Ex-Moonie says cults aim for students

By MICHAEL COLLINS

College students beware: Religious cults have made the nation's college campuses their top priority in recruiting members, according to a former member of the Unification Church.

"The very people that cults go after are in this room," said Chris Carlson, a member of the so-called Moonies from June 1977 to March 1978. "The very people who join them are in this room."

About 500 attended Carlson's lecture last night in Center Theater, the fourth event in University Center Board's "Catch a Rising Star" series.

Just because Moonies may not be on a campus doesn't mean students aren't affected by cults, he said. "There are other similar organizations operating on campuses."

College students are most vulnerable to a cult's recruiting efforts when they are going through a "transition period" — such as recovering from a failed romance or the confusion that often follows graduation from college.

"College is really a womb," he said. "It is a protective environment — it's not like the real world."

Members of cults are "victims of a mind-control process that undermines them as individuals," he said.

Carlson, who has helped deprogram about 55 members of similar cults since leaving the church, said he became involved with the Moonies during that transition period — after graduating from college in 1977.

"I was an emotional wreck and feeling very lonely," he said. "My head wasn't quite in anything at that time — I didn't know what to do."

Confused and unsure of his future, he hitchhiked to San Francisco because "I thought if it was happening anywhere, it was happening in California." He said he met a woman at the Fisherman's Wharf.

See CULTS
Page 2, Column 1

Gas war drops price below $1

By STEVE PAUL

Students with cars are finding that the gas war in Bowling Green is making the cost of gas a bit easier on their pocketbooks.

And though the new federal gas tax will take effect April 1, local station owners don't think the extra 5 cents will matter much.

"What a nickel!" asked Dave Brown, owner of Brown's Oil Co. in Bowling Green.

"Many stations around Bowling Green have been lowering prices, and some have even been forced to sell gas for about 90 cents per gallon to keep business."

"We want to be competitive," said John McFaden, district supervisor for Gulf Petroleum on the 21W Bypass. McFaden said Gulf changed its prices to 99 cents in mid-January because other stations were lowering their prices.

The low gas prices are being caused by a " glut on the market," said Dan Hilt, owner of the Gulf station on the bypass. The major oil companies need to compete to keep their cash flow constant.

Hilt said oil companies hope to "hit a happy medium on supply and demand" and stimulate business. "It's stimulated some buying," he said. But Hilt said he must sell more gasoline to maintain profits.

Brown said his business is being hurt because local station owners are selling gas at cost. "Our retail price has gone down more than our wholesale price," he said. His company isn't making much of a profit, he said. "That's just swapping dollars."
Cults deceptive, ex-Moonie says

continued from Front Page—

who told him he belonged to a group that provided community work and service.

Carlson accepted an invitation to a group-sponsored dinner, and so impressed that he accepted an invitation to spend the weekend at the group’s farm.

“I wanted to see if these people had something going,” he said. “It’s reassuring to know that other people think that man isn’t all bad. It’s an emotional high.”

“They were very nice people,” he said. “They were doing something that they thought was very important — caring for other people.”

There he was subjected to the cult’s brainwashing tactics, which he said often include childlike games and activities to make the atmosphere acceptable.

“If you have ever been to a summer church camp, you can obviously relate to what went on there,” Carlson said. “It’s such a nice time to break to take a vacation and be a kid.”

Because Carlson was confused about some of the church’s religious beliefs, he was invited to attend lectures to find answers to his questions.

But the lectures also served another purpose, he said.

“That’s a way to get people to stay another week,” he said. “In some instances, it’s good enough to get people to stay three weeks.
And if they stay three weeks, they’re hooked.”

After a while, Carlson said he soon felt “incapable of working outside the group.”

Carlson now has a different philosophy of dealing with new situations: open-mindedness tempered with caution.

“I encourage you to be open to a point in your exploring of the world, but be careful,” he said. “There is much that awaits you.”

“You are a follower, you are his sheep,” he said. “And he therefore becomes Christlike in his own eyes.”

But Carlson said he doesn’t want to eliminate such organizations; he only wants to stop their “highly deceptive practices.”

“I just want to make people aware enough that they know what’s going on, behind this veil,” he said.

“Let them have the beliefs they want, but take away the exploitation,” he said. “Then I’ll shut up.”

Shirley Jenne Hill, 725 Poland
Hall, pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol. She was required to attend driving school and paid $100 plus court costs. The fine was probated, and she was given one day in jail.

Amy Gay Wilson, 602 Gilbert
Hall, entered a motion for pretrial diversion Friday on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol.

Reports

Ann Michele Jenkins, Florence
Schneider Hall, reported Wednesday that a battery valued at $60 was stolen from her car on the second floor of the parking structure.

Cheryl Diann Warnington,
McCormack Hall, reported Friday that a license plate valued at $17 was stolen from her car parked on the third floor of the parking structure.

David Lynn Jenison, Rt. 5,
Box 119, reported Saturday that someone had shot at his truck while he waited at a stop light at University Boulevard and Russellville Road.

For the record

Arrests

Theodore William Schultz,
Auburn, was arrested Thursday on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol. He was lodged in the Warren County Jail and is scheduled to appear in court Feb. 22.

Court actions

- Edward Ellis Ball III, 1225
College St., entered a motion
Friday for a jury trial for his charges of trafficking in a simulated controlled substance, disorderly conduct and menacing.
A court date will be set later.

RL

Runway 5

Come out to Runway 5’s New
Crash & Burn
Every Wednesday

No cover charge. Guys-buy your glass for $5.
Gals-buy your glass for $4. Have all the auds and drinks you can hold.

Tuesday nights at Runway 5 are still better
Than Ever with Quarter Suds all night.

Live Entertainment Nightly with the Fabulous
Sat

Live on Stage

There’s always a party at Runway 5

Tuesday & Saturday
2424 Airway Drive

Stuart Mitchell
7:30 p.m.

Monday
February 14th
DUC Theatre
$1.00 with
WKU I.D.

Stuart Mitchell prefers to be known as a singer who’s funny rather than a comedian who sings — “Because nobody wants to hear a comedian that sings,” Mitchell said.

His performances have ranged from bar rooms to concert halls. Mitchell has been the opening act for Asia, Gary U.S. Bonds, Josh White Jr. and Roberta Flack to name a few.

Don’t miss this Rising Star, Monday, February 14th.

Be one of the first 100 ladies to attend and receive a FREE ROSE, compliments of UCB

Catch a
Rising Star

Sponsored by UCB Contemporary Music Committee
Promotional Support Provided by TVI

Rowdy Rooster is alive and crowing loud!

Corduroy and denim jeans
specially priced at $19

SALE

Long sleeve shirts final

SALE

reduction $95

Sale through February 22, 1983
The Rowdy Rooster Shop
Old Mall Nashville Road

Alexanders

522 MORRIS ALLEY
(behind American National Bank)
Phone 781-9855

Live Band Saturday Night

New Hours

Mon.-Thurs. 11:00 a.m.-10:00 p.m.
Fri.-Sat. 11:00 a.m.-11:00 p.m.
Sun. 5:00 p.m.-10:00 p.m.

There’s nobodys pizza like Alexanders Pizza.

6” Mini Pizza
$1.99
& Small Coke
$2.00 off Lg. pizza

Coupon must accompany order.
Coupon must accompany order.
Not valid with any other offer.
Not valid with any other offer.

Good daily 11 a.m.-4 p.m.
Good daily 11 a.m.-4 p.m.
Mon.-Sat.
Mon.-Sat.
Expires Feb. 11, 1983
Expires Feb. 11, 1983

For a limited time

14th
February
February 22 . 1983

2424 Airway Drive
3 fraternities could face probation

By CRAIG DEZERN

Three fraternities with combined grade-point averages below 2.0 may be placed on academic probation after a hearing by the Interfraternity Council judicial board.

Alpha Phi Alpha's combined GPA of 1.9, Kappa Alpha Psi's 1.5 and Phil Beta Sigma's 1.3 fall below the academic standard set by the IFC constitution, and the groups will have to appear before the board at a hearing before Feb. 22, IFC president Paul Wellander said.

A fraternity placed on academic probation must have its academic program reviewed periodically by the IFC academic vice president.

Honored for highest GPAs

Delts, ADPi's win academic award

By CRAIG DEZERN

Delta Tau Delta fraternity and Alpha Delta Pi sorority picked up top scholastic honors at the sixth annual greek academic awards banquet Wednesday night.

The Delts and the ADPi's won awards for achieving the highest combined greek grade-point averages for 1982.

More than 250 people attended the event, sponsored by the Interfraternity and Panhel lenic councils to honor individual Greeks with a GPA of 3.0 and above.

Gary West, executive director of the Hilltopper Hundred Club, was guest speaker; IFC president Paul Wellander and Panhel lenic president Kris Schreiber presented the awards.

The Donald Zacharias Scholarship Award for the fraternity junior with the highest GPA went to Steven Tinsley of Glasc ow. Owensboro junior Linda Allford received the Junior Pan helenic Scholarshop Award, presented to the pledge with the highest grades.

Nine pledges were honored for achieving a 4.0 GPA: Allford; Bowling Green sophomore Deborah Dunn; Franklin sophomore Thomas Johnson; Bowling Green sophomore Missy Kitchens; and Louisville sophomore James Lamamore.

Also honored were Bowling Green freshman Anne Moore; Bowling Green sophomore Jennifer Slaughter; Russell Springs sophomore Roderick Tiller; and Glasgow sophomore Frederick Travis.

Awards were also presented for the fraternity and sorority member of each class with the highest GPA. Freshman winners were Moore and David Spenard of Madisonville; sopho- phores Johnson and Slaughter, junior Allford and seniors Barry DeWeese of Rockport, Ind., and Susan Beth Tinsley of Central City.

In the sorority pledge class division, Chi Omega won for the spring semester, and Alpha Omicron Pi won for the fall semester.

In the sorority active division, ADPi received the spring semester award, while Zeta Phi Beta won for the fall.

ADPi was also honored for achieving the highest combined GPA for the spring and fall semesters.

In the fraternity pledge class division, Kappa Sigma won for the spring and Phil Delta Theta won for the fall. In the active division and in the combined division, the Delts won for both semesters.

Dexter Cantelupe, assistant for fraternity affairs, said he doesn't think there will be any mistakes this time. Grade calculations have taken longer because he allowed time for grade changes and roster corrections — only pledges and active members are considered in the combined GPA.

"We put a good rundown on it," Cantelupe said. "If it does (happen again) they can prove it at the judicial board meeting."

The council is taking applications for the judicial board from greek men in good standing who have been in a fraternity for at least one semester. The mem bers of the six-man board must have a GPA of 2.4 or above.

Feel like you're on the wrong team?

Maybe we can help.

University Counseling Center
College of Education Building
Suite 408
748-3159

MANUFACTURER'S SALE
Back again for our biggest sale ever!

Wholesale Women’s Fashions up to 70% off

Thursday, Friday & Saturday
February 10, 11 & 12
Ramada Inn Banquet Room
Bowling Green, KY

Hours: 9:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. Thurs. & Fri.
9:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. Sat.

Black Stretch Designer Jeans
$19.99
Reg. $32.00

Tall Button Down Oxford Shirts
$9.99
Reg. $22.00

and Calvin Klein Denim Jeans

Long Sleeves

Five Spring Colors (Front pockets with pleated back and locker loop)

We have more brand name merchandise than ever before. Compare these prices and save!

LOU AND POLO BRAND
Long sleeve sweaters $17.99
Reg. $30.00

LIZ CLAIBORNE DESIGNER
Sweaters (crepes & silks)
Reg. $38.00

 righteousness to

The deadline to purchase your Super Card is fast approaching. Buy your Super Card now and enjoy delicious meals plus savings and convenience.

Mardi Gras days are coming to DUC on Feb. 15. Bring a friend and your Super Card and look for our Mardi Gras Specials.
Opinion

Grade policy recommendations need work

Two Associated Student Government proposals to change Western's grading policy are good ideas, but both need a little work.

The student government's elevated grading scale -- 4.5 for an A, 3.5 for a B+, 3 for a B, 2.5 for a C+, 2 for a C, 1.5 for a D+ and 1 for a D -- will probably be approved by ASG tonight. It's a good idea, but it lacks real imagination.

