the second half."

Derrick came into the game as the Sun Belt Conference's fourth-leading scorer at 19.8 points per game, but was held to 13 last night.

Darius won the battle of the two cousins from Detroit, leading his team with 17 points and nine rebounds.

"He had a great 30 minutes, and he had a horrible last 10 minutes," Hilltopper Coach Ralph Willard said about his starting center. "I told him in the locker room after the game that he needs to come out and play like that for an entire forty minutes."

Darius was not the only Topper to fall short of playing a complete forty minutes. With nearly 10 minutes remaining, the Toppers still held a fifteen point advantage, due in most part to the early run.

But from that point on, the Trojans found the shooting that had eluded them for the first three-quarters of the game. Shooting a frigid 28.6 percent from the field in the first half, the Trojans shot a respectable 50 percent in the second half, behind Hall and guard Malik Dixon.

The two combined to nail six of nine three-point attempts in the second half, sparking the Trojans comeback.

"It was kind of a nothing to lose situation then," Trojan Coach Jim Platt said. "I think we were shooting kind of unconsciously at that point. But I don't think that the game was as close as the final score indicated."

Willard saw it differently.

"For the last ten minutes of the game we were playing not to lose, instead of to win," he said. "We always pride ourselves on going for the jugular, and tonight we didn't do that."

For the first part of the game at least, it looked like the Toppers would have the Trojans bleeding for the entire game.

The Toppers led 13-0 and then 16-1 in the game's first six minutes behind sophomore guard Chris Robinson's seven points and Hall's six points.

A 7-2 run before the half brought the visitors to within 34-23 at halftime.

The Toppers then pushed the lead back out to 17 in the middle of the second half, before the Trojans were able to make their last run.

"I thought we looked like Western Kentucky again," Willard said. "We're learning how to win right now, and once we do that we're going to be very good."

Citing "personal reasons," guard/forward Brad Cirino quit the Hilltopper basketball team on Jan. 6.

FATIGUE: Hard work could pay off

BY P. ALAN BERNHARDY

While most students were ringing in the New Year with festive parties and resolutions, Coach Bill Powell's swim team (6-1) ventured to Florida for a training session and to buy iguanas.

While practicing for four hours a day and seeing the sights, a lot of the swimmers bought iguanas as pets.

"You should have seen the van on the way home," Powell said. "It looked like a zoo with all the iguanas."

After the team's first defeat of the season against Ball State 133-110 before final exams, it was pushed hard in Florida with two daily practices.

"We had such a great workout down there," Powell said, "but we really wore ourselves out. I think once we get over the fatigue, it will pay off for us."

Competition was scheduled in Florida, but the outdoor meet was rained out the first day.

They tried it again the next day, but got through only two events before rain cancelled the meet for good.

Powell was concerned that his swimmers would not get in the water over the break, slowing down their training schedule.

"A lot of them didn't," he said. "It really didn't affect us that much. The only thing was I wanted to come into that first practice in Florida with a bang, but we had to use a little time getting back to where we were."

The team detoured to Statesboro, Ga., where it picked up its first victory of the new year by defeating host Georgia Southern 105-91.

First place finishers for Western at Georgia Southern were freshman Scott Cummins in the 1000-yd and 200-yd freestyle, senior Ben Graves in the 50-yd freestyle, freshman Sean O'Shea in the 200-yd freestyle and freshman Andrew MacCallum in the 200-yd breast stroke.

Female runners most likely to have injuries

BY KAREN D. BROWN

Owenton freshman Christina Brown has been running cross country since she was in sixth grade and had never experienced a serious injury.

Michelle Murphy

That changed this season. Brown is rehabilitating from a stress fracture in her leg. She thinks the increased demands of collegiate competition are the cause of her injury.

"When I came to college I increased mileage and began running on a harder surface," Brown said. "I think it all played a part in my injury."

A study on sports injuries by Dr. Stephen G. Rice, director of the Athletic Health Care System at the University of Washington in Seattle, has recently been in the news. Rice's research shows that female cross country runners had a higher rate of injuries than any other sport. Those injuries included tendinitis of the knee, shin splints, ankle sprains and stress fractures.

