ORGANIZATIONAL HISTORY

On October 15, 1892, Reverend L. H. Voyles organized the Delafield Baptist Church with nineteen members. From 1894 to 1897, members referred to themselves as both the United Baptist Church of Christ and the Second Baptist Church. In 1897, the church received a deed for its building at Main and Center Streets from the First Baptist Church, and began referring to itself regularly as the Delafield Baptist Church. In 1898, Reverend Elias H. Brookshire (sometimes spelled “Brookshier” in the records) was elected pastor and the church decided to sell the Main Street property. Some members of the congregation, however, were unhappy with the selection of a new church location at Adams and Tenth Streets. They discharged Reverend Brookshire as their pastor and held their services elsewhere, but in 1900 elected to turn over the remaining property of the Delafield Baptist Church to Brookshire and his supporters. In 1901, the Brookshire group organized themselves as the Second Baptist Church, and in 1911 changed the church’s name to Central Baptist Church. In 1915, Central Baptist Church was absorbed by the First Baptist Church.