Ideally, giving a student a 3.5 for a B+, 2.5 for a C+ or 1.5 for a D+ would give faculty more flexibility in grading. It could also help them resist the temptation to boost a high B into an A, and therefore resist contributing to grade inflation.

On the other hand, teachers could raise their grading scales, assigning a B+ to what would normally have been a low A.

The University of Tennessee began an elevated grading scale last summer, but it's too early to tell what its effect will be. Few other schools have considered the measure.

If Western is going to consider changing its grading scale, it might consider a 12-point system, with a 12 being an A+, 11 an A and 10 an A- and so on. Used correctly -- that's the importance of any scale -- this could give students and teachers a more accurate reflection of a student's work.

No grading scale will ever accurately describe what a student learns in class. But that has never stopped teachers from giving grades, or students from wanting higher grades.

Without clarification, dropping the grades of WP (withdrawal passing) and WF (withdrawal failing) could hurt students because it would reduce the time for dropping a class from two months to one month.

One alternative would be to retain the WP and WF, but erase the three hours attempted from the WF. The WF is now equivalent to an F, while the WP has no real value -- it reflects nothing.

Another alternative would be to eliminate both the WP and WF, but extend the period for dropping a class with a W (withdrawal) to six weeks.

Either of these solutions would be worth consideration by the Academic Council's Academic Requirements and Regulations Committee tomorrow.

None of the 27 colleges and universities surveyed by Dr. Diane Rutledge, chairwoman of the Academic Requirements and Regulations Committee, ends its WP and WF period (or W period in most cases) as early as Western does. Eight schools do not have the WP and WF, and 10 others extend the two grades until the end of the semester.

In other words, Western's policy is out of line and should be changed.

If Western is to get serious about changing academic policies, it should consider something significant, not the first thing that pops into someone's mind.

Student regent must represent everyone

The student regent must try to represent all students. Associated Student Government doesn't have to represent anybody.

ASG President Margaret Ragan was right last week (Speak out, Feb. 9 Herald) when she said the responsibilities of ASG president and student regent should be separate.

Most ASG representatives are not representiative at all.

According to ASG Secretary Susan Albert, only about eight of the 46 members were elected in contested races last spring. About 20 ran, but had no opponent. About 20 more were appointed.

ASG "represents" a handful of students, while some of the activists have jumped ship for University Center Board, Interhull Council and other special interest organizations.

In other words, ASG is just one of several groups that represent student opinion.

The student regent's position is important. In fact, when students elect a new ASG president this spring, they should first consider how well each candidate will articulate the student voice, not just the views of a few frustrated, would-be politicians.

Letter to the editor

Favors coed housing

I, for one, am having coed housing. I have always believed that male and female have the right to live together.

David Ellis
Junior

Letters policy

Letters to the editor must be submitted by 2 p.m. Sunday for the Tuesday Herald and by 4 p.m. Thursday for the Thursday Herald. Because of space and legal limitations, the Herald reserves the right to shorten letters without changing content, and also to delete obscenities or libelous material. Letters must be original, on both sides of paper, double-spaced, and limited to 200 words. All must have the writer's signature, identification on job title, and phone number.
Executions no deterrent, study says
By GRACE MOORE

Executions in the United States are not a short-term deterrent for murder, according to a study by a Western psychology professor.

The results of Dr. Sam McFarland's study of short-term effects of capital punishment are to be published in the monthly Journal for Criminal Law and Criminology.

He also presented them at the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences Annual Convention in Louisville last spring.

The study, which took a year to complete and cost more than $2,000, was partially funded by a $500 grant from the Society for Psychological Study of Social Issues.

McFarland began the study when a local public defender, who was defending a man guilty of murder, asked him to testify that capital punishment isn't a deterrent to crime.

"No one ever did a study on whether or not it was, so there was not enough available data to provide the necessary evidence to answer the question with any precision," McFarland said. "Here was this study just sitting there, waiting to be done."

McFarland studied media coverage of the 1917 execution of Guy Gilmore and its impact on homicide rates of each state. He also made about 200 phone calls, wrote 200 letters to respondents of his inquiries, and wrote each state and the District of Columbia for death statistics at a particular time.

If the impact of these executions paralleled the impact of British executions on a city of 4.5 million, homicides should decline by about 100 in each of the two weeks following each execution, McFarland wrote.

But McFarland said retribution for murder comes much quicker in England than in the United States. A convicted prisoner in England is frequently executed within a few months of a homicide, but in America the appeals process takes up to five or six years.

There are now 16 men on death row in the state penitentiary in Eddyville, prison officials said, and one has been there for more than 21 years.
Newsletter offers ‘bits of wisdom’

By MARY MEEHAN

Steve Bower wants people to tell it like it really is — regardless of where they’re coming from or where they’ve been.

The 51-year-old Bowling Green junior is the man behind Southern Letters, a four-page newsletter published on the new and full moon of every month as a reminder of a time when farmers relied on the moon to plan their crops.

The first issue was distributed across campus last month; Bower, a horticulturist major, also sent copies to friends in other states and professors in the English and humanities departments.

Bower, who has always enjoyed writing as a hobby, said he got the idea for the almanac-style paper while talking with friends.

Differents people’s “bits of wisdom and common sense” are fascinating, he said, and as an assistant manager at Casablanca Restaurant and Bar, he has a chance to “talk to a lot of different people about a lot of different things.”

Southern Letters should give them the opportunity “to share their knowledge on everything from garden hints to ecumenical dogma,” he said.

Bower, who was raised in Wichita, Kan., had lived in various parts of the country before coming to Kentucky in fall 1978. And everyone — from the “Yankees of Connecticut to the weirdos of New Orleans” — has a little different point of view, he said.

Bower describes himself as “more spiritual than religious” and he says though Southern Letters is based on Christian ideals, it isn’t extreme.

“I really don’t want to side with the right wing, left wing, radical or conservative,” he said. “I want Southern Letters to be a neutral place.”

Since the first issue of Southern Letters was distributed, Bower said he has received “more letters than I can cram into four pages” — including letters from an English professor and an administrator.

He plans to send each issue to a different Southern university, and eventually he wants to send copies to Frankfort.