The study also showed these

Team plays hard, wins big 81-48

BY DENNIS WARNEY

Coach Paul Sanderford said the Lady Toppers took the first step toward improvement in their 81-48 win over Southwestern Louisiana Sunday night.

"The effort was very good," he said. "Everybody played hard, which is what we needed." Going into the game the only thing that was certain for Western (8-4) was that it needed a win in its first Sun Belt Conference game of the season.

After straight losses to Boise State and Tennessee Tech, Sanderford said the team had to have a victory and play hard. He said the team looked like it was playing too hard in the first half, but it didn't bother him. What resulted was 37 deflections, two more than the 35 Sanderford seeks for a whole game. It also resulted in 15 turnovers.

After Southwestern Louisiana staked an 11-6 lead on a three-pointer by Monique Melancon with 15:38 to go in the first half, Veronica Cook answered with a three of her own to help spark a Lady Topper rally.

Western's defense held the Lady Cajuns to two points in 12 minutes in the half as Western went on a 24-2 run. Gwen Doyle grabbed 10 rebounds and scored all of her eight points in the first half to help the Lady Toppers jump out to a 34-17 lead at the break.

Sophomore point guard Missy Jackson said Western played with more control in the second half. "The key was that we played more together as a team," she said. "We hustled a lot more. We played with a little more intensity."

Lady Cajun Coach Dwayne Searle said his team's shooting and Western's strong rebounding resulted in the loss. Southwestern Louisiana shot 30 percent for the game and was out rebounded 54-22.

"It's tough to play a ranked team on their home court," Searle said. "They're going to fight Louisiana Tech for the conference title."

During the break

The Lady Toppers got four-wins over the Christmas break, including three in the San Juan Shootout in Puerto Rico, to raise their record to 7-2 before losing to Boise State (75-71) and Tennessee Tech (69-64).

Western's victories came against Wright State (79-40), InterAmerican University (112-34), DePaul (74-51), and Mississippi (78-62).

Gwen Doyle leads the Lady Toppers in both scoring (13.7) and rebounding (8.9).

In the polls

Western was ranked 13th in the Associated Press poll before the loss against Boise State so it is expected to drop. Sanderford, who votes in the coaches' poll, where Western is 18th, said he hasn't voted for his team all year and doubts he will this week.

Injury update

Junior forward-center Lori Abell missed Sunday's game because of a knee injury she suffered during practice last week and may have to undergo surgery. Sanderford said she could be out about two weeks.

RUNNERS: Training too much not good

Injuries were due mostly to females beginning to run at a younger age.

Athletic trainer Bill Edwards doesn't think the study necessarily applies to Western.

"Over the last two or three years we haven't seen a whole lot of difference," Edwards said.

"The women's injuries were about the same as the men's, but the women have had two more stress fractures than the men."

Cross country and track Coach Curtis Long agrees with the study, but thinks the injuries are not as severe as those associated with contact sports, such as football.

"Cross country runners' injuries are irritation or inflammatory injuries or muscle-related, not requiring surgery," Long said.

Their injuries tend to be chronic and the injury ends once they stop running, Long said. The feet, knees and back are not designed to take the dis-lance.

There is one primary reason for more injuries to runners, Edwards said. "Overuse is the main culprit."

Michelle Murphy, a graduate student from Killavalling White Cross, Ireland, was victim to overtraining when she suffered from tendinitis of the knee.

The injury was the result of running too much on the road and worn-down shoes, Murphy said.

When a runner is having any problems, she is instructed to report to the trainers for evaluation, Edwards said.

If the injury is severe, a referral is made to the team physician. From there the runner follows a daily course of treatment and rehabilitation.

Brown said she thinks some runners don't know the difference between routine soreness and an injury.

"You learn to listen to your body," she said. "If this happens again, I'll know it is time to take a day off."

Two players regain financial aid

BY JEFF NATIONS

Two soccer players who appealed the loss of their scholarships for violating team rules had them reinstated by the scholarship appeals board after their Dec. 13 hearing.

Junior Tim McMullen and sophomore Matt Anderson regained their scholarships for the spring term. Senior Brian Lewis, who also appealed to the board, did not get his scholarship back.

