Collection consists of interviews conducted by Gina Lloyce Kinchlow with three Kinchlow family members regarding African American, middle class family life and Easter customs in New Albany, Floyd County, Indiana, during the 1960s and 1970s. Discussions include family structure, values, religion, education, and travel. Photographs of the Kinchlow children at Easter are also included. This project was completed as a requirement for a folk studies class at Western Kentucky University in 1984.