Although Bower said he would be happy with just a “handful” of letters for each issue, judging from the initial response, he sees it “growing, definitely.” If the positive response continues, he may increase the size of the paper to accommodate more letters.

Though Bower does most of the work on Southern Letters himself, two friends help with editing. If it becomes successful, he said, he would like to see it published by professionals.

He first issue of Southern Letters was distributed free, but the rest will sell for 25 cents. Bower said future profits will go to various charities.

“You wouldn’t believe all the different organizations which need money,” Bower said. “There are organizations for everything from ‘save the wheat’ in Kansas to ‘save the seals’ in Alaska.”

The organizations that receive the money will be decided by which organizations readers bring to his attention.

Abusive or disrespectful letters won’t be printed, Bower said. He wants letters which are “Short and sweet” and make a positive contribution.

He even hopes to include letters from children describing their feelings about anything from war to their nicest memory, he said.

The next issue of Southern Letters will come out Feb. 11. Copies will be available on campus, at the Christian Science Bookstore and Tune Town.

Borrowed from Southern Letters

February 14 is “I LOVE YOU” day!

College Heights Bookstore
Winter shouldn’t keep joggers out of the cold

By GARY ELMORE

Larry Park runs 13 miles a day, and his roommate, Cam Hubbard, runs 11. Because they are members of Western’s track and field team, jogging is a vital part of their training program. They run twice a day all year long — even when the cold winter days keep others indoors. The only indoor track on campus is in Diddle Arena, but most runners say it’s not the best place to run.

That leaves only one alternative: taking a chance outside when the wind chill factor reaches double digits below zero and ice crunches beneath the feet. They and other runners assert that the risks can be kept to a minimum if runners use common sense when jogging in the winter.

They say that probably the first precaution against the cold is to resist the urge to undress. Even though the runner ekes himself and creates heat, it’s hardest to dress in layers of thin clothing rather than one thick one. That allows the body to retain heat and allow more freedom of movement during exercise.

Runners can purchase a rain suit, or at least a water-repellent jacket. The suit — or just the jacket — can cost as much as $75 for big-name equipment, Park said.

“The only real risks are frostbite or cars skidding off the road in icy weather,” said Hubbard, who runs on city streets and the Smith Stadium track.

“And the wind chill factor is the one to watch out for,” Park added. Factors of zero or below can freeze exposed skin with amazing speed, and frostbite not recognized or properly treated can become more serious than it sounds — resulting in tissue damage, said Ronald Dunn, Western’s head athletic trainer and director of sports medicine.

Winter joggers need to spend more time warming up. Muscles don’t stretch as far or as easily in cold weather, Dunn said.

Valuable Coupon!

FREE PIZZA!

Buy any size Little Caesars Original round pizza at regular price, get the identical pizza FREE with this coupon.

812-9555
Expires 2-10-83

1703 31-W By-Pass
Little Caesars. The one that gives you two!

How do I love thee?

Tell him or her in the Herald Valentine’s Day Section, February 10th.

Here’s how:

Fill out the coupon and bring it to the Herald office, DUC 125, before 5:00 p.m. today and place your ad with one of our “ad-visors.” The special section for all persons interested in Valentine messages is $3.00 per ad. Note: Ads for this section are limited to 15 words or less.

Your Name:
Address:
Phone No.:
Message: (15 words or less):

DEEMER’S
861 Fairview Ave.
“Bowling Green’s Leading Florist”
843-4334
CITY-WIDE DELIVERY

University Center Board and United Black Students present:

Edgar Matthews

- Protege of Nikki Giovanni
- Montgomery, Alabama’s 1981 “Young Man of the Year”
- Los Angeles American Poet Society two-time Poem of the year Award winner

LET HIS CAPTIVATING STYLE EXPAND YOUR HORIZONS

Thursday, Feb. 17 8:00 p.m.
Garrett Ballroom FREE ADMISSION

Don’t forget Valentine Flowers!

Valentine Specials!

Stop by Deemer’s Greenhouses and pick up something special for “Someone Special.”

BLOOMING PLANTS
• Tulips • Hyacinths
• Mums • Pocketbook Plants
• Azaleas • Cinerarias

Good Selection of Tropical Green Plants

We also have...
• ROSES (all colors) • RED CARNATIONS
• MIXED BOUQUETS • SPRING BOUQUETS

Valentine’s Day is Monday, February 14.
The beautiful look of fresh flowers. The beautiful scent of Arpege. All in the FTD® Fragrance ‘n Flowers™ Bouquet.
Send your love with special care.”

February 17, 1983

Stop by Deemer’s Greenhouses and pick up something special for “Someone Special.”

BLOOMING PLANTS
• Tulips • Hyacinths
• Mums • Pocketbook Plants
• Azaleas • Cinerarias

Good Selection of Tropical Green Plants

We also have...
• ROSES (all colors) • RED CARNATIONS
• MIXED BOUQUETS • SPRING BOUQUETS

Valentine’s Day is Monday, February 14.
The beautiful look of fresh flowers. The beautiful scent of Arpege. All in the FTD® Fragrance ‘n Flowers™ Bouquet.
Send your love with special care.”

February 17, 1983

Stop by Deemer’s Greenhouses and pick up something special for “Someone Special.”

BLOOMING PLANTS
• Tulips • Hyacinths
• Mums • Pocketbook Plants
• Azaleas • Cinerarias

Good Selection of Tropical Green Plants

We also have...
• ROSES (all colors) • RED CARNATIONS
• MIXED BOUQUETS • SPRING BOUQUETS

Valentine’s Day is Monday, February 14.
The beautiful look of fresh flowers. The beautiful scent of Arpege. All in the FTD® Fragrance ‘n Flowers™ Bouquet.
Send your love with special care.”

February 17, 1983
Panhellenic approves probation proposal

Panhellenic Council passed a proposal Wednesday that, beginning next semester, would place any sorority with a grade-point average between 2.0 and 2.2 on social probation.

"Grades from this semester will be figured into the GPA. That gives them a grace period," president Kris Strember said.

Sororities on social probation will be excluded from all Greek activities except intramurals, Greek Week, Pledge Olympics, rush meetings and charitable activities.