The three, plus junior Rew Woodruff, were kicked off the team for using alcohol in their motel rooms during a road trip to Edinboro, Texas, for the Sun Belt Conference Tournament last November.

Soccer Coach David Holmes dismissed the four players and reduced the scholarship of a

"It was a good learning process for everyone involved," Holmes said. "It demonstrates that a lot of well-established administrators are willing to take the time for this process, which not everybody might think is important, but is certainly important to those young men."

Anderson, Lewis and McMullen could not be reached for comment.

Soccer assistant named

Coach David Holmes has named Joel Harrison as the soccer team's new assistant coach. Harrison comes to the Hill from West Texas A&M in Canyon, Texas, where he was an assistant coach from 1991-93. He has also held head coaching positions at Triton College in Illinois and Broad Ripple High School in Indianapolis.

HAZING IS HUMILIATING AND INHUMAN. IT CANNOT AND WILL NOT BE TOLERATED. ANY QUESTIONS?

There should be no questions as to why Delta Tau Delta stands on the subject of hazing.

No one in the right mind could possibly find anything that is even remotely beneficial in the violation of another's physical well-being or personal dignity.

Verbal abuse, intimidation or threats against the subject and, along with it, doubts about fraternities and their activities.

All Delta Tau Delta chapters find hazing reprehensible. It is the antithesis of brotherhood—a mockery of both our ideals and values, and a complete misrepresentation of what fraternity life is all about.

We have, of course, taken steps to communicate to all Delta chapters that our stand against hazing is firm, and we are not alone. All fraternities have spoken out against hazing and, in fact, we are not alone. All fraternities have taken the same action to eliminate it once and for all.

Every so often, however, hazing occurs in spite of our best efforts and it is that somebody else who is not getting the message.

To those who continue to perpetrate hazing, we can only express our frustration and our outrage.

To those who continue to question where Delta Tau Delta stands on hazing, we have just two words to say: "firmly" and "against."

Super Bowl picture fuzzy

It's one week into the NFL playoffs and time for all of us back-seat driving, second-guessing, Monday-morning quarterbacking, we work-for-free sportswriters to make our predictions. We don't guarantee anything, so don't call your bookie just yet.

With the way the season panned out, it's hard to pick clear favorites to be the two representatives in the Super Bowl, but rest assured, Hammer will be there.

Before their 13-10 overtime win over the New York Giants Jan. 2, the bandwagon favorite Dallas Cowboys were viewed by many as a virtual lock to repeat as Super Bowl champs. But despite losing, the Giants exposed some Dallas weaknesses.

The Dallas defense looked rock-solid one minute and four players short the next. Also, several loose balls took some fortunate bounces for the Cowboys. Unfortunately, breaks don't usually go your way like that when it's late January and you're the defending champs (unless you're playing Buffalo).

The Giants surprised everyone this year, going from 6-10 doormats to serious contenders. The problem is, their offense scores just enough points to win soccer games, not football games. Fortunately Diego Maradona isn't their quarterback and Pete isn't returning kicks, but sometimes I wonder.

On the other hand, they have a roster full of veterans with playoff experience, a tough defense, and they know how to run the ball in cold weather. Just try not to fall asleep watching their games.

For those hoping the San Francisco 49ers are going to tally an unprecedented fifth Super Bowl victory, don't get your hopes up. The Niners aren't nearly the juggernaut they appeared to be earlier in the season. While Steve Young-to-Jerry Rice is one of the most feared combinations in pro football, their defense too often had the look of a sieve rather than a wall.

Chris Irvine
Commentary

Green Bay is the last contender from the NFC and looks like more fodder for the other three heavyweights.

Their quarterback, Brett Favre, has a penchant for throwing the ball to the other team, which usually means they'll be reserving tie times on Super Bowl Sunday.

For the American Football Conference, which has lost ten straight Super Bowls, their best hopes ride on three teams, one that's never been to the Super Bowl (Houston Oilers), one that has lost the last three (Buffalo Bills), and one that is led by quarterback Joe Montana (Kansas City Chiefs), who has won four championships with the Forty Niners.

