So You’re Sending a Kid to College: Everything Parents and Families Need to Know About Sending Their Kids to College [brochure and video]

Lisa Brun
Western Kentucky University, lisa.brun@wku.edu

Follow this and additional works at: http://digitalcommons.wku.edu/cns_apps

Recommended Citation
http://digitalcommons.wku.edu/cns_apps/33

This Other is brought to you for free and open access by TopSCHOLAR®. It has been accepted for inclusion in Counseling Concepts and Applications for Student Affairs Professionals (CNS 577) by an authorized administrator of TopSCHOLAR®. For more information, please contact topscholar@wku.edu.
Top 5 Things You’ll Want to Know

Most schools will provide information about these key areas during orientation. Further information can usually be found on their websites.

1. Housing
   - Where will my student live?
2. Dining
   - What will my student eat?
3. Health Services
   - What happens when my student gets sick?
4. Financial Information
   - How are we going to pay for this?
5. Academics
   - What will my student be learning?

Resources on Your Campus

There are many ways to find information about your student’s college or university:

- Parent and Family Organizations or Offices
- Orientation Programs
- University Websites
- Campus Tours

Other Resources for Parents and Families

By: Lisa Brun
The Summer Before
This summer will be an emotional rollercoaster for everyone. Help your student plan how they will get involved their first semester. Your student may react to the upcoming changes with excitement, fear, or anger.

Move-In Day
Help your student decide what they need to pack and what they want to pack. Rooms on campus are small and made to be shared; your student can’t bring everything with them. Let your student unpack as much as possible to help them make the space their own. Don’t stay all day. Move them in, say good-bye, and then go home.

First Visit Home
Keep your student posted on things that have changed at home so they don’t feel left out or surprised by major changes during their first visit. Your student will have changed as well. They may want a different curfew or want to make plans with people other than you.

Great Expectations
Be prepared to adjust your expectations. Each student’s college experience will be different. Your student may explore different majors or student organizations than you ever thought they would. Be open to these new experiences.

Becoming a Coach
The biggest key to your student’s success is helping them to help themselves. Don’t always give your student the solutions to their problems; assist them in becoming their own advocate. Listen when they want to vent, point them in the right direction, and encourage them to find on-campus support.

Communicating with Your Student
With so many ways to keep in constant contact, what is the best way to communicate with your student?

- Make a plan. Include how often and by what means will you will make contact.
- Each plan will be different, find what works for you.
- At the most, contact your student once a week. If they want to talk more often, they will do so.
- Utilize different means of communication:
  - Skype for face-to-face conversations
  - Text Messaging for quickly relaying information
  - Facebook to share pictures or videos

From Orientation to Graduation…
…move-in day and beyond.