The sororities will not be allowed to participate in such Greek-sponsored activities as mixers, parties, formals and activities sponsored by single groups such as November Nonsense sponsored by Chi Omega.

If a sorority's GPA falls below 2.0, its members will be placed on academic probation, in which the sorority will be allowed only to have meetings, rush and charitable activities.

A sorority with a GPA below 2.0 for four consecutive semesters will have its charter lifted for the next four semesters.

In other business, council:
- Limited chapter membership to 80 unless a quota set during formal rush in the previous fall exceeded it. This semester's limit is 70.
- Established a new rotation schedule for officers.

This Valentine's Day
Send Something Special

A bouquet of helium-filled balloons tied with colorful ribbons.

A) 1 doz. red HEART-SHAPED 14" balloons with 1 oz. white round 11" balloons. $8.95
B) 1 doz. red and white 11" balloons. $4.95
C) 1 oz. HEART-SHAPED MYLAR balloons. $2.95
D) 1 doz. assorted colorful 11" balloons. $4.95
E) 1 doz. red, white & pink 11" balloons with a Valentine's message. $17.95
F) Oneemy MYLAR HEART-SHAPED balloon in a decorative gift box. $9.95

Order Yours Early
843-4174
THE BALLOON-A-GRAM CO.
Free City-wide Delivery
Wood carver sells wares here

Chuck Argento began carving wood six years ago as a hobby. Now the 42-year-old from Rochester, N.Y., travels across country 35 weeks a year selling his goods.

He peddles his carvings at universities because his work is accepted by students. "The kids like to see it done," he said.

Argento, who taught himself his craft, has been carving wood plaques, keychains and namepins on the second floor of the university center for about two weeks.

"You have to be creative to keep people interested," Argento said.

Argento's work has sold well everywhere he's gone, but Western has been the best area so far, he said.

He has even gotten help from two Western students. Hardin freshman Shellie Semenic passed by Argento's booth last week and saw that he was busy, so she volunteered to help. And when she couldn't work Friday, Marce Puckett, a Frankfort freshman, volunteered her time. Both are helping this week.

The women are working as volunteers, but Puckett said, "If we want something, we can have it."

Two women approached the booth and looked at a double-name plaque. Puckett explained that the woman's name goes on one heart, the man's on the other. And if they broke up with their boyfriends, she told them, they could always get another plaque.

The namepins are the most complicated carvings to make, he said, because they are so small.

When he leaves Western, Argento said he will head to Phoenix, Ariz., stopping in Texas and New Mexico. And he doesn't know when, but he said he plans to come back to Western some day.
Kappa Sigs choose 11 to be calendar girls

By MARK EBLEN

Joey Ward doesn't mind appearing in a calendar. "I just thought it would be fun to win something for your looks," the Hendersonville, Tenn., sophomore said. Although the only prize was appearing in the calendar, Ward said that was enough.

Ward was one of 11 girls who won in Kappa Sigma's third annual "Calendar Girl" contest and will appear on its calendar.

The calendar, which is given to students each fall, features pictures of the girls and lists all campus activities for the coming school year; it will be printed this summer and is paid for by advertisements and the fraternity.

It also "helps us to get more people to our rush parties since we're located so far off campus," said Jeff Pate, a Cloverport junior and Kappa Sigma house manager.

David Sneed, fraternity president, said the Kappa Sigma sweetheart will be chosen by members this month and will appear for February in the calendar because it is the month Kappa Sigma was founded.

Another winner, Sarah Jackson, an Ohio County junior, said she appeared on the calendar last year after her Kappa Sigma friend convinced her to enter. She said she entered again because "I really enjoyed it the first time."

But the contest was run differently this year. "We usually pick a few members of the fraternity to walk around campus and look for girls to go on the calendar," Pate said. "This year, everyone in the fraternity meets the girls and votes for the ones they want on it."

About 120 girls signed up for the contest, which was during two rush parties, and some invitations were sent to girls who were associated with the fraternity.

About 50 girls showed up Saturday for the finals.

The other girls to be on the calendar are Jane Frymire, a Madisonville freshman; Allyson Rowles, a Nashville freshman; Kella Stapp, a Russell Springs sophomore; Lori Howard, an Owensboro freshman; Cindy Richards, a Cloverport freshman; Susan Henry, a Paris freshman; Jackie Sundermeier, a Nashville freshman; Eal Smith, a Ft. Thomas freshman; and Tara Wasson, a freshman from Hendersonville, Tenn.

Although she won't be one of the girls and "I wish I would've been selected," Joey Ward said that she was enough.

Another winner, Sarah Jackson, an Ohio County junior, said that she won the contest because she was "the most photogenic" of the girls who entered.

Ward also won last year, but she said she entered again because she "really enjoyed it the first time."
Full coverage

Students prepare for work at games

By LINDA M. MILLER

Students alternately talked, joked and worked confidently with complicated machinery in an atmosphere that turned frantic when the basketball game began.

The students, paid and volunteer workers for Western's Educational Television, were working to broadcast the Feb. 1 game between the Lady Toppers and Cincinnati's Lady Bears for Western Cable 4.

The game appeared from every angle on several television screens as the students monitored them.

"Ready camera two, follow it one, stand by four, now fake over two," a man with headphones said into his microphone as he watched the screens.

Another worker monitored the score and statistics while another controlled the sound level.

The audio control is one of the responsibilities of Nashville junior Clay McNeill. McNeill, a broadcasting major, is one of 24 students working at Western's Educational Television. McNeill, who has been volunteer for three semesters, works 10 hours a week.

The station covers sports and lectures, and airs instructional material, documentaries and public service announcements.

Games are taped and mailed to cable stations in Louisville, Lexington, Paducah, Covington and Henderson. The station has also worked with the Sun Belt Conference for its Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, by helping film the game.

"Altogether, 198,000 (cable) subscribers have the potential to see Hilltopper basketball," said Linda Skaggs, a producer who supervises the student crew.

She thinks Western's Educational Television prepares students for the working world with "good equipment" and "hands-on experience.

"A student must wander around, learn the ropes and ask questions."

— Linda Skaggs

For the most part," Miss Skaggs said, "students who work here and do a good job get a job" when they graduate.

To become a member of the student crew, a student needs an application, references from teachers and at least a B average in Basic TV Production 282, she said.

"We do not have a formal training program," she said. "Instead, a student must wander around, learn the ropes and ask questions."

"To be paid, a student must work one or two semesters and show 'interest and ability," Miss Skaggs said. Because of a lack of money, some students remain volunteers for several semesters.

Elizabeth Mizanin, a junior from St. Charles, Ill., said her salary isn't as important as the experience she's gaining.

Mizanin, a mass communications major, volunteered for a semester before becoming a paid worker. Her duties include acting as associate producer when needed. Mizanin, who is paid for only a third of the 36 hours she works, thinks the station gives a student "a chance to see if TV is what he wants to do."

Mizanin also thinks she will have an advantage over those who aren't involved in the program. "I have experience now that some don't have going into a first job," she said.

Broadcasting majors who don't get involved miss a lot, Mizanin said.

The worst experience McNeill remembers is the time the station "was live on KET 53 and the audio went out." The problem was quickly remedied, however.

"We didn't have too many screw ups," he said, laughing, "because (the advisors) don't like (mistakes) much. Everyone is serious about it."

Student workers seldom make major mistakes because they usually ask if they don't understand something, Skaggs said.

McNeill said the work sometimes interferes with his homework, but said he has learned to budget his time. He also manages to study at the library, where he works as a student assistant about 15 hours a week.

Mizanin doesn't find that the work interferes with her studies. "I try to balance the two," she said. "But if there's a conflict, I usually let school come first."

Full coverage

Students prepare for work at games

By LINDA M. MILLER

Students alternately talked, joked and worked confidently with complicated machinery in an atmosphere that turned frantic when the basketball game began.

The students, paid and volunteer workers for Western's Educational Television, were working to broadcast the Feb. 1 game between the Lady Toppers and Cincinnati's Lady Bears for Western Cable 4.

The game appeared from every angle on several television screens as the students monitored them.

"Ready camera two, follow it one, stand by four, now fake over two," a man with headphones said into his microphone as he watched the screens.

Another worker monitored the score and statistics while another controlled the sound level.

The audio control is one of the responsibilities of Nashville junior Clay McNeill. McNeill, a broadcasting major, is one of 24 students working at Western's Educational Television. McNeill, who has been volunteer for three semesters, works 10 hours a week.

The station covers sports and lectures, and airs instructional material, documentaries and public service announcements.

Games are taped and mailed to cable stations in Louisville, Lexington, Paducah, Covington and Henderson. The station has also worked with the Sun Belt Conference for its Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, by helping film the game.

"Altogether, 198,000 (cable) subscribers have the potential to see Hilltopper basketball," said Linda Skaggs, a producer who supervises the student crew.

She thinks Western's Educational Television prepares students for the working world with "good equipment" and "hands-on experience."

"A student must wander around, learn the ropes and ask questions."

— Linda Skaggs

For the most part," Miss Skaggs said, "students who work here and do a good job get a job" when they graduate.

To become a member of the student crew, a student needs an application, references from teachers and at least a B average in Basic TV Production 282, she said.

"We do not have a formal training program," she said. "Instead, a student must wander around, learn the ropes and ask questions."

"To be paid, a student must work one or two semesters and show 'interest and ability," Miss Skaggs said. Because of a lack of money, some students remain volunteers for several semesters.

Elizabeth Mizanin, a junior from St. Charles, Ill., said her salary isn't as important as the experience she's gaining.

Mizanin, a mass communications major, volunteered for a semester before becoming a paid worker. Her duties include acting as associate producer when needed. Mizanin, who is paid for only a third of the 36 hours she works, thinks the station gives a student "a chance to see if TV is what he wants to do."

Mizanin also thinks she will have an advantage over those who aren't involved in the program. "I have experience now that some don't have going into a first job," she said.

Broadcasting majors who don't get involved miss a lot, Mizanin said.

The worst experience McNeill remembers is the time the station "was live on KET 53 and the audio went out." The problem was quickly remedied, however.

"We didn't have too many screw ups," he said, laughing, "because (the advisors) don't like (mistakes) much. Everyone is serious about it."

Student workers seldom make major mistakes because they usually ask if they don't understand something, Skaggs said.

McNeill said the work sometimes interferes with his homework, but said he has learned to budget his time. He also manages to study at the library, where he works as a student assistant about 15 hours a week.

Mizanin doesn't find that the work interferes with her studies. "I try to balance the two," she said. "But if there's a conflict, I usually let school come first."

Announcing the

"GRAND OPENING"

of Contemporary Catering, Inc.

Be a favorite with your valentine. Send them a beautiful heart shaped cake. The cake is $8.00 but you get...

$1.00 off with this coupon.

$1.00 Discount Coupon

Call Now

Delivery Available

City Wide 81:50
781-7115

Catering for all occasions: Company meetings, surprise birthday parties, anniversaries, intimate dinners, and specializing in weddings. No affair too large or too small. Call now for free price estimates...

781-7115

What's New at Michael's Pub?!

Michael's Pub is changing it's long standing tradition for a new one.

Once your Music Bar, Michael's is now your good time bar for any occasion, any time. To go along with our warm atmosphere and friendly staff, we are now offering nightly drink specials with the best prices in town!

Every night from 8:00-12:00 there is something special for you. On Monday Long Neck's are $.75, Tuesday Happy Hour is from open til close, Wednesday is Kamikaze Madness, Thursday is Steel Night, Friday is our Long Island Tea special, and Saturday is Jack night with the best Daniel's.

Beat the highest score on any of our video games from 8:00 p.m. until midnight and your entire tab will cost you only 25!

NEW HOURS

11:30 a.m. to 1:00 a.m.

Lunch

11:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

Dinner

5:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

956 Fairview Ave.

843-6606

Steve Tercha, left, faculty producer-director, oversees production in Western's Educational Television truck. Tercha was watching ETV staff members and student volunteers work Western's game against Jacksonville last week.

Photo by Mary Ann Lyons
Men’s basketball

The Lady Eagles, 11-12, were led by Lisa Stover’s 14 points and Avis Smith’s eight rebounds.

It was realistic coming into the game, "Lady Eagles’ coach Lewis Bivens said. "I didn’t think we could beat them. They have more experience and better skills than our players. All I wanted to do was be competitive."

But Western didn’t even give the Lady Eagles a chance to be competitive. Using its usual jump offense and full-court press defense, Western halted to a quick 10-0 lead before Bivens had a chance to stop the blowout with a timeout.

Carson-Newman would later help Western widen its first half lead—to as much as 31 points by going three minutes without scoring on several occasions.

"Perhaps the biggest mistake that I wish we would have been playing Kentucky or U.S.C., Southern California) rather than Carson-Newman," Dopp said. "We intimidated them, the first 10 minutes of the half and took them out of the game," he said.

But the intimidation cost Western as it was whistled for 26 fouls in the game while the Lady Eagles were hit with only 10.

Free throws kept Carson-Newman in the game, hitting 35 of 37 from the line for 95 percent; but its outside shooting must have stayed at home. The Lady Eagles hit only 14 of 31 from the field for 45 percent. Western was 45 of 72 from the field and 5 of 6 from the line.

"Our kids were really sharp tonight," Sanders said. "And I thought our spark plug was a little kid from Warren East named Kami Thomas."

She played hard the entire game diving for loose balls with us up by 25 points. That’s something I like seeing in a player."

A 71-48 win over Indiana State Saturday night enabled Western to break the most consecutive win record last night.

Western’s 13 point halftime lead Saturday was cut to six as the Lady Eagles scored three straight baskets.
Karen Sbeyat, a Valley Station junior, jumps for joy in the final seconds of Western’s game.

Martin leads upset

—Continued from Page 12—

in the game.

Kim Hatcher had 12 points and Bobby Jones had 13 points, including two critical free throws with nine seconds left that iced the contest. Tony Wilson was the game’s leading rebounder with nine.

Martin was also the Hilltoppers’ leading scorer Saturday night in Birmingham with 15. The 6-4 freshman got into foul trouble early in the second half of both games. He sat out most of the second half against Alabama-Birmingham.

Western had Alabama-Birmingham down 44-35 with a little over 10 minutes to go, but Steve Mitchell hit five straight medium range jumpers and McKinley Singleton hit from deep in the left corner to put the Blazers ahead, 50-48, with 5:30 left. The hosts never trailed again.

Wilson was suffering from back spasms and didn’t dress for the ’70-67 debacle against Virginia Commonwealth in Diddle Arena Thursday night.

The Rams scored only one field goal in the last 5:30, but they went to the line 22 times and hit 20 to put the Hilltoppers away.

Jones had 33 to lead Western.

Bowlers compete in tourney

Western’s bowling teams participated in the second round of the Southern Intercollegiate Bowling conference, Division IV, subregional tournament last weekend in Franklin, Tenn.

The men’s team defeated Middle Tennessee twice and lost to Murray once as they maintained their lead in the tournament for the women.

Murray’s women are 4-2 and Middle is 0-7.
Tops beat Vandy, lose to Bradley

Swimming

Powell said the meet was a positive one for Western. Before the meet, Powell said he didn't really think Western could beat Bradley, but afterwards he thought differently. "We looked like we had a shot," Powell said. "They (Western) were down after the meet, but they're going to bounce back. Our guys came out of the meet saying (they) don't have a chance in the Mid-west."

Lady Toppers break win record

The Toppers then went to their "mad dog" defense (a 1-2-2 zone press) and didn't allow Indiana State to get the ball past midway for a few minutes. Brown led Western in scoring with 24 points and in rebounding with 12. Thomas was next with 20 points.

Indiana State, 10-3, was led by Lori Dust's 18 points and by Peggy Jackson's 10 points.

CARSON-NEWMAN 53

Player FG-A FT-A Reb TP

Martindell 3-11 3-4 3 9 20

Smith 3-9 2-4 8 8 20

Kazee 0-5 6-7 2 6 18

Jones 1-5 0-0 5 5 10

Stegner 1-3 3-6 2 5 10

Mowezan 0-0 0-0 0 0 10

Brown 0-0 2-2 1 2 10

Total 14-51 25-37 32 53 .375 .676

WESTERN 95

Player FG-A FT-A Reb TP

Brown 9-11 3-4 3 9 20

Mason 12-17 0-0 4 24

Jones 9-12 0-1 8 12 4 14

Young 9-14 0-0 0 0 5 5

Thomas 7-10 2-2 2 14

Morton 2-12 2-0 0 0 3 2

Cislo 3-5 0-0 5 5 10

Jones 2-4 1-1 5 5 18

Parish 0-0 1-1 1 4 10

Taylor 1-1 2-2 1 4 18

Chasehit 1-1 0-0 0 0 2 10

Total 45-70 25-37 32 53 .625 .830

The Southern Gents

SPIRITS & FOOD TO SUIT YOUR MOOD

Monday

$1.00 NIGHT

50¢ SUDS

10:00-12:00 p.m.

Tuesday

NACHO NIGHT

$2.00

25¢ suds 9-10 p.m.

Wednesday

BIG RED NIGHT

9:00 to 10:00 p.m.

Potato Skins-$2.00

75¢ SUDS

Mushrooms $1.50

Thursday

HAPPY HOUR

10 p.m.-midnight

Friday

Saturday Brunch

11:00 a.m.-2:00 p.m.

Marina's

801 State Street

Placed in the national register of historic places

14 Herald 2-8-83

Record dips to 6-1

Go New Orleans style in Bowling Green!

Festivities:

- WKU Jazz Band
- Casino (Sponsored by SDX)
- Banner contest-PRIZES
- Rootbeer chugging contest-PRIZES
- Mardi Gras style food
- Arts & Crafts

Downing University Center
February 15, 1983
10 a.m.-?

sponsored by UCB

Good Luck!!

The Southern Gents
Otten stands out as rookie

By STEVE GIVAN

Sharon Otten has plenty going on for her — talent, size and determination.

But the transition from the state's Female Athlete of the Year to college freshman hasn't been easy.

Like most high school stars, she was the center of attention at Webster County High. And when she didn't crack the starting lineup at Western, she was naturally disappointed.

"At first, I wasn't real happy because in high school I could do just about whatever I wanted," Otten said. "But here the competition is so much better. You have to accept your role. Just adjusting to college was enough."

As the season progresses Otten has been getting more playing time. She is averaging 27 minutes and eight points a game. She has started seven games and if she isn't starting she's usually the first substitute off the bench.

Her best game was the 60-53 win at Dayton, when she started because of an injury to Deanne Depp. Otten scored 18 points and limited her counterpart at center, Deanna Burks, to 10 points and two rebounds below her average.

Otten said the biggest difference between playing in high school and college is the level of aggressiveness.

"It's so much more physical here," Otten said. "The style is also different. When I was younger I used to come to the Lady Topper camps and at that time I never thought I could play against these girls."

By the end of her junior year in high school she realized that a basketball scholarship wasn't out of the question.

Western won out, even though they already had two strong frontline players, Lillie Mason and Depp. "It was a factor that they were already here," Otten said. "But I just felt more comfortable here."

"My high school coach (Phil Gibson) told me that. I could go a lot of places and not really learn anything since I would step right into a starting position," Otten said. "But he also told me that I could come here and learn — and I have."

Coach Paul Sanderford is pleased with his standout freshman. "I think she's as good as any freshman I've seen this season," the first-year coach said. "She really works hard at becoming better."

Sanderford would like Otten to shoot more of the games, but says that her aggressiveness should improve with maturity.

"Her shooting and rebounding are her strengths," Sanderford said. "Inside 10 to 12 feet, she's really tough. I think she's only taking something like six shots a game. I wish she would shoot more."

Otten is shooting 58.3 percent from the field and 76.1 percent from the foul line, both good enough to put her in the top 10 in the Sun Belt Conference.

Otten said that she needed to gain about 20 pounds to be more effective on the basketball court, but that she would have to lose about 10 pounds to help her high jumping.

Otten has a chance to make the 1984 Olympic team as high jump. This summer she worked out at Colorado Springs Olympic Training Center and placed third out of 10 in a one-week camp.

If she makes that team she would have to drop out of school and train full time. "If she's got the chance, I want her to go," Sanderford said. "It would be nice to say I got to coach an Olympian."
Gas war drops prices below $1

Although national oil prices have declined, Browning and station owners don't expect low gas prices to continue. "It's short-lived," he said. "If this happened a long time ago, this wouldn't be any open stations in Bowling Green."

Hall, who buys gasoline from Gulf in Nashville, believes the price decrease is normal and expects them to go back up in March. "It happened last year," and it came back up," he said.

Browning said that until prices go up, his business will continue to suffer. "Now is the worst time for the gas business," he said. "We have one hell of a gas war in Bowling Green."

Although Hall sells regular gas at $1 per gallon, he said he's satisfied with business and believes that -- as an independent operator -- he has an advantage over some owners because he can set his prices as he chooses.

Another station owner thinks the competition has hurt his business because he has only full-service pumps and charges $1.14 per gallon.

But Lewis Walker, who owns his Shell station for 2½ years, is satisfied with that price because he is selling a major brand of gas; he believes that 99 cent gas may be lower quality. "If a customer could only realize he's hurting himself by using cheaper gas," he said.

Some of his customers have complained about the low-priced gas, he said. "But there are regular customers who tell me that their cars don't really run the best."

Browning said the nickel increase, approved by Congress in December, isn't a major issue. Although the money is supposed to be used for roads and bridges repairs, he said Congress is considering using it to build new roads. "We don't need new roads," Browning said. "We've got to take care of the ones we've got.

Browning said the oil companies didn't fight the tax increase because they lost their credibility after the 1973 gas shortage and really don't care about it.

"Oil companies have a weak lobby in Washington," he said. "They're not as powerful as they used to be."

The oil companies will pass the increase to the customers, he said.

McMahon said he wasn't sure whether the tax would affect business. "A tax is a tax -- nobody likes to see them," he said.

Besides the tax, the increased popularity of gasohol may also hurt local gas retailers, especially with a new plant in Franklin.

Browning said gasohol -- which won't be affected by the gas tax -- isn't better because it doesn't save energy. It takes a barrel of gas and 10 percent ethyl alcohol to make the fuel, he said. "There's no energy saved by saving alcohol and using it as fuel," he said.

But Robert Wade, president of the Kentucky Agricultural Energy Corporation in Franklin, said gasohol helps engine performance and actually conserves energy.

Solar energy makes the corn grow; the corn is turned into alcohol, which is added to petroleum, he said. The byproducts are also used.

Although the local gas war has decreased prices, they are expected to increase in March.

he said. The remaining grain is fed to cattle, and the carbon dioxide will be used by a factory that's being built next to Wade's plant. He said Aitco, a New Jersey plant, will turn the byproduct into chemicals for fire extinguishers and carbonation in soft drinks.

Carroll Hildreth, president of Hildreth Oil Company, a bulk supplier for Chevron, said gasohol helps engine performance by raising the octane.

Hildreth said Chevron won't use the name "gasohol," which was coined in the fuel's infancy. The plan to sell the fuel -- which they'll call ethanol -- beginning in March at a price similar to regular unleaded gasoline.

Although Browning and station owners believe gas prices will go back up soon, they are reluctant to make predictions. "One thing you don't do is predict the oil companies," Hall said.

What's happening

Today

The American Red Cross Bloodmobile will visit the Bowling Green Vocational Technical School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Student Council for Exceptional Children will have a workshop to counsel parents of disabled children from 9 to 9 p.m. in the College of Education Building.

The Public Administration Club will sponsor Gene Childers, director of the Government Services Center of Kentucky, who will speak on "The Future of Public Service Careers" at 6:30 p.m. in the university center, room 214.

Tomorrow

The Accounting Club will tour Citizens National Bank at 3 p.m. The group will leave from the Grise Hall lobby at 2:30 p.m.

Thursday

The Interfraternity Christian Fellowship will meet at 7 p.m. at the shumar center.

You are cordially invited to the Bride's House showing of their Spring line of wedding attire and accessories at their Fourth Annual Spring Bridal Fair.

This gala event will take place in conjunction with Snyder's on Fri. Feb. 11 at 7 p.m., Sat. Feb. 12 at 7 p.m. and Sun. Feb. 13 at 2 p.m.
in the Center Court of Greenwood Mall.