The Oilers are the NFL's hottest team, winning their last 11 games, and seem strong favorites to go to Atlanta.

The problem is, it's hard to reel off 13 straight wins in the NFL, and that's what it will take for the Oilers to make it to the Super Bowl. Their number may come up before then.

The AFC's participant in the last three Super Bowls, Buffalo, doesn't appear to be the powerhouse it once was. The one thing in its favor is that it plays in the coldest stadium this side of the Arctic Circle.

If the visiting team is lucky, it'll be a balmy 40 below zero with a 50 mph wind. Too bad the Super Bowl's in Atlanta.

Kansas City's fans are hoping Montana can lead them to the Super Bowl. Unfortunately, he's got more miles on his hard '63 Buick and if he gets hit hard enough something might come off.

The AFC's last contender, the Los Angeles Raiders, haven't been good since they left Oakland, period. (1983 doesn't count, they didn't even have an L.A. fan yet.)

After many long hours of careful deliberation (not to mention a few trips to the palm reader), this year's Super Bowl participants will be... drum roll please, the same as last year's — Buffalo and Dallas.

If I turn out to be wrong come Jan. 30, it's obviously a conspiracy by the NFL coaches to make me look like a fool.

Former coaches get Division I jobs

BY JEFF NATIONS

The Christmas season was indeed jolly for some past and present members of Western's football coaching staff.

Doug Mallory, who served as Western's defensive secondary coach and defensive coordinator this past year, accepted a job at Indiana as defensive secondary coach. Indiana is coached by his father, Bill Mallory.

"These are moves that excite me," Coach Jack Harbaugh said. "It's more money. I would think he would double his salary. It's definitely a step up in his career."

Harbaugh said Mallory, who joined the Hilltopper staff in 1960, was largely responsible for improving Western's defense to the 18th-ranked unit in the country.

Former Western Coach Dave Roberts was named offensive coordinator at Notre Dame. Roberts, who headed Western's program from 1984-88, coached at Northeast Louisiana the past five years.

Joe Bugel, a Western alumnus and former assistant coach for the Hilltoppers, will probably remain as head coach of the NFL's Phoenix Cardinals for at least one more year. Bugel's job was rumored to be in jeopardy after a 7-9 season, but his team won four out of its last five to close the season.

Another former Western assistant coach, Jerry Glanville, wasn't as fortunate. Glanville was fired as head coach of the NFL's Atlanta Falcons after his second straight losing season.

Bugel and Glanville were together at Western for one year, 1987, when Bugel served as defensive coordinator and Glanville was offensive coordinator under Jimmy Feix.

Topper foes stronger

Western's 1994-95 football schedule continues to get tougher by the minute.

Last week, former prep All-American and Florida State reserve running back Marquette Smith announced he's transferring to Central Florida, one of Western's opponents next year.

Smith joins former Penn State quarterback John Sacca, who transferred to Eastern Kentucky, as former Division I-A players who'll suit up against the Toppers next year. Sacca is just one of many former I-A players at Eastern, which had former Kentucky players Emerson Wells and Jabbar Pipkin starting on defense last season.

Under NCAA rules, a Division

I player can transfer to a I-AA school without losing a year of eligibility.

"I-AA has kind of become the plan B of college football," Harbaugh said.

With eight scholarships available, Harbaugh is in a recruiting mood. He said he'll wait and see if any Division I players transfer to Western. High on his recruiting list: a quarterback, defensive backs and linemen.

Looking for a home

Interim Athletics Director Jim Richards, Associate Athletics Director Pam Herriford, Faculty Representative Biff Kummer, and President Thomas Meredith headed to San Antonio, Texas, last weekend to attend the annual NCAA Convention.

Richards said relations have improved between Western and the Ohio Valley Conference, which may be enough to get the Toppers readmitted as a football-only member.

He said he plans to renew talks with the conference at the convention.

"We need them to help save our program from being strangled financially, and we've tried to show that it would be mutually beneficial," Richards said. "We'll know more about that after the convention."

Western was a member of the Ohio Valley Conference from 1948 to 1981, and has been an independent in football since joining the Sun Belt Conference, which does not have football
