Token Economy

Hendrix Brakefield
Western Kentucky University, spence.brakefield754@topper.wku.edu

Maranda Feldman
Western Kentucky University, maranda.aldridge389@topper.wku.edu

Chelsie Stevens
Western Kentucky University, chelsie.stevens983@topper.wku.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.wku.edu/appliedbehavior

Part of the Special Education and Teaching Commons

Recommended Citation

Brakefield, Hendrix; Feldman, Maranda; and Stevens, Chelsie, "Token Economy" (2012). Applied Behavior Analysis (SPED 432) and Intervention Strategies for Literacy (SPED 431). Paper 2.

http://digitalcommons.wku.edu/appliedbehavior/2
The purpose of this poster was to inform other educators of the benefits of using a token economy system in their classroom. The research conducted for this poster confirmed that using a token economy system is effective and beneficial to both younger students and older students. Token economy is well known in general education but is practiced as a component of a management system in both general and special education classrooms.
References:

Citations: