COLLECTION NOTE

World Fest is a celebration held annually in downtown Louisville that showcases unique cultures from around the world. The festivals documented in this collection were held in 2006 and 2007. The festival features music, food, crafts, and ceremonies celebrating the various cultures represented in the city. The event is sponsored by the Kentucky Arts Council, Louisville Office for International Affairs, and the Kentucky Folklife Program. Louisville has a long history of embracing immigrant cultures. The latest U.S. census reveals that Louisville’s international community is rapidly expanding with approximately fifty percent of the city’s population growth over the last fifteen years coming from immigrants and refugees. Currently, nearly one in ten Louisvillians is foreign-born